First baby for Capt. Herbert (Ted) King and Mrs. King of Trenton was also the first baby born in the Quinte district for 1970. The six pound, eight ounce girl checked into Trenton Memorial Hospital at 3.35 a.m. New Year's Day. Here Mrs. King cradles her New Year's gift.

Bombings Mark End Of New Year Truce

SAIGON (CP)—U.S. forces today opened the ninth year of undeclared war in Vietnam by resuming full bombing following a New Year's truce.

Big B-52 bombers early today pummelled areas in Tay Ninh province close to the Cambodian border about 61 miles southeast of Saigon, said an American spokesman who declined to state whether the raids started before or after the end of the Viet Cong's three-day ceasefire. The B-52s dropped 1,000 tons of bombs.

The spokesman said the guerrillas inflicted 111 attacks during the truce, 53 ceasefire violations.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Sunny but cold weather is expected to continue in the northern regions of Ontario. In the rest of the province, skies will be variable today but will be mostly cloudy Saturday. Some light snow also is expected.

Bonanza for Canada

Britain Eases Restrictions On Currency for Travellers

LONDON (CP) — Travel specialists agreed today that a bonanza in British holiday and business travel to Canada will spring from the removal of a light curb on spending by Britons in non-sterling countries.

The limit of £50 ($130) in foreign exchange a person a year has been in effect since 1966, when the government ordered it as a currency-conserving crisis measure, and had severely curtailed trips to such countries as Canada. Far more generous allowances were provided Thursday.

The Association of British Travel Agents said this would enable many to travel to Canada and the United States who had found it impossible in the last three years. Canadian spokesmen echoed the view.

George Powell, Canadian Travel Bureau representative here, said he was "extremely happy" with the easing of the restrictions.

He said Canadians had found some loopholes in the £50 limit, such as taking payment in sterling for meals aboard Canadian trains, but travel still had been cramped severely. An allowance of £15 had been permitted in addition to the foreign currency.

Powell noted that in the first eight months of last year the number of visitors to Canada from the United Kingdom had risen to 320,000 from the slumped figure of 86,000 in the same 1968 period. But this had been achieved by "slogging away."

To push travel to Canada this year, a new campaign was being planned to 42 cities in Britain and Europe. This would receive new impetus from Thursday's move.

An Air Canada spokesman said the airline welcomes the move and feels it will certainly result in increase transatlantic holiday and business traffic.

"We'll be able to cope with the expected increase," he said. "We'll keep an eye on th situation and adjust our schedles accordingly."

Canadian Pacific Steamships, the only operator of passenger liners between Canada and Britain, described the step as "a major boon.

"You can be sure a great many British tourists will once again be travelling with us and spending their holidays in Canada," an official said.

Nasser Pledges Renewed War

KHARTOUM, Sudan (Reuters) — Egyptian President Nasser returned home today after pledging to a cheering crowd at a rally here that he would throw 1,000,000 fighting Arabs into a "battle of liberation" against Israel.

Before leaving, Nasser and Sudanese leader Maj-Gen. Jaafar El Nimeiry conferred on a future plan of action following their recent conclusion of a tripartite alliance with Libya, informed sources said.

The Egyptian president's talks with Nimeiry also covered latest political and military developments in the Middle East, the sources said.

They said Nasser gave the Sudanese leader and members of his Revolutionary Command Council an account of the situation along the Suez canal, the scene of almost daily clashes between Egyptians and Israelis in the air and on the ground.

Nasser's visit here followed a trip both he and Nimeiry made to Libya after a recent Arab summit in Rabat failed to adopt a mobilization plan against Israel.

The three states formed an alliance envisaging co-ordination of their action in the military, political and economic fields.

Addressing a crowd of 60,000 persons during his 36-hour visit to the Sudanese capital Nasser said "the entire Arab nation is determined to launch the struggle until victory is achieved."

The president, brandishing a machine-gun presented him, said amid constant cheers and cries of "Nasser, Nasser" that "we have deployed 500,000 men on the front and we are proceeding to build an army of 1,000,000 men."

Nasser condemned the U.S. for supporting Israel but praised both Russia and France for their support.

Were it not for Soviet help, he said, Egypt would have been reduced to nothing.

"We are at the mercy of our enemies. We thank the Soviet Union for all its support, not only in the form of arms but also political support."

He said " we consider France our friend" because it supported the Arabs by demanding complete withdrawal of Israeli forces from Arab lands.

Admitting that Egypt faced hard times at home, Nasser told the rally: "The enemy has destroyed most of our houses in Suez and Israellia. But this does not make us despair."

Hundred Million For Arms

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — King Hassan of Morocco has given about $100,000,000 to back the Arab struggle against Israel and has also promised arms and equal aid, informed sources said here today.

Palestinian Arab sources said about $50,000,000 and some arms and equipment would go to Palestinian Arab commandos.

Diplomatic sources said the rest of Morocco's contribution is going to Egypt.

Hassan already has handed cheques to Egyptian President Nasser and Yasir Arafat, head of the Palestine Liberation Organization, the sources said.

Arafat received the Palestinian cheque when he called on the king at the end of the Arab summit conference in Rabat last week, the sources added.

Diplomatic sources said Egypt's share—about $50,000,000 in hard currency—would be withdrawn from Yugoslavia. It is the price of ships ordered by Nasser which have not yet been delivered.

Nasser expressed readiness to settle the question with Yugoslavia, the sources said.

Delivery of the ships would be postponed for at least a year during which Morocco would transfer another $50,000,000 to Yugoslavia.

Israeli Jets Hit Suez Area

From Reuters-AP

Israeli jets attacked Egyptian artillery positions, anti-aircraft batteries and military camps in the central sector of the Suez canal for an hour today, a military spokesman announced in Tel Aviv.

The spokesman said all Israeli planes returned safely from the raid, the latest in an almost daily series of Israeli air strikes during the last four months.

Meanwhile, Israeli military authorities today confirmed that they destroyed five houses on the occupied west bank of the River Jordan which were occupied by persons suspected of complicity in guerrilla activities.

On New Year's Day the fighting shifted from the Suez canal to Israel's borders with Jordan and Lebanon.

The northern development town of Kiryat Shmona came under rocket attack from Lebanon on Thursday, the Israeli military command said. And a watchman in the little village of Metulla, on the Lebanese border, was abducted by Arab commandos, a spokesman added.

U.S. Lawyer To Press Claim

SAIGON (Reuters)—An American lawyer engaged by a militant South Vietnamese Buddhist sect plans to press the U.S. government to pay $125,000,000 compensation for the victims of the alleged My Lai massacre.

"I'm pretty confident the government will pay it," lawyer Fred Narkin said here Thursday.

Narkin, who specializes in international law, has been appointed by South Vietnam's militant An Quang Pagoda Buddhist Church to obtain payment on behalf of survivors.

He said the sum—based on an estimate of 500 casualties—would indemnify destroyed homes, bereaved families and crippled survivors.

"The Buddhists are taking responsibility for this for purely spiritual reasons," Narkin said. "Most of the people in this country are Buddhists. Practically everyone at My Lai was and there were three monks among the victims."

The lawyer has been in South Vietnam for three weeks making an on-the-spot investigation of the alleged massacre.

The U.S. command said it has no knowledge of Narkin's activities.

It also declined comment on a letter made available by the An Quang Pagoda, headquarters of the militant Buddhists, from a former My Lai villager which put the casualty figure of the alleged massacre at almost 600—the highest estimate so far.

Cubans Harass Vessel

MIAMI (AP) — A Cuban boat apparently harassed a Liberian cargo ship off the Cuban coast Thursday night and ordered it into port at Havana, the U.S. Coast Guard said today. The ship later was allowed to continue.

Initially, the 230-foot cargo vessel Deep Freeze reported by radio that a Cuban patrol boat was firing on it.

The coast guard said that it believed, because of statements aboard the ship that the shooting report was false and "they were not in fact shot upon."

Peter Melo, vice-president of Trans-Carib Lines in Miami, the company which owns the ship, said he talked to the captain later by radio and no mention was made of any shooting. Melo added: "He may not have wanted to tell me."

The ship apparently moved in close to the Cuban coast to avoid the pull of the Gulf Stream.

"As far as I know, he was going close to the Cuban coast and they (Cubans aboard a patrol boat) decided it was in their territorial waters and apparently they motioned him in any out harbor then he was," Melo reported after his talk with the captain.

"He started out away from the coast. Then the same gunboat apparently came back and said 'Come to inside, we're taking you in.'"

Melo reported, however, the Deep Freeze was released off the coast without putting into Havana. He said the vessel was not boarded.

Cold or Not, Repairs Must Go On

Probably one of the coldest jobs in the whole Trent canal winter works program could be the repairs to the dam between Glenn Miller and Batawa.

Testifying to the cold are the cakes of ice floating in the spillways, which are soon carried down river by the fast-moving current.

Sleeping Away the New Year

Jeffery Allen, eight pound, two ounce son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Orr of Springbrook slept through his public appearance as Belleville General Hospital's first baby of the new year; The infant, born at 3.48 a.m. Thursday, is admired by his mother and unit supervisor Mrs. Dorothy Taylor.

Trenton Baby First in Area To Cry New Year Greeting

The Quinte district's first 1970 baby was a girl, born to Mrs. Herbert King in Trenton Memorial Hospital at 2.35 a.m. Thursday.

The New Year's baby checked in at 6 pounds, 8 ounces and was one of only two girls born Thursday to usher in the new decade.

Belleville General Hospital's first baby, a boy, was born to Mrs. Walter Orr of Springbrook at 3.40 a.m. He has been named Jeffery Allen and weighed 8 pounds 2 ounces.

Three babies were born New Year's Day at Belleville General Hospital — a boy, Stephen Edward Bedore of Stirling at 6.30 a.m. and a girl to Mrs. Robert Monsman of Belleville Thursday evening.

Second baby for Trenton Free Memorial Hospital in 1970 was a boy, born to Mrs. Kenneth Kargus at 11.38 a.m.

No babies were born New Year's Day at Prince Edward Memorial Hospital in Picton.

Bateman Granted QC

Douglas Hendricks Bateman, Belleville lawyer, received the title of Queen's Counsel in the New Year's honors list announced Wednesday by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

A native of Belleville, Mr. Bateman graduated from BCI and VS, the University of Toronto and Osgoode Hall.

All lawyers on the QC list in Ontario have served at least 12 years in the profession. No one called to the bar later than 1957 was included in this year's list of 128 new QCs.

Lawyers granted the title acquire certain rights of precedence. They may affix the letters QC after their name, they may wear a silk gown in court and practice inside the bar, while lawyers without the title wear cotton gowns and appear outside the bar in court.

Separate School Ratepayers Asked If Favor Extension

Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board will undertake a survey early in the new year of all Roman Catholic ratepayers in the two counties and the southern Nipissing district.

The purpose? To determine how many are in favor of extension of Roman Catholic schooling to include Grades 11, 12 and 13.

Trustee Mrs. Lillian O'Connor of Marmora is the one woman committee in charge of the opinion sampling. The two-county survey is the outcome of a smaller survey she undertook in ward 2 of the separate school system, which includes Marmora village and Marmora and Lake townships.

Mrs. O'Connor's survey was done for the county committee for the extension of Catholic high schools. Every county in Ontario has organized a similar committee. At present, government grants and local property taxes go to the support of separate school education from kindergarten to Grade 10. Roman Catholic schools which offer Grades 11, 12, 13, such as Nicholson Catholic College, are private institutions.

Ward 2 was chosen for the survey because it has no Catholic high school and is not likely to get one in the future.

Mrs. O'Connor's intent was to learn the attitude of all Roman Catholic property owners in the ward towards an extended system from which they could never benefit.

While the ballots are out for the survey, 85 per cent replied they were in favor of extension of separate schools, even though their children could never take advantage of the system. Likely trustees intend to bring the percentage in favor to an unofficial 92.

As a result, the county committee recommended that a similar survey be done over the entire county and the separate school board agreed to provide clerical help. Mrs. O'Connor will be in charge of setting up the opinion poll and tabulating the replies.

Pupils Use School For Film Showing

Pupils at Queen Victoria School in Belleville had their own New Year's celebration on the last day of 1969.

Through the co-operation of their principal, vice - principal and Hastings and School Association, they were treated to inexpensive holiday entertainment in the form of a movie, shown Wednesday morning.

About 200 children attended the non - profit screening at the school's assembly hall.

Although this is the first time a school has been used to provide entertainment for pupils during the Christmas holiday, it is expected the event will be repeated on an annual basis in the future.

A small admission fee was charged to cover the cost of the film rental.

Lifeline Not Busy

During the Christmas season, even problems and inner conflicts took a holiday.

And this information comes from those who are in the best possible position to know, counsellors manning the Lifeline telephones.

Lifeline, an international organization devoted to meeting the needs of those in distress via telephone, revealed that the number of calls received over Christmas week decreased drastically in comparison with the other 51 weeks.

"We find this decrease every year at this time", said a Lifeline spokesman.

"It would appear that people, on the whole, are busier at this time of the year, and have less time to worry about their long-term problems."

The spokesman did admit, however, that Lifeline received a few calls from people who were "very lonely" — particularly those spending their first Christmas away from home, in addition to the immediate distress problem calls.

This Becomes Wolf Year

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

The Christmas Exchange, which recently assisted hundreds of needy families in Belleville, could possibly be undergoing a number of changes to make its system more efficient, say organizers.

City officials, United Community Services director Lorne Ross and heads of various groups plan to meet early this month to discuss proposed changes and how they can be made workable next year.

The exchange, which gives assistance in the form of food hampers and cheques, made Christmas brighter for 398 families, including 1,100 children, this year.

Setting a goal of $4,000 as the amount needed to sufficiently assist those families, the exchange shot with enthusiastic and generous support of the citizens of Belleville, which helped the fund get well over the top.

Most of the problems that plague the exchange stem from a lack of communication between referral agencies and of course the problem of duplication of references", said Mrs. Ray Mandeville, co - director of the exchange.

Each family receiving assistance is registered with the Christmas Exchange by a referral agency such as a hospital care agency, school principal or church. This approach attempts to eliminate the possibility that two or three groups could be taking care of the same family at the same time.

"The crux of our problem, as far as duplication with referral agencies is concerned stems, I think, from the fact that often the agencies concerned do not know enough about the exact level of need of the families they are recommending", said Mrs. Mandeville.

"At our meeting in January later this month, we want to find ways whereby agencies will not only be more aware of this "level of need", but how they can work closer together to reduce the problem of duplication altogether".

She also cited the need for what she called "uniformity in giving".

This is another important problem we face, and one for which we must find some kind of solution. Through the medium of the exchange, many groups, schools, and even individuals "sponsor" families, offering assistance usually in the form of hampers", explained the co-director.

"And with this particular method, some families always receive more than others. This is simply because some groups allow more money for this project than others can, and as a result many families receive more — and this is not the idea behind the exchange".

"We must strive for uniformity in giving, and above all it must be fair," stressed Mrs. Mandeville.

Wke asked what the possible solution is to this particular problem was, the co-director pointed out this was the purpose of the meeting to be held in the near future.

Mrs. Mandeville touched on other areas to be discussed at the meeting — the need to do more for the pensioners in the city, many of whom often spend a cheerless Christmas day, as well as establishing a "liason" between Prince Edward County to define more clearly the area serviced by the Christmas Exchange.

Mrs. Mandeville a g a i n praised the people of Belleville for their complete support of the exchange, calling the project "a good co-operative effort.

Gift Exchange To Reorganize

The winter of 1969 and 1970 could be remembered as the wild of the wolf.

There have been a number of reports of a heavy concentration of the animals in the Quinte area.

A Belleville man, Bruce Mays, of 666 North Sidney Street, now has a wolf pelt as proof of the manslaughter of wolves in the Quinte area.

Mr. Mays spotted his trophy inhabit his home on a farm on the 2nd Concession of Sidney owned by Dawson Dowdall.

Brandishing a shotgun, Mr. Mays went out and shot the wild animal.

"I saw a wolf in the same area about a week ago," Mr. Mays told The Intelligencer. In both instances the wolves were travelling alone at the time they were sighted.

He said the beast weighed about 35 pounds and was a male, black wolf. Mr. Mays is a hunter with experience, skinned the animal and is hoping for bounty.

At present the department of lands and forests offers $20 for the killing of a wolf if the department approves the killing.

However there are rumors that the bounty may be raised to as much as $100 because of a new scarcity of a heavy wolf population in Ontario.

In Prince Edward County wolves have been sighted many times and one farmer killed two to protect his livestock.

Even in Algonquin Park, sanctuary for Ontario's wildlife, officials are showing concern about the number of wolves in the area.

Reports that the deer population is decreasing with the increase in the number of wolves in the area, the number of which has gone up by Frank Cheshire, a Tweed area wildlife official.

Mr. Cheshire told The Intelligencer that there were plenty of deer in the Tweed area — 30,000 at least. He said that deer were scarce in Algonquin Park because of over - browsing.

Brush wolves, he admitted, were on the increase, but timber wolves, the variety prone to attacking deer, were on the decrease.

He said that the complete elimination of the wolf would only increase the deer population by two per cent.

Mr. Cheshire was prompted to make his statements when a Hastings County Council meeting Dec. 10 discussed the wolf problem for half an hour and its effect on the deer population.

The discussion was touched off by Wollaston reeve Albert Vader with a resolution asking for the wolf bounty to be raised as a means of controlling them.

Youtheatre Seminar Jan. 23-25

Approximately 150 adults and young people from eastern Ontario will be making their ways to Belleville on the weekend of Jan. 23 for a conference on theatre.

According to Mrs. Doreen Kitcher, a conference organizer, the conference will begin Friday night and wind up Sunday afternoon, Jan. 25.

The conference, a result of Belleville's youtheatre stature in Ontario, will be concerned primarily with youtheatre and the young in theatrical arts.

On schedule are a series of lectures on Saturday and Sunday, geared primarily for young people.

Lectures and group discussions will centre on all aspects of theatre from backstage through to actual acting, as well as how to organize a youtheatre.

Attendance at the conference will be staggered as approximately 50 young people and 20 adults will take part Saturday, Jan. 24 and 50 newly-arrived young people on the Sunday.

All young people and guests will be billeted throughout the city for the weekend.

Conference activity will begin Friday, Jan. 23 with the Belleville Theatre Guild's Moira Riverbottom Blues Festival, a rock dance-concert featuring Whiskey Howl, Milkweed, Two Minute Hate and Bill the Lizard.

Saturday evening will see a reception from nine p.m. until one a.m. at the Hotel Quinte. An art exhibition at the Corby Public Library will also be part of the weekend's activities.

Carnival Progressing Favorably

Plans are in full swing for Belleville's Winter Carnival, Feb. 5 through Feb. 14.

First meeting of the new year for the carnival committee will be held Jan. 7 at 7.30 p.m. at the Emergency Measures Organization office on Dundas St. East. Anyone interested in assisting or participating in the event, first of its kind in the city, is invited to attend.

Heading the committee in charge is Harry Fast, assisted by Jack Ireland and the chairman in charge of each day's events. Art Newman is chairman for Friday, Feb. 6, Jack Tremblay for Saturday, Feb. 7 and Mrs. Joan Kells for Sunday, Feb. 8.

Kick-off for the carnival weekend will be the closing of a carnival queen the evening of Feb. 5. She will preside over all carnival events.

Friday will be jam - packed with events, including a barrel rolling contest, a torchlight parade through the city, a senior A hockey game at the arena with skating displays between periods and a carnival ball.

Saturday will be children's day at the rink at Zwick's Island, with free skating and sleigh rides in the afternoon and a bonfire in the evening. Saturday night will see a broomball game at the arena and a square dancing on skates display put on by the Quinte Twirlers.

Student participation in the carnival is in charge of Mike Barrett of Loyalist College and David Nelles of Moira Secondary School. They hope to sponsor a dance for student's Saturday night. A curling bonspiel is also tentatively scheduled for Saturday night.

Snowmobiles take over Sunday, Feb. 8 with events planned for the afternoon. The Oak Hills Ski Club is arranging a display in the afternoon.

Co-operating with the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in arranging the Winter Carnival is the Highlands of Hastings regional tourist council, and downtown and plaza merchants' associations.

The Lark Still Needs Few Actors

A final reading for parts in the Belleville Theatre Guild's Eastern Ontario Drama League play, The Lark, will be held Monday night at the Pinnacle Playhouse.

The play is almost fully cast, but a few more parts are needed. In particular, resident artistic director Roy Higgins is searching for six males of any age to play extra non-speaking roles as soldiers, monks and courtiers.

Honors for the Winners

Winners of the provincial singing championship sponsored by the Junior Farmers in Toronto recently were honored at a meeting of the Prince Edward County organization at Ameliasburg on Tuesday night. Arlene (centre) and Monica Alpaa and Dixie Motley, who comprise the popular vocal trio received County awards of merit and corsages in a special ceremony with retiring Ameliasburg Reeve George Cunningham (right) and Reeve Gordon Lloyd of Hillier acting officially for the occasion.

Vietnam

As the tragic conflict in Vietnam grinds on it is timely to look back on some of the observations and pronouncements of a few years ago. There was hope then that the war might be ended before too long, but as events have turned out that is far from being the case.

U.S. News and World Report, for example, as long ago as September 1965, headlined on its front cover the query, "Ride Turning in Vietnam?" Inside its pages it was talking like Stalin: almost overnight, there has been a big change in Asia's jungle war. Communists are up against a tough, aggressive U.S. military machine for the first time — and they are running for cover. . ."

The magazine went on to list fresh troop build-up, superior arms, air mobility, relentless air bombardment and massive aid to the South Vietnamese as aspects of a "mighty U.S. surge that is changing the war in Vietnam."

But even then, the publication had reservations, for it hazarded this comment: "The struggle is not over by a long shot, but after years of gloom, there are reasons for optimism."

The following February, in a discussion of U.S. strategy in Vietnam, it was saying: "There will be no retreat in Asia. The hope is that 300,000 American troops will be enough to insure that a military disaster can be avoided in South Vietnam. Battle strategy will be geared to keep American casualties low.

"The emphasis from this point forward will be on the economic, social and political side of the war — trying to stabilize the Vietnamese economy and reorganize and pacify the countryside, now largely under Viet Cong control."

Today, some four years and thousands of casualties later, with the Communists reported building up for fresh aggression, there is still conflict in Vietnam and no real prospect of an end to it all. With 1970 in its early stages, the hope at least must be that the beginning of a new decade will offer some solution to an intractable problem.

Away from It All

It is hard to beat Prime Minister Trudeau when it comes to getting away from it all.

Tahiti . . . a mountain ski lodge in British Columbia . . . cruising in the Mediterranean . . . and now British Honduras of all places. Mr. Trudeau is reported to have said on arrival at Belize, the capital, that he had heard so much about the country's offshore islands he had decided to see for himself. So there he is, with an entourage of eight, on Glovers Reef, a tiny coral island about 20 miles off the mainland town of Stann Creek.

Where do other Commonwealth leaders go on vacation? Prime Minister Wilson visits the Scilly Isles regularly. Off Land's End in Cornwall, this island group enjoys a mild climate and is known for its spring shipments of daffodils to the mainland and Europe.

We don't know where Mr. Wilson is spending the current recess (most likely he is at Chequers, the country home of British prime ministers), but Opposition Leader Edward Heath is skippering his ocean-going yacht in races off the Australian coast.

Very nice too. The political grind has its compensations and we suspect a good many other Parliament Hill personalities are also soaking up sun at this time.

Youthful LBJ

Ever see a man from whom the weight of great responsibilities has dropped, and he looks transformed, almost youthful by comparison with the individual who for five years carried the burden of office?

We refer, of course, to former U.S. President, Lyndon B. Johnson. On television last week, interviewed by Walter Cronkite, Mr. Johnson looked as if he had shed ten years at least; now he can go to bed after the ten o'clock news, as he put it, and know he does not have to run the risk of being awakened in the early hours and have to sweat out the moments of waiting for whatever message awaits him.

For a man moreover who also suffered a near-fatal heart attack in 1966, Mr. Johnson's cheerful ebullience would have been a tonic to many another in that category.

The former president revealed the inner doubts he had during his political career, doubts about his ability and suitability for high office. It was a posture which seems out of character with the essentially strong and confident man who until the Vietnam situation finally broke him, held the most powerful political office in the world.

It revealed a man who for all his experience and power also knew fear and doubt, yet never flinched.

Once Night Haunt of Ottawa Derelicts

Union Station Transformed Into 'Palace of Politics'

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Seldom, if ever in the last three Ottawa decades have $500,000 in federal funds been earmarked for a project to bring smiles and satisfaction to taxpayers as the spacebreaking ceremonies for the National Capital's Old Union Station.

From a dreary, dirty — $64 - bash, ugly institutionality, clouded in distorted shame, it has been turned into a $64 million showplace.

Where only yesterday in its fading years were railway passengers arriving and leaving platforms at all, it was a refuge for transients, drunks and derelicts, the old station has become a "people" place, headlined Montreal's La Presse, the taste, the penchant-less crept in to sleep on the high hard wooden benches.

The railway and city police, who frequented the depot around them until the passengers came through from the morning train arrivals.

Now look at this unofficial shelter for the homeless.

High-backed, plushy, deep-padded passenger benches have replaced the hardies, and on the 4th the prime minister and his provincial colleagues will with their slides ratified in their behind them.

Then the spot where not-so-long ago there operated a one-arm joint type coffee shop, there is now a restaurant-cocktail lounge for those in High Places.

It is not that old Union Station has not known its great days.

Churchill visited there, and in his last Ottawa days a sad pulling farewell at its long quiet Hawaii, stood on the rear platform of his train as it backed out into the station entrance when he came to Parliament early in the war to rouse the hearts and minds of Canadians with his assured "home stretch on, come what" and he did.

Kings and queens, presidents and prime ministers, all have entered the Capital through Union Station. And so, famously, Prime Minister Richard Bedford Bennett came home to Canada from British Columbia's mourning Parliament Hill for the last time in his life.

But there was more to Union than that many, as it was the scene and background of the days and nights of the dispossessed of the depression era that Ottawa's residents and visitors must remember most of the plain forgotten men.

Now it is a whole new and stylish day for the station.

The $500,000 opening raised more eyebrow than close and more of the high - vaulted corridors of the station, under ceiling out the stations up and down the line as The Imperial Limited, The Ocean Limited or The Trans-Canada puffed impatiently at their berths in the tracks — is a Premier Jean Beliveau-like smile.

In front and around him, there were his most provincial colleagues, the prime minister, Finance Minister Edgar Benson and Health and Welfare Minister John Munro, debating if, when and how many slides it had the taxpayers provide each with a guaranteed annual income.

It is the vaulted ceiling which is the architectural accomplishment of the station — it is also the reverberation in church, like acoustics that the premiers might have thought they could attach to their offices.

Now, they did look down from the vaulted ceiling, it is to be the restaurant of the elite of Ottawa.

The premiers should have plotted in a guaranteed annual income. What joy. What blessed relief from the pain of hunger and hangover.

Kidnap Note Decries 'Filth' in Publisher's Newspaper

LONDON (AP) — A letter attributed to Scotland Yard today alleged that Muriel McKay, missing wife of a British publishing tycoon, was being held prisoner because of her stories in her husband's newspaper.

It will let Mrs. McKay go if The News of the World and The Sunday Times announce that they will not corrupt our kiddies any more by printing all that FILTH," said a typically hand-printed letter delivered Thursday.

The letter said the two newspapers "pay the hundreds of thousands of pounds for so-good girls to write their stories."

"So why should they not pay one for not murdering Mrs. McKay?"

The letter was believed to be from a man.

Mrs. McKay, missing from home since Monday night, is the 55-year-old wife of Alec McKay, acting chief of the organization that prints the Sunday Mirror, the world and The Sun. The news of the world specializes in lurid sex stories. The Sun, taken over by the organization last month, is frequently accented with semi-nude photographs.

"I lost my 12-year-old daughter because she was influenced by the money these dirty girls get paid for telling everyone about," the letter claimed, saying the girl had left home to lead a prostitute life.

The daughter was diseased, and had not been heard from in three months, the letter alleged.

Mrs. McKay "is ill," it also claimed, lives on "mish-earned money."

The letter was handed by an unknown caller to the office of the Mornoy theatre, a suburban newspaper in North London.

The office in turn, the two police forces, the daily Mirror which I later to the McKay family was posted Tuesday. Relatives said the letter was by Mrs. McKay's handwriting. It indicated she was held captive and appealed for help.

A string of phantom phone calls plagued the Yard's hunt for the missing woman.

Someone somewhere dials the McKay home in Wimbledon, a south-west London suburb. A relative or a detective answers the phone. The caller just breathes heavily and then rings off.

David Dorn, Mrs. McKay's son-in-law as spokesman for the family, said: "She is at the other end in the hands of torturers. Sometimes we are given a few seconds, sometimes half a minute.

"We just repeat the same appeals on the phone in a rational way—asking the caller to say what they want."

The family calls on the service, if the thing wants for help in the case.

One woman is a London woman, Norah Blackwood. Her indication was that Mrs. McKay was being secretly housed on the Isle of Wight, a resort far from the district where Tuesday's letter was posted.

The Sunday Express Colonel, a 65-year-old Dutchman known as the Saar of Ulverdi. He is a specialist in contemporary perception, who is on record as having helped in missing-person cases in Holland, Australia and the United States.

Detectives working on the case were at first convinced that they faced an orthodox kidnapping for ransom. Now they are not so sure.

"Too many things fast won't add up," one Scotland Yard man said.

"One of those things is the absence of any concrete ransom demand and instructions for handing over the money. An earlier phone call for £1,000,000 ($2,600,000) ransom now has been written off as the work of a hoaxer.

Top Yard man spent six hours inside the McKay home Thursday night on early today checking Mrs. McKay's correspondence and all the places where she and her husband went most holidays during the last several years.

Early this morning calls detectives were still in the house. Dyer came to the door with tears streaming over his face. Reporters asked him if any development was likely.

"There might be. . . There might be," he said. "I just don't know."

Then a group of detectives drove off out of London. One of them said: "You may be hearing something soon."

No Epidemic This Year

U.S. Tries to Find Flu Mystery Answer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government disease detectives are trying to solve a year-old influenza mystery. What they and states essentially escape last winter's raging epidemic of Hong Kong flu?

If they could crack it, the secret could have worldwide significance.

They said on Thursday in revealing that for the first time the United States will be spared any nationwide epidemic of the flu winter, despite the dwindling influenza germs infecting wide areas of Europe.

Indeed, the medical experts said, it's unlikely there will be more than sporadic or limited outbreaks in the U.S., the kind that have occurred already in Alaska and Puerto Rico.

Recalling last winter's epidemic of Hong Kong flu that killed many thousands of Americans and killed at least 2,000, the experts said they are puzzled by question the reason.

Why were six states—Mississippi, Oklahoma, Texas, Wisconsin, Nebraska and Hawaii—virtually bypassed by the wave of Hong Kong virus, technically known as A-2-19687.

And will those same states have the same experience again this winter? Or, theoretically is susceptible to sporadic outbreaks from this year's resppearance of the same virus?

Most residents of the other 44 states now are temporarily immune to the wily microbe, although because they were infected last winter.

In contrast, last winter's epidemic struck relatively few people in Europe, thereby leaving thousands vulnerable to attack this winter.

It is possible the six bypassed states will essentially escape again this winter for the same still undetermined reason they did a year ago, said Dr. James O. Mason, deputy director of the U.S. public health service's communicable disease centre in Atlanta, Ga.

But he indicated, in a telephone interview, that it's perhaps more likely that "sporadic outbreaks" of flu will occur in those states as well as in individual communities throughout the country that were virtually untouched by last winter's widespread influenza.

"These are the things we are trying to understand about influenza," he said. "We really don't understand how or why it spreads in the fashion it does.'

The United States this winter, Mason said, there may also be "sporadic outbreaks" of another type of influenza—called Type B—in communities relatively untouched by this type last winter.

Type B, which mainly affects school-age children, is one of several forms of traditional influenza which creeped up periodically long before the so-called Asian and Hong Kong strains appeared.

U.S. Starts Drive To Reclaim Purity

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (Reuters) — President Nixon signed legislation Thursday to open the way toward cleaning polluted air and water.

He declared action was needed to halt the "environmental crisis."

If steps are not taken immediately, thickly-populated areas such as Los Angeles and New York would soon be unfit for human habitation, Nixon said.

The bill set up a Council on Environmental Quality, of equal rank to the existing Council of Economic Advisers, and requires the president to submit annually to Congress a report on moves to fight water and air pollution, ease traffic congestion and create more open living spaces.

The president said he is convinced "that the 1970s absolutely must be the years when America pays for the sins of the past by reclaiming the purity of its air, its waters, and our living environment."

The measure declares that United States' ports are to "create, maintain, and develop under which man and nature can exist in productive harmony and fulfil the social, economic and other requirements of present and future generations of Americans."

Peru Press Law Has Content Rules

LIMA (Reuters) — Peru's military government has issued a sweeping new press law which forbids publication of newspapers here by foreigners or Peruvians living outside the country.

The law, decreed Tuesday night by President Juan Velasco Alvarado, also laid down new rules for the content of newspapers and tough penalties for infringements.

The new measures were immediately attacked by the leading Lima newspaper El Comercio as an infringement on freedom of the press.

"We believe this law steps over the guarantees of press freedom and minimizes the role of the journalist," the paper said.

Velasco, whose 15-month-old leftist-nationalist government has introduced reforms in many other domestic sectors, denied that the law would affect press freedom.

"To a large extent, what we want is that there should be no insults, no lies, because no one has the right to insult anyone," he said.

"We also want the companies to be Peruvian. We take care of nationalism."

'Rice of Gods' Gives South Vietnam Big Crop

CAN THO (Reuters) — South Vietnam, harvesting what may be the war-torn country's best rice crop in five years, could become a potential rice exporter in about two years.

But world surpluses are so great that American and South Vietnamese government officials who persuaded Mekong Delta farmers to plant what farmers call "rice of the Gods" —the new "miracle" strains— now are encouraging them to switch to animal feeds and increase livestock numbers.

The projected 1969 rice harvest of more than 3,000,000 tons followed the introduction earlier in the year of two rice strains developed in the Philippines.

In the rich delta soils, these strains at least double the yield from each harvest and there are two and sometimes three harvests a year compared with one for traditional varieties. They have already boosted farm incomes, reduced the country's dependence on imports and stabilized prices paid by the consumer.

The most dramatic effect has been on farm incomes, say American agricultural advisers based in this central delta city.

"What better pacification can you have that people who are making money?" commented one adviser.

The new-rice program started in earnest last April and more than 250,000 acres already are producing the new strains.

A three-month training course educated 40,000 farmers in production techniques, the use of fertilizers, [illegible] and other production aspects.

This [illegible] its extensive network of French-built canals and dikes, has about 4,500,000 acres of land suitable for agriculture, and the planners are encouraging diversification into other crops.

Corn, sugar and sorghum are considered the most suitable and would boost animal feed supplies to delta farmers who produce most of South Vietnam's requirements in poultry, meat and eggs.

Viet Cong Multiplies Its Victims

SAIGON (Reuters) — The Viet Cong today claimed that during 1969 their armed forces killed 64,000 enemy soldiers, including 235,000 American and other allied troops.

In "special communique No. 17" broadcast by the clandestine radio of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government, the Viet Cong also said they had shot down 6,500 aircraft last year.

The claims were dismissed as "absurdly exaggerated propaganda" by American and South Vietnamese spokesmen.

The U.S. command says slightly more than 9,450 American troops were killed last year while the number of aircraft downed was 532.

South Vietnamese casualty figures for last year have not been announced yet but a military spokesman said the number of South Vietnamese troops killed in 1969 would be around 19,000.

Soviet Official Returns To Peking for Talks

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Vasily Kuznetsov, Soviet first deputy foreign minister and head of the Russian delegation to the Sino-Soviet border talks, arrived back in Peking today after three weeks in Moscow, the official Tass news agency reported.

Tsai Cheng-wen, deputy head of the Chinese delegation to the talks, was already the Peking officials who turned out to greet Kuznetsov's plane, Tass said. The talks are aimed at bringing peace to the troubled mutual border between the two Communist giants.

Kuznetsov headed an eight-man delegation during the first eight weeks of the talks in Peking, but flew back to Moscow Dec. 14 along with the deputy delegation leader, Maj.-Gen. Vadim Matrosov. Matrosov is chief of staff of Soviet border troops.

Tass did not explain the absence of Chio Kuan-hua, head of the Chinese negotiating team, from the party of officials who greeted Kuznetsov at the airport.

Chiao, Peking's man in charge of Eastern European affairs, and the Russian delegation when it first arrive in Peking Oct. 19, and also saw Kuznetsov off when he left to return to Moscow last month.

Observers in Moscow believe that this time Kuznetsov was carrying with him instructions which would show quickly whether the talks, expected to resume shortly, have any chance of success.

The official reason for their return home was to attend the year-end financial session of the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet legislature of which they are both members. That ended Dec. 19.

Most observers here believed that the official reason for their return was to give Kremlin leaders a first-hand account of the talks and atmosphere so far and to consult on tactics in the next round.

Salvage Try Abandoned

HONOLULU (AP) — The United States Navy is giving up attempts to salvage the explosive-packed and flaming munitions ship Badget State that was caused the cargo to break loose in the holds. Fourteen were rescued and the others presumed lost.

The navy's fleet tug Abnaki radioed Thursday that it moved to within two miles of the Badger State and saw yellow and orange flames coming from the aft section, a navy spokesman said.

Aboard the freighter are explosives equivalent to 2,000 tons of TNT.

"The navy won't do anything but watch it until the company decides what it wants to do," a navy official said. He said officials of the States Marine Lines, Inc., owner of the Badger State, have not announced what action they would take.

New Year's Orgy Of Football

NEW YORK (AP) — "An orgy of football," was what one broadcaster called the television goings-on New Year's Day.

Over the season the bowl games and television in combination have changed New Year's Day habits. It has become a sports-watchers marathon.

The leisurely sid custom of receiving friends, dispensing warming cheer or making holiday calls has just about disappeared.

Former Model Turns to A New Career In Photography

TORONTO (CP) — Elena Dixon has started an exciting new career by moving from in front of the camera to behind it.

The mother of four daughters aged four to eight and a former model, Mrs. Dixon took up fashion photography just to keep busy.

"It wasn't enough for me to sit around and get bored with housework and babies," she says. "Boredom is the housewife's worst enemy. Some housewives beat it by curling or playing golf. I prefer to work because it gives me a certain professional satisfaction."

Born in Russia, Mrs. Dixon emigrated with her parents to Melbourne, Australia, in 1947. She received her training as a model in Melbourne, and moved to Toronto in 1958.

She appeared in fashion shows and received television, catalogue and photography bookings here.

The 29-year-old blonde married Alan Dixon in 1963 and modelled mother and baby fashions after the birth of her first child. She modelled full-time between the births of her children and continued until a year ago.

Three years ago, she also became editor of Trim, a 56-page subscription magazine which is directed to the hairdressing industry and comes out six times a year.

"It was then that I started thinking about giving up modelling," she says. "I had worked in the fashion field so long that I wanted to stay in it and my mind turned to fashion photography.

"Most models realize eventually that the time will come when they have to bow out of modelling. There are certain things to be said about experience, but in the modelling profession the trend is toward youth.

"Besides, you can get over-exposed as a model although wigs and hairpieces help change one's image today. Modelling is much tougher today because the competition is keener."

Mrs. Dixon took up photography last May and taught herself the technical side of it. Her modelling experience helped her to make the transition.

"I have a technique that I developed from my modelling experience. One of the biggest complaints from models was that they didn't have enough time to relax.

"I call the first 10 pictures Getting To Know You and never direct or say too much to the model. If you start off by telling her to change the position of her arms or feet, she gets self-conscious."

Mrs. Dixon tries to create a certain mood.

"The feel of the shot is everything. It's important in the garment industry because the girl is supposed to sell the garment."

Mrs. Dixon employs a live-in housekeeper to help with the four children and with housework. She says it's tough, but she manages to run an organized home despite her hectic schedule.

Hoping for Ebbtide

Freighter Into A Houseboat Young Couple Plan to Convert

VANCOUVER (CP) — John Campbell hopes the tide is out when he carries his bride Pat across the threshold of their new home.

That way, he'll be toting his wife down the gangplank instead of up. The Campbells are the proud owners of a 133-foot-long fishpacker and former coastal freighter they hope to convert into a houseboat.

Mr. Campbell, a 23-year-old computer programmer, paid $5,500 for the wooden-hulled Mina C, still at structurally seaworthy as she was when launched 25 years ago.

The Mina C gives the Campbells more potential living space than houses on land costing 10 times as much. Mr. Campbell says converting the freighter into a floating home will take a long time, but it's entirely feasible.

He plans to replace the hatch covers with translucent glass skylights and turn one of the holds into a recreation area. There is room to install an inboard swimming pool.

The possibilities, he said are limitless. The two-storey deckhouse is habitable and the couple has created a kitchen and living area. Pat's 19-year-old brother Steven is making two cabins on the top deck into a bachelor pad.

The venerable old Mina C was built in Nova Scotia as a fleet auxiliary vessel and saw service briefly during the Second World War. After the war she operated off Newfoundland's Grand Banks under Norwegian ownership.

Later, she worked off the British Columbia coast and once delivered 300 tons of dynamite 7,000 miles to Australia.

The Mina C came into the Campbells' possession when its previous owners were unable to cover drydock repairs or honor a mortgage. They bought it July 27.

They have her moored in Burrard Inlet just a few minutes by car from downtown Vancouver, at a cost of $20 a month. It's doubtful if the Mina C will ever sail the seas under her own power again.

The Campbells have sold her propeller and the engines have been partially stripped down for scrap metal. Despite this, the young couple are overjoyed with the vessel.

Mr. Campbell said they could never have afforded a conventional house and would have had to move into an apartment.

"And what apartment owner allows you to make as much noise as you like at parties or hammer away at the odd bit of woodwork?" Mr. Campbell asked.

Baptismal Rites

DESERONTO — Baptismal rites for Allison Ellen Hearns, daughter of Corporal and Mrs. G. L. Hearns of Matheson were held Friday, Dec. 26 in St. Mark's Anglican Church. The godparents are Mrs. Robert Brant of Belleville, sister of Corporal Hearns, and William Ryan of Napanee, brother of Mrs. Hearns. Rev. John Neal officiated. Following the service a luncheon was held at the home of Mrs. Hearns' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Ryan.

ISRAELI FASHIONS — Pnina Shallon of Israel created these see-through dresses in lurex. At left is a long-waisted ball gown, next to a transparent shirt worn with a mini-skirt. Both creations are available in Canada.

Rodgers — Morlock

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Patrick Rodgers, who will reside in Toronto are pictured following their recent marriage in St. Philip Neri Church, Pennsburg, Pennsylvania, U.S.A. The bride is the former Linda Lee Morlock (formerly of Belleville) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy G. Morlock of Pennsburg. Miss Lois Morlock and Miss Marie Rodgers attended the bride. The bridegroom who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Rodgers of Shannonville was attended by Cpl. Michel McDuff (CAS) and Steven Rodgers.

WEDDING

PEARCE — JUDD

Leisha-Mary Judd of Lanark was married to William Allan Pearce, of Picton at 12 noon on Saturday, December 29, by the bride's father Rev. Charles Judd in her home church, St. Andrew's United at Lanark. Miss Raelene Rowe of Frankford was soloist at the ceremony and was accompanied by organist Miss Anne Beach, also of Frankford.

Given in marriage by her brother-in-law Kurt Kaiser of Creasy, the bride was attended by Anna Kaiser.

Attending the bridegroom was his brother-in-law, Allen Armstrong of Belleville, while the ushers were Orville Wilkes of Flourvisle and Chris Clarke of Smiths Falls.

A reception and dinner was served in the church hall with the women of the church catering. In an inimitable manner Scotty McGregor of Colborne was master of ceremonies.

In spite of the worst snow storm in years, guests attended from various points and following the reception were served coffee in the parsonage by the bride's mother.

Birthday Party Held to Honor 90 Year Old Stirling Resident

STIRLING — On Friday, December 26 Mrs. James Sharp of Stirling, RR 2, formerly of Mount Pleasant was honored on the occasion of her 90th birthday.

Over 100 relatives and friends attended the "at home" party in the afternoon. The party was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Donnan, RR 2, Stirling.

Mrs. Sharp has two daughters, Helen, Mrs. Melville Donnan and Lelia, Mrs. Hamilton Donnan.

The two sons-in-law greeted the guests as they arrived and the two daughters invited them to the attractive tea room. In charge of the serving were the granddaughters and wives of the grandsons.

A great grandson, Dennis Donnan, looked after the guest book.

Mrs. Sharp was formerly Maude Summers of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon.

Improvises Song From Weird Title

TORONTO (CP) — Being able to describe the nervous system of a one-celled jellyfish in song may not be one of Carol Robinson's most sought-after talents, but it did lead to success on American TV.

Miss Robinson, a native of Liverpool, England, and formerly of Toronto, was playing in Chicago with Second City, a satirical review, when her turn to improvise a song from a title provided by a member of the audience came up.

"Someone yelled out the title The Nerve Endings of the Amoeba," she says. "I almost fainted, but I came up with a song.

"No, mate, I don't remember a word of it, but they said it was good."

Her success with the Second City led her to contracts with three major United States TV shows. She will appear on the Andy Williams Show, Rowan and Martin's Laugh-In and a new show created by Arte Johnson, one of the stars of Laugh-In.

All this is a big change from playing a washboard around the Canadian coffee-house circuit.

Miss Robinson joined The Dirty Shames, a Toronto-based jug band, after performing as a solo singer and comic.

She still has fond memories of Toronto—she calls it "me one"—and playing her washboard in places such as Labrador City, where pink champagne flowed and "there were 400 miners to every woman."

Thompson — Sullivan

MR. AND MRS. LARRY THOMPSON

Calvary Temple, Belleville was the scene of the recent wedding of Carol Ethel Gwendolyn Sullivan, Belleville, daughter of the late Evelyn Sullivan, and Larry Douglas Thompson, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Thompson of Tweed. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. James MacKnight. Organist was Mrs. Doris Ogborne and soloist Miss Judy Thompson, sister of the bridegroom.

The bride, given in marriage by Albert Boisvert, wore a bridal gown of cut satin in the new sheath styling flowing out into a long cathedral train. The long sleeves extended into a tulip opening. The headpiece was of peau de soie in three clusters of flowers with seed pearl centres and attached to the headpiece was a four-tiered scalloped silk illusion veil.

Maid of honor was Miss Louise Rulhdall wearing a long sleeved A-line gown of fuschia velvet. In her hair she wore a matching velvet bow and she carried a bouquet of white carnations and ivy streamers.

Bridesmaids were Miss Barbara Wagner, and Miss Karen Smith, cousins of the bridegroom. They wore gowns identical to that of the maid of honor.

Flower girl was Miss Karen Boisvert, wearing a velvet A-line gown with long bell sleeves in white, offset with fuschia velvet sash and a large bow in the back. In her hair she wore a matching velvet bow. She carried a basket of fuschia and white carnations trimmed with fuschia bow and streamer.

Best man was Bruce Christopher, London, cousin of the bridegroom, and ushers were Perry Thompson, Tweed and Allen Smith of Belleville.

For the reception held at Tops Motor Hotel, the guests were greeted by Mrs. Carole Boisvert who wore a cocktail dress of silver metallic crochet, accented with scoop neck and wrist length sleeves. She wore a corsage of red roses gathered with silver bow. Her shoes and purse were black peau de soie.

The bridegroom's mother wore an avocado silk velvet dress trimmed in gold with wrist length sleeves and a matching hat with gold accessories. Her corsage of yellow talisman roses added the finishing touch.

For the wedding trip to points east the bride wore a coat - dress ensemble of richly embossed paisley brocade. The coat featured an Edwardian collar set in gold-brown. Her accessories were black patent leather and she wore a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

The couple will reside in Belleville.

Music Teacher Collects Many Exquisite Stones

TORONTO (CP) — When Margaret Galloway goes to her favorite lake, she is more likely to come back with a stone shaped like a penguin, rather than a suntan.

She is a collector of exquisite stones shaped by nature, scientifically known as concretions.

Her favorite spot is Margaret's Lake in the Abitibi area, about 600 miles north of Toronto.

From the clay banks and numerous little beaches, she collects nature-made objects that resemble angels, madonnas, penguins, cats, owls and other figures.

A music teacher with the Institute of Child Study, she polishes the sculptures and donates proceeds of their sale to the Indian-Eskimo Association of Canada.

Recently, a display of her collections at the Design '67 show here won a special award.

The smaller concretions are made into brooches and pendants, the larger ones into figurines.

She makes two expeditions a year to her lake to collect the concretions which she calls talismans.

Airline Stewardess Resents Public Abuse

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a stewardess for one of the leading commercial airlines and I'm thoroughly disgusted with the way my abusive passengers we are expected to tolerate [illegible] from the public.

Most stews are pleasant, well trained, and they try hard to be considerate. They are schooled in the comfort, safety and well being of the passengers. It burns me up when passengers ring their fingers and yell, "Hey" waitress, how about some more ice in this drink?" They treat us as if we were barmaids. I'd like to see the dolt at their local pub evacuate [illegible] passengers in 90 seconds.

What I resent most is the consistently false and highly publicized statement every stew is cooked up with the gold or the richest passenger in the first class section.

I am not suggesting that all stews are vestal virgins, but if we played around half as much as people say we do we wouldn't have enough strength to keep up a coke.

The flying public can have all the coffee or tea they want, but they can't have me — or any of the 30 stews I know personally. — SALLY.

DEAR SALLY: As a frequent traveler, I agree that most stews are efficient, hard-working and try hard to please the passengers. Your letter says something that needed to be said and I'm happy to print it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Why did you give the end of approval to the young bride-to-be who said, "If people can't say anything good about marriage, I wish they would keep their big mouths shut."

There are plenty of people with rotten marriages who work overtime to create a nice picture for outsiders. We lived next door to such a couple and you wouldn't believe what went on. The four of us went to Chicago for the weekend last fall and we had adjoining hotel rooms. About midnight they started to argue. I've never heard such filthy language in all my life. What's more, "Mr. Wonderful" knocked "Sweetie Pie" around the room until 3:30 a.m.

The next morning when we met for breakfast, "Sweetie Pie" was smiling bravely through a fat lip. One eye was swollen shut. "I fell over some luggage," she explained.

Such hypocrisy is disturbing. Furthermore, it is dangerous. When I hear saw this woman she was bragging to a neighbor about her lovely husband. The poor thing is skinny as a rat and on the verge of a nervous breakdown. And you call it "harsh?" How can you? — BARFSVILLE.

DEAR BARF: A woman whose husband rearranges her bridgework and tells the neighbors what a great guy she has, is sick. The gross disparity between reality and the picture she presents is the tip-off to her sickness. This is not loyalty. It is pathology.

— My beef is with wives who launder the family linen in public. The woman who runs down her husband to her relatives, the children, friends or neighbors is, in my opinion, disloyal. If you can find a better word, I'll buy it.

Girl Shakes in Class When Asked to Read

By DORIS CLARE

DORIS CLARE

Dear Doris: I read the letter from the girl who had a problem with reading: and every time she stood up to read in class she got very nervous and could barely get the words out.

I have that problem too. I used to think perhaps it was because there were boys in my classes. But once last year, in a health class (with just girls) I started to shake when the teacher started asking kids to read. My heart started beating so hard and fast. I even finally asked to leave the class before my turn.

Today we had to give oral book reports and I choked up every sentence. Tonight I felt so badly that I lay in my room crying. I feel like a baby because I know it won't help any. — Scared

Dear Scared: Did you know that the famous opera singer Lily Pons once admitted that she always had a terrible case of stage fright before a performance? It's nothing new.

Remember:

1. Nobody in the room is there to pull you apart. They are all sympathetic, realizing that their own turn is coming up soon.

2. A thorough knowledge of what you are about to read or to say will lessen that scared feeling.

3. Reading is all about being able to look up from your page to pronounce words clearly and to look around the room. Practice this at home before your mirror in your own bedroom will provide practice and cut down the jitters.

4. Good posture will bolster your nerves. Never, never give up until you've caught your breath. Be tall.

Lay it on the line that since you and your wife live busy lives, you need to know when a visitor is coming. Would you please call first?

If she still materializes at the supper table, you can hardly do less than share what you have; but you can announce that, you are both retiring early because of a busy day ahead.

Ask how she would like to help with the clean-up before she goes! And when she means light what's private, you can explain that you like it that way, and please let's not discuss it.

Courtesy, hospitality, yes — but brow-wrenched invasion, no!

Confidential to "Quarter Century": Something different in the way of silver? If you can put your hands on individual portraits of your parents, have them mounted in twin silver frames.

Little silver miniatures of the children or a silver-covered autograph book for messages from all their friends — either would be prized. Or you might take a look at their silhouettes; flatware for signs of age and replace what is bent or no longer shining.

Are you in doubt about the proper etiquette to use for your special occasion? Write Doris, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for her reply.

Points for Parents

Mother: "I get so tired of pressing your pants. You could wear them several times if you would just hang them up when you take them off. Look how wrinkled they are from lying on the floor all night."

Mother: "I'll show you how to press your pants. Then if you forgot to hang them up, you can give them a pressing before you wear them. I'm really too busy in the mornings to do it."

A teen-ager will learn to care for his clothing properly if he, not mother, suffers the consequences of neglect.

Society Holds Party at Newly Restored House

NAPANEE — The Allan Macpherson house came to life Monday, Dec. 29 when members of the Historical Society held a party in the newly restored building.

Wearing the Macpherson plaid, Pipe Major Kenneth McNevin, leader of the Napanee District Pipe Band, led the guests through the house, to the sound of the pipes. Following an evening of games and contests, a buffet supper was served.

The party was sponsored by the executive of the Society. The program was headed by president, Mrs. Norman Hutchison.

Reader Requests Repeat Recipe For Favorite Banana Cream Pie

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Last January you gave us a nice recipe for Banana Cream Pie that you served then, your nephew was visiting you. Would you mind repeating it in your column? So many of my friends and neighbors have borrowed or copied from my copy that it is worn out. Thank you from Mrs. R.

ANSWER: I will because I made it again on Sunday and it rates a repeat.

BANANA MERINGUE PIE

PASTRY:

1 cup unsifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
⅓ cup shortening
2 tbsps. butter
1½ tbsps. cold water

FILLING:

1-3 cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt
¼ cup flour
2 cups hot milk
3 medium eggs, yolks and whites separated
2 tbsps. butter
½ tsp. vanilla
2 ripe bananas, medium-sized
6 tbsps. sugar (for meringue).

To make pastry cut shortening and butter into flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in cold water, tossing with fork until dough can be pressed into a ball. Roll out on lightly floured board to fit 9" pie plate. Trim and flute to make high edge, prick with fork and bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 10 to 12 min. or until barely tinged with gold.

To make filling, in a heavy saucepan mix together dry the sugar, salt and flour. Stir in the milk and cook, stirring until thick then over low heat one or two min. longer. Remove from heat. In a small bowl beat egg yolks, stir in a little of the hot milk mixture; stir egg yolks into saucepan mixture and cook stirring until just boiling. Remove from heat at once and add butter and vanilla.

Beat the 3 egg whites with the 6 tbsps. sugar until very stiff. Slice one banana into baked pastry shell lining the slanting sides and none of the bottom. Pour half of the hot filling over. Slice over the remaining two bananas then cover with remaining filling. Cover with meringue, sealing it to edges. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 10 min. or until gold.

NOTE: Cool at room temperature and chill in refrigerator. Chilling this pie with meringue under as directed does no harm to the meringue.

Hospitals Said Under-staffed

TORONTO (CP) — Almost all Ontario's mental hospitals and most other provincial health and correctional institutions are understaffed because the Ontario government taves more about money than patients, the Ontario Civil Service Association has charged.

Harold Bowen, CSA general manager, in an interview called the government "niggardly" and said it is spreading staff too thinly to cope with emergencies.

He said staff complements are set too low and there is no pone ld fill in when a staff member leaves or becomes sick. The province's overtime bill is "staggering", he said.

He has no figures on how much overtime is paid, "but one reason we know it is fantastic is that it takes so long to come through—sometimes as much as four or five months."

The association represents 35,000 civil servants.

He said because staffing fails to allow for absences, workers have to be asked constantly to stay on after their shifts end.

Mr. Bowen said he wonders whether the government is concerned about "doing its best to see that patients get proper care and supervision."

He objected to a new policy that transfers many nurses from nursing to administrative jobs requiring no nursing experience and formerly done by non-medical supervisors.

The province has 16 hospitals for mentally ill and nine hospitals and homes for mentally retarded as well as diagnostic and treatment centres, laboratories, training schools and reformatories.

Mr. Bowen said shortages have existed for some time and are not due to government attempts to trim staff because of inflation.

Try to Keep Up With Bafflegab

OTTAWA (CP) — Some of the latest parliamentary and bureaucratic verbal obscurity —or bafflegab—from your national capital:

Prime Minister Trudeau's new phrase for a cabinet shuffle or shift among senior officials: the politics of mobility.

Mr. Trudeau has also called an agenda a "discussion checklist."

Ray Perrault, Liberal MP for Burnaby-Seymour: "Let's establish a two-way dialogue;" and "We can't have an introverted outlook."

Audio-surveillance is eavesdropping.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba at the constitutional conference here: "An option of choice."

Defence Minister Leo Cadieux described the recent reduction in the armed forces reserves as "restructuring."

"Disequilibriate" is a word used by economists. It means to rock the boat.

Welfare Minister John Munro apparently started it but all pensions now are referred to as "income maintenance programs."

A poor province is a "have-less" province.

A "disincentive" is a tax.

"Detrafficization" means closing a street to cars.

A "telecon" is a telephone conversation. "Phonation" is not used, however.

To be "redisadvantaged" means to lose another job.

Canadiana, recalling manufacturers to fix defects are being "campaigned."

Hansard, the record of Commons debate, used as a heading on an exchange on inflation: "Universal Principle of Escalation."

Finally, a joke from Hansard:

Steve Paproski, Conservative MP for Edmonton Centre:

"In view of the intensified Arctic research by the Soviet and American governments through the use of drift stations, will the minister take an early opportunity to inform the House what Canada is doing in this area?"

An honorable member: "Drifting."

Here's One Way To Kill Hangover

HAMILTON (CP) — On to the ice charged the Valiant 200.

There, up to his shoulders in a hole in the ice of Lake Ontario, a man in a red swimsuit and green yachting cap splashed around, laughing and shouting for them to come in.

Only 19 members of Hamilton's Polar Bear Club accepted the offer. The rest, wrapped in duffle coats, scarfs and mittens, just watched.

Florence Arnold, mother of 12 and the only woman among the 10, said after her dip:

"I'm disappointed. I wanted to swim, not sit in a little hole and freeze. Last year, they cut a great big hole and we all jumped in."

It was the fourth New Year's Day dip. Some members of the club have been doing it for almost 20 years.

All admitted it was cold on the ice and colder in the water. None knew for sure why they do it. But some tried to explain.

"It sure kills a hang-over," offered one shivering participant.

"Everyboy else is doing it," volunteered another.

The club meets only once a year, members explained.

"We get together New Year's Eve to celebrate and then carry on from there."

After about a half hour, most of the club members headed for their warm cars and home, many at the urging of their children.

"I never felt better in my life," said Dave Buldrook, 31, of Wellandport, Ont., still in his necktie.

Nobody seemed able to explain the necktie.

Training Cuts Total On Relief

TORONTO (CP) — More than 5,000 persons have moved off the welfare rolls and into jobs during 1969 as a result of the Ontario labor department's industrial training program, Labor Minister Dalton Bales said Wednesday.

In a year-end review, Mr. Bales said 5,500 persons have graduated from short-term programs this year—nearly double the number of 1968 graduates.

Also, 18,000 apprentices are being trained, 1,000 more than last year, he said in a news release.

The department revised safety regulations for engineers, construction workers and persons working under pressure, Mr. Bales said.

For those who are injured, the minimums for compensation were increased.

Temporarily disabled workers will receive a minimum of $40 weekly, if they earn more than $40 weekly, instead of $30. Compensation for permanently disabled workers will go to $175 a month from $150.

Accident Toll On Roads Cut

By THE CANADIAN PRES

The New Year's baby arrived on schedule, when 1970 was just one second old. Many adults drank a lot and a few jumped into Icy Lake Ontario.

Like every previous New Year, these was tragedy—including the deaths of twin four-year-old boys and an infant girl when fire swept a home in Hamilton.

Across the country, at least 26 Canadians died accidentally—16 in traffic, nine in fires and one by drowning.

But the highway toll might have been higher but for the apparent success of the new compulsory breath test as a deterrent to drinking drivers. Police generally recorded a quiet New Year's Eve and relatively few arrests for drunken driving.

The Northwest Territories and Manitoba rang in the New Year with a special fervor, kicking off their respective centennial years.

Winnipeg stores switched on their lights at midnight to follow the centennial theme of "Light up and sing"—but the North Hotel in Flankler Sask. At Yellowknife, $1,000 worth of fireworks went up in a single barge display when a rocket misfired and wrecked plans for a more orderly ignition.

Most Canadians erased the effects of over-indulgence in alcohol with black coffee and breakfast in the hotels and nightclubs where they had celebrated the night before. Many slept off the effects of their revelry in hotel rooms included in the price of their party tickets as part of a road safety campaign.

One Montreal organization provided 315 drivers who voluntarily shuttled about 500 persons from various scenes of New Year's merry-making.

Ten members of the Polar Bear Club at Hamilton followed their annual New Year's Day "meeting" with a daytime dip through a three-foot-square hole cut in the ice of Lake Ontario.

A hardy band at Whitehorse braved 30 degrees down the Yukon River for a half mile, taking advantage of temperatures in the 30s which cleared the usually ice-bound water.

The traditional levees and receptions were held by public officials Thursday and Toronto Mayor William Dennison's was enlivened by the gate-crashing antics of a song-and-ming group protesting plans for extension of an expressway in the city.

Generally cool weather prevailed and there was nothing to match the blizzard which hit Quebec over the Christmas holiday. Vancouver, however, was visited by fog which held up at least two airline flights into the city.

The 6,000-ton freighter Beaverpine, owned by Canadian Pacific Steamships, docked at Montreal at 12:19 a.m. Thursday to claim the annual award for the first ship of the season to reach that port.

PM Says Canada's Choice Big

OTTAWA (CP) — As Canada enters the 1970s, says Prime Minister Trudeau, our nation country has a wider range of possibilities before it, a large number of choices open to it, and a smaller number of restrictions imposed on it."

In a New Year's message, the prime minister says Canadians must resolve to devote energy, imagination, intelligence and compassion to making the best use of the country's abundant resources.

"In part because of accidents of history or geography, we enjoy good relations with almost all members of the international community. We are not saddled with natural disasters at home or costly wars abroad.

"In comparison with the peoples of many other parts of the world, we are healthy and well nourished. We certainly do not suffer from overpopulation or a shortage of living space. By world standards our people are highly trained and educated, and we have access to great natural wealth.

"We take for granted our traditional freedoms of expression and movement, which many less fortunate peoples have never enjoyed.

"Although we know that there are inequalities of opportunity and wealth within our society which we must remedy, there is no segment of our population which is condemned to silent, hopeless oppression."

There are enormous regions of Canada which are not easy to know about, he said, because their history is not filled with battles and bloodshed.

"The real heroes have been those unknown pioneers who, with indomitable courage and persistence, have overcome great obstacles of climate and distance, to open up promising new territories."

The Old Year Now New One

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

The sands of time are forever in motion and once again an old year has become a new one.

And so it was with mixed emotions — the sadness of remembrance and the optimism of the future — that Belleville citizens celebrated the New Year's Eve transition from 1969 to 1970.

With gala affairs, private parties and quiet get - togethers, young and old alike sang of 1969 with Auld Lang Syne.

Belleville City Police volunteered to look the other way as some citizens left the cars overnight (a result of celebration) and were not ticketed for parking past the two a.m. curfew.

Various organizations throughout the city celebrated the New Year with parties and dances.

The officers and guests of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment held a formal ball Wednesday night and Thursday morning with dancing from 10 p.m. until two a.m.

The Jim Cathcart Quartet provided the music for the occasion as officers decked out in military formal dress danced wives and friends around the officers' mess.

The Belleville Club celebrated the advent of 1970 with a New Year's Day reception at the club from two p.m. until five p.m. A three-piece combo presented background music for the occasion.

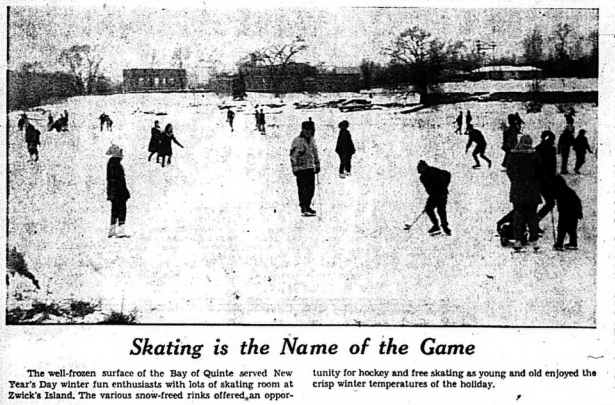
The Belleville Curling Club and Trenton Air Base also met the celebration with New Year's events.

Even Belleville's young people had an opportunity to musically bring in the seventies as a rock dance featuring Two Minute Hate, and the Sands of Time was held at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

Belleville's wintery atmosphere and recreation facilities formed the outlet for expended New Year's Day activity.

Throughout the Quinte area residents took the opportunity of crisp, but not too cold temperatures to participate in winter fun out doors.

Tobogganing, snowmobiling, skating, hockey and skiing were the order of the day as people crammed such outdoor parks as Zwick's Island.



The well-frozen Bay of Quinte was the scene of hockey games and free skating as young and old joined for fun on ice.

Newly - received toboggans, snow saucers and sleighs slid down the hills at the island and those with a motorized taste utilized the acreage for snowmobile activity.

Whalen's winter resort in Prince Edward County also had its share of winter recreationists.

New Year Danced in at Armory

Officers and guests of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment took advantage of the music supplied by the Jim Cathcart Quartet to get in some dancing at a New Year's Eve formal ball in the officers' mess.

Skating is the Name of the Game

The well-frozen surface of the Bay of Quinte served New Year's Day winter fun enthusiasts with lots of skating room at Zwick's Island. The various snow-freed rinks offered an opportunity for hockey and free skating as young and old enjoyed the crisp winter temperatures of the holiday.

Hazards and Fun

These three young Belleville tobogganists discovered that an obstruction in the path of your snow craft can result in quite a pile up. However there were no injuries. Instead laughter was the reaction.

Skaters Busy

Winter is Joy to Many

Canadians always complain about winter, but underneath all that grumbling, they seem to enjoy it.

If they aren't skiing or ice fishing or snowmobiling, they are skating.

According to Recreation commission officials, Bellevillians are utilizing to the full all the ice surface available in the city, but particularly the one offered through membership in the Quinte Skating Club.

The rink, at the corner of Queen and Dufferin Ave. has been operational since Dec. 24 with at least 100 persons making use of the ice surface New Year's Day.

Skating is permitted through a paid membership basis starting at the junior, 12 years and under level to just casual. Already, revenue from memberships has reached the $400 mark, and is still climbing.

The rink was opened two weeks earlier than last year, due to "a superlative effort of the staff", said recreation director Lorne Williams.

The recreation department began operating facilities as part of their program in late December, 1968 taking over from the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club. When the winter projects are completed, the department operates the tennis program as well.

The program is approved by the recreation arena committee, and therefore attempts to fill any gaps not filled by the free skating time allowed at the arena or any of the other city rinks.

"So far, there appears to be an improvement over last year as far as membership and response is concerned," said Mr. Williams, "although it is still a bit early to tell definitely."

Another Five Cold Days

The cool, crisp weather at present in the Quinte area will probably remain for another five days.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton said this morning that the five - day outlook included below normal temperatures This morning's low in the Belleville area was recorded at one degree above zero,

However, in the more northern regions of Hastings County lows were recorded in the below zero range. Tweed, for example, registered a nine below zero at 7.30 a.m. this morning.

The five - day high temperature will settle around the 20 degrees above zero and the temperature trend will remain the same.

The normal high and low temperature readings for the Quinte area at this time of year are 27 degrees and 11 degrees.

Precipitation will also be kept at a minimum reading. For all five days light snow or snow flurries are predicted.

Loud and Clear

Belleville's Young Took Their New Year's on the Rocks

Approximately 500 Belleville area young people ushered in 1970 Wednesday night to the strains of rock music at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

The event, the third in a series of four run by local promoter, Ken Williams, featured Two Minute Hate and The Sands of Time.

It was the first time that a huge rock event had been part of the New Year's Eve scene when it is usually a time for the adult population to howl.

Mr. Williams has one more dance planned for Saturday night, again at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

But, if last night's rock event was a celebration of the coming of 1970, it did not appear so. It was only a few young people that appeared melancholy when Two Minute Hate played Auld Lang Syne. To most it was just another holiday rock dance.

The music was loud and variable and both bands compared well with the unfavorable acoustics that are part of the identity of the Ben Bleecker Auditorium.

The Sands of Time with three years of rock music under their Belleville belts were loud, powerful and competent. But, in their own words, the band is searching for a diversified show and the group's change of style from song to song was apparent.

"The Sands" are working towards control of their music, a task that will mean work with the different types of material they have on hand at present.

Noticeably new in their sets were heavy tunes by Led Zeppelin such as Whole Lotta Love and Communication Breakdown.

The band now consists of Tim Campbell, lead guitar, Eric Baragar, rhythm guitar, David Conley, organ, Mike Goettler, bass guitar, and Steve Smith, drums. David Conley and Steve Smith are the newest members of the group.

The band outlined its performing aspirations following the dance.

"We're trying to get in some variety in three sets," Tim Campbell explained. "One commercial, one heavy, and one that's a whole different thing."

He said that original material would be scattered about the entire show.

The band is trying to "figure out what our material really is" at present. "We're trying to get our own stuff together," Tim said. "We'll take on influences from every style of music."

As far as recording is concerned, there is nothing imminent, but the group is trying to get recording personalities to listen to its original music.

In the three years of the Sands of Time's existence their music has changed style a number of times. The group began in the rhythm and blues field, playing music by the Rolling Stones, the Animals and the Spencer Davis Group.

From there it progressed to vocally-orientated music featuring three, four and five part harmonies. Now the transition is towards heavier songs — blues and hard rock — while retaining the harmonies.

Two Minute Hate — Chris McCann, drummer, of Kingston; Bill Joslin, bass and lead guitar, of Kingston; and John Shand, bass and lead guitar, of Ottawa — also offered a varied program for the Belleville audience.

Primarily, however, the band played "heavy" numbers in the tradition of Led Zeppelin and the Jeff Beck Group.

A highlight of their show was an original number comprised of a lead guitar, drum and harmonica solo.

John Shand, is a new face in the group having joined in September, a month after Two Minute Hate's other Belleville appearance last August. John is from Ottawa and has played with a number of other groups such as Game.

A varied show, inspired not by working on a particular style, but by "playing together to learn music that we like to do" is the outstanding characteristic of this group.

John explained that he and his fellow bandsmen are not "dogmatic" about certain styles of music. "If it's good we like it no matter what style it is," said John.

"We like classical music music too," Chris added. "We don't want to be put in a certain bag."

"Eventually we'll be trying to be as original as possible," added Bill. "The only way you can possibly do it is evolution," Chris summerized.

The band has recently cut a demonstration tape that is being offered to recording companies in hope of a contract.

Two Minute Hate will be making another appearance in Belleville on Jan. 23 when it joins Whiskey Howl, Milkwood and Bill the Lizard for the Moira Riverbottom Blues Festival at the Belleville Armories.

Police Find The Holidays No Time To Use Breathalyzer

Belleville area police forces are looking back on the New Year's holiday with some feelings of contentment and relief.

Accidents and impaired drivers were kept at an absolute minimum over the holiday.

Belleville City Police reported that there were no arrests for impaired driving whatsoever. The breathalyzer was an unused piece of equipment at the city police station.

Police chief Douglas Crubie also reported that there were very few accidents and the ones that did occur were minor.

However three people received slight injuries in a three-car accident Thursday afternoon at 2.05 p.m. on the corner of Victoria and Church Streets.

Injured were Mr. Robert Gibson of 58 Crestview Avenue, David Burkitt of Plainfield, and Charles Churchill, 18, of Foxboro.

According to police the vehicles driven by Robert Stewart Gibson, 26, and David Burkitt, 19, came into collision at the intersection. A rebounding collision with the car driven by Charles Churchill ensued.

All injuries were not serious and included minor bruises and cuts. Damages were extensive and estimated at approximately $1,500.

Belleville OPP reported three minor accidents over the holiday all of which were spared of personal injuries.

Drinking drivers were also kept at an absolute mini mum and the breathalyzer was in very limited use.

Swedes Ban Pro Fights

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Sweden, which gave Ingemar Johansson to the world, will see no more professional fights.

Professional boxing Thursday became illegal in the country which produced one world heavyweight boxing champion (Johansson) and three European champions.

The sport has been banne by the legislature at the instigation of former justice minister Herman Kling, who for years led a campaign against professional boxing, charging that it wes immoral and damaging to hazerd health.

The last pro boxing matches in Sweden were held in Goteborg Tuesday night. At ringside was Johansson and 18 other Swedish veteran fighters.

Professional boxing began in Sweden in 1882 when Jim Smith of Australia knocked out Kristian Holstrup of Denmark at the Malmoe Fairground.

Missouri Misery

Upset Notre Dame

Texas Cotton Bowl Win Could Mean Top Billing

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Texas and Penn State, unable to settle their differences on the football field, relaxed today in the wake of New Year's Day bowl triumphs and sat back to await the outcome of this weekend's Poll Bowl, with the United States college championship at stake.

But with sports writers and broadcasters across the country set to vote in the final Associated Press poll, there seemed little doubt that (1) Texas virtually sewed up the No. 1 ranking with a come-from-behind 21-17 victory over ninth-ranked Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl and (2) runner-up Penn State blew its chance for the top spot when it chose a return trip to the Orange Bowl, where it intercepted a record seven passes and beat fourth-ranked Missouri 10-3.

The rest of the rankings, though, are likely to undergo some shuffling as a result of 12th-ranked Mississippi's 27-22 triumph over No. 3, Arkansas, in the Sugar Bowl; fifth-rated Southern California's 10-3 decision over seventh-ranked Michigan in the Rose Bowl, and Houston's 36-7 mauling of 12th-ranked Auburn in Wednesday night's Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl. Houston had been tied for 17th.

But the battle of words over who's No. 1, which has raged ever since Michigan ended Ohio State's reign on Nov. 22, showed no sign of abating.

President Richard Nixon, who presented Texas with a No. 1 plaque after the 15-14 regular season finals over Arkansas, phoned coach Darrell Royal at the Cotton Bowl and told the Longhorns: "You played the champions."

"I'm glad we didn't embarrass you because you picked us as No. 1," Royal said.

"Even if you had lost it would not have embarrassed me," the president replied.

Aware of Texas' triumph, Penn State went out under the Orange Bowl lights and its brutal defence destroyed Missouri's Big Eight champs with the seven interceptions and two fumble recoveries.

"I don't know if we're No. 1," said coach Joe Paterno, "but we have as much right as anybody else to be No. 1.

"I can't let Richard Nixon say someone else is No. 1. I'd be a lousy coach if I did."

Penn State has the longest unbeaten streak in the U.S.—22 victories and 20 non-losing games.

Notre Dame, making its first bowl appearance in 45 years, had to be satisfied with a cheque for an estimated $240,000.

Penn State got its 10 points within a space of 21 seconds late in the first quarter and then settled down to destroying every Missouri threat, except for a drive that ended with Henry Brown's 33-yard field goal shortly before halftime.

Mike Reitz got Penn State started with a 29-yard field goal early on the first play after the ensuing kickof tackle Mike Reid jolted Joe Moore loose from the ball and Mike Smith recovered on the Missouri 28. Chuck Burkhart, who threw only one touchdown pass all season, promptly hit Lydell Mitchell at the 15 and the elusive halfback escaped one grabbing defender, outfaked another and went in to score.

Browns Have More to Atone for Than Other Bowl Hopefuls

By MIKE BRYSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth will add a little extra spice to a pair of United States pro football games that will determine the teams that will go to the Super Bowl.

Both Cleveland Browns and Kansas City Chiefs will have revenge motivations—along with the incentive of making it to U.S. pro football's championship showdown—going for them in Sunday's titanic clashes.

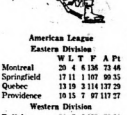
The Browns, who take on Minnesota Vikings in the National Football League title, will be trying to atone for a 51-3 shellacking inflicted on them by the Vikings during the regular season.

The Chiefs, meanwhile, will be hoping to cure a long jinx against Oakland Raiders in the American Football League's title match on the West Coast.

The Raiders have won seven of their last eight meetings with Kansas City—including the playoff for the Western title a year ago and 27-24 and 10-6 victories this season when Oakland again took the West championship.

The NFL finale matches a pair of teams endowed with brute strength. But since each was successful in stopping the rush this season, the outcome could rest on the passing of the Vikings' sensational Joe Kapp, formerly of British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League, and Cleveland's Bill Nelsen.

However, the Vikings will test the Brown line with the strong running of Dave Osborn, Bill Brown and Oscar Reid, while the Browns will counter with dangerous Leroy Kelly and Mc-Scott, formerly of Ottawa Rough Riders.



Cleveland's big chore will be not only to stop the unpredictable Kapp, but to also provide adequate protection for Nelsen —something the Browns didn't do in the previous meeting with Minnesota. The Vikings dumped Nelsen twice and intercepted three of his passes during the regular-season rout.

Kapp, whose philosophy is "if the goal line is close, I'll go get it," augments his passing with excellent running. He carried 22 times for 104 yards this season, and scored a touchdown in last week's 23-20 victory over Los Angeles Rams for the Western Conference title.

Despite that earlier victory, Viking coach Bud Grant is taking a cautious attitude toward Sunday's battle.

"If you're going to beat them," said Grant, former coach of the CFL Winnipeg Blue Bombers, "you have to beat them with execution.

Visitors Win 4-0

Now Nats Know How Czechs Got Name!

TORONTO (CP) — Punch Imlach can still call a spade a spade even though his guns aren't likely to win him one of television's Emmy Awards.

The former manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs, working as a television commentator during an exhibition hockey game Thursday night, said:

"Now I know why they call them Czechs."

Although Imlach knows the attempt at humor was weak it was close man-to-man checking and fantastic puck control that earned the Czechoslovakian national team a 4-0 shutout over the Canadian Nationals at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The small crowd of 7,109 saw the touring Czechs win their second game in three starts against the Nationals by checking the Canadians into their own end and scoring all four goals in the first two periods.

Then, content with the lead, the visitors went into a defensive shell and, although Canada managed several around-the-goal chances, goaltender Vladimir Dzurilla protected his shutout.

Vaclav Nedomansky, the Czech captain and star centre, led the winners with two goals and an assist. He scored his second goal with a 50-foot slap shot that beat Canadian netminder Ken Dryden.

Left wingers Ivan Klinka and Julius Haas got the other goals and Klinka was taken to hospital with an injured left arm after falling near the boards late in the third period. He was released after x-rays revealed a small flake on one of the small bones in the elbow.

The Czechs outshot the Canadians 30-21.

The exhibition series continues tonight in London and concludes in Ottawa Sunday.

The teams traded 3-2 victories earlier in the week at Winnipeg.

Except for Nedomansky's 30-foot, dazzler, no other three goals were the result of superb puck control by the Czechs.

Klinka scored the first goal at 7:37 of the first period, ending off a three-way passing play by hosting Dryden with a short flip shot from an almost impossible angle.

Centre Jiri Kochpa slipped into the Canadian zone, dropped a back pass to defenceman Vladimir Martinec who fed it ahead to Klinka that put him alone in front of Dryden.

Nedomansky, alone on the doorstep at 14:07 of the first period, slashed Stanislav Pryl's passout past Dryden, scored midway through the second and set up Haas for the final goal less than a minute later.

Taking advantage of lacklustre clearing by the Canadians Nedomansky grabbed a loose puck in the Canadian end, worked his way behind the goal and passed out to Haas, who beat Dryden with a 20-foot shot.

Wayne Stephenson replaced Dryden in the final period and was outstanding on several Czech attempts.

No Pro, No Go

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Thursday that the 1970 world tournament will not be held in Canada unless this country is allowed the use of nine professionals.

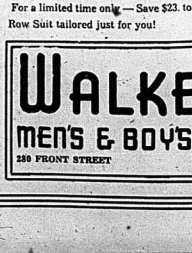
Dawson made the statement prior to leaving for a special International Ice Hockey Federation meeting in Geneva this weekend.

"If we can't get them to agree to allowing us to use nine professionals, I am prepared to tell them the tournament will not be held in Canada," he said.

"That will be our position and there is no alternative at all."

Dawson said the CAHA board of directors supports the stand.

The furore over professional participation in the tournament slated for Montreal and Winnipeg in March, started after the IIHF last summer agreed to allow Canada the use of nine professionals.



J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne later said, however, that the International Olympic Committee would make any players taking part in the tournament ineligible for Olympic competition because of the participation of professionals.

Ahearne then called the emergency meeting, which opens at Geneva Saturday.

Among the various representatives at the meeting in Geneva this weekend are Charles Hay, president of Hockey Canada, Dawson and Gordon Juckes of Winnipeg, executive irector of the CAHA.

Hay has already said that Hockey Canada, which operates this country's national team, will not ice a competitor if the IIHF reneges on the ruling to allow professionals.

Gump Won't Drop

MONTREAL (CP) — Veteran goalie Lorne (Gump) Worsley of Montreal Canadiens has indicated he will retire rather than accept a demotion to a farm team, the National Hockey League club said Wednesday.

Canadiens general manager Sam Pollock said he had a lengthy meeting with the 40-year-old netminder concerning his hockey future.

Pollock said Worsley was offered the opportunity to report immediately to the Montreal Voyageurs, a new Canadiens farm team in the American Hockey League, for two weeks to work himself into shape and regain his position as No. 1 goalkeeper with the Canadiens.

Pollock said Worsley accepted the proposal at first, but telephoned him later and told him it now was his intention to retire.

Worsley, a full-time pro since the 1953-54 season, has not dressed for the Canadiens' last five games.

New Year's Day Win

Kings Unbeatable If Old Wives' Tale True

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If wishes were horses and old wives tales were true, Los Angeles Kings would be the greatest team in the National Hockey League for the next 12 months.

According to popular belief anything anyone does on New Year's Day will be repeated all during the following year and Los Angeles won its first game in the last six by defeating Philadelphia Flyers 4-3 Thursday night.

The victory didn't do much for the Kings standing in the loop, however, and they remained in last place with 19 points in the Western division following the only game played in the NHL.

Meanwhile, Pittsburgh Penguins, New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings wound up the old year on a winning note Wednesday.

The Penguins defeated Montreal Canadiens 4-2, New York edged Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 and Detroit downed Boston Bruins 5-1 while Toronto Maple Leafs and Oakland Seals were battling to a 1-1 tie.

Eddie Joyal scored twice for the Kings, who played before 6,398 at Los Angeles, while Butch Goring and Leon Rochefort added single goals.

Bob Clarke, with two, and Jim Johnson were the Philadelphia marksmen.

There was a bit of fairy magic in Detroit Wednesday night as Alex Delvecchio, wearing a good luck charm on his suspenders, scored his first and second goals in 21 games this season.

The seventh-highest goal scorer in the NHL at the start of the season, with 274, Delvecchio had been shut out during his first 30 games.

Alan Karlander also got his first NHL goal for the Red Wings, while Wayne Connelly and Gary Unger added the others. Garnet Bailey scored the only goal for Boston.

The Canadiens, without a victory in their last four outings, started strongly and held a 1-0 lead on a goal by Bobby Rousseau before Keith McCreary tied the score for the Penguins. Pete Mahovlich then put Montreal ahead for the last time.

Dean Prentice tied the game a second time, Mcreary scored his second goal and rookie Michel Brieve added the fourth Pittsburgh goal.

Walt Tkaczuk and Jean Ratelle scored both Rangers goals in the third period before 17,250 fans at New York and Stan Mikita replied with his 17th goal of the season for the Black Hawks.

The announcement of Delvecchio's two goals brought a greater cheer from the 18,325 fans at Maple Leaf Gardens than did the Leafs-Seals effort. Oakland goalie Gary Smith provided some polish with 40 saves and yielded only to Jim Harrison, who beat him for his eighth goal of the season. Defenceman Dick Mattiussi scored for the Seals.

It was the fourth goal for Harrison since being traded to the Leafs by Boston for Wayne Carleton last month.

The trade took place Dec. 10 and Carleton has scored two goals since that time.

A full slate of six games was scheduled for Saturday night with Oakland playing at Montreal, Chicago at Toronto, New York at Detroit, Boston against the Minnesota North Stars, Boston at Los Angeles, Detroit at Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh at St. Louis.

Esposito on Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins strengthened his hold on third spot in the National Hockey League scoring race with six assist on the Bruins' only goal in a 5-1 loss to Detroit Red Wings Wednesday.

Esposito, last season's scoring champion, now has 30 points on 14 goals and 26 assists, 14 points behind team-mate Bobby, Orr who leads the race.

Orr failed to score Wednesday and remained seven points ahead of second-place Phil Goyette of St. Louis Blues.

Discarded Helmet

SOURIS, Man. (CP) — A prominent Manitoba amateur athlete died in hospital here Wednesday of a fractured skull suffered in a hockey game.

Barry Moffat, 30, slumped to the ice after being checked into the boards Tuesday night. Less than two minutes remained in the game between South-end Waskada of the Southwestern Manitoba Hockey League.

Moffat never regained consciousness. Dr. A. M. Grandidier said death was caused by a fracture at the base of the skull.

Moffat was not wearing a helmet. He donned a football helmet two years ago to protect a jaw broken in another game, but discarded it when the injury healed.

Hot Baby Hab Prospect Creates Beliveau Problem

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gilbert Perreault is creating the same problem for Claude Ruel and Montreal Canadiens that the National Hockey League club caused Quebec Aces almost 20 years ago.

At that time Quebec City turned the Quebec Hockey League professional so that Jean Beliveau could be paid enough to keep him out of the clutches of the Canadiens.

Now, Perreault appears to be the hottest prospect to show up in Montreal since that time but the team coach with Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series will probably go to another NHL team when he reaches draft age.

Perreault, a rangy centre who comes from Beliveau's hometown of Trois-Rivieres, Que., scored four goals and assisted on four others Thursday night as the Junior Canadiens walloped London Knights 13-2.

In other action, Peterborough Petes downed Hamilton Red Wings 5-1, St. Catharines Black Hawks defeated Niagara Falls Flyers 7-2 and Oshawa Generals defeated Toronto Marlboros 8-3.

Richard Lemieux also scored three goals for the Canadiens, while Ian Turnbull added two and Norm Gratton, Ricky Martin, Robert Guindon and Bobby Lalonde added single goals.

Dave Gilmour and Gary Geldart replied for the Knights in a game that was highlighted by third-period 'donnybrooks. Eight major penalties' were assessed as well as a game misconduct to Geldart.

Craig Ramsey scored two goals for the Petes, while Jim Mahon, Rick MacLeish and Brian Chinnick got the others.

Rick Simms, playing his first Junior A game, was within four minutes of recording a shutout when another rookie, Terry Ryan, scored for the lone Hamilton goal.

Meanwhile, the Marlboros, who traded defenceman Dennis McCord to Kitchener Rangers for forward Gary Crosby, took their fourth consecutive loss.

Tom Simpson scored three goals for the Generals, while Bob Kelly, Pete Sullivan and Henry Nowak added one each as Oshawa scored four third-period goals.

Dale Tallon and Tom Johnson replied for Toronto.

Duane Wylie, Marcel Dionne, Brian McKenzie, Pierre Guite, Clyde Simon, Al McDonough and Garry Cunningham scored for St. Catharines as the Black Hawks picked up their fifth-consecutive victory.

Larry Thompson and Wayne Kind replied for Niagara Falls.

Marlies Deal Dennis McCord

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series have acquired right winger Gary Crosby from Kitchener Rangers in exchange for defenceman Dennis McCord.

Marlies' manager Tommy Smythe said he was reluctant to give up McCord but he felt he had to do something to bolster the sagging Toronto attack.

The Marlboros held first place in the 10-team series early in the season but have since dropped to fourth spot.

Crosby, who has one more season of junior eligibility after the transfer, has scored seven goals and 16 assists in 26 games with the Rangers. He is the younger brother of Cam Crosby who was with the Marlboros in the 1967 season when they last won the Memorial Cup.

Hornets Humming On European Tour

ERFURT (CP) — Allan Cup champion Galt Hornets scored two goals in the third period New Year's night to defeat the East German national B team 3-1 in an exhibition hockey game before 2,500 fans in the outdoor arena.

The game was the fourth and final game of the East German portion of the Hornets' European tour. The win brought their record to two wins, a lost and a tie. The Canadians continue their tour in West Germany.

After a scoreless first period the East German club opened the scoring on a goal by Rohl.

Joe Hogan tied it for Galt four minutes later. Brule Reier and Pat Adair scored for Canada in the third period.

Galt drew three of the five minor penalties handed out by East German referees.

East Germany forced Ron Boomer to make 30 saves while Galt had 28 shots at German goalie Kolbe.

Richmond Hill Midgets Win

ORILLIA (CP) — Richmond Hill Midgets Wednesday won top honors in a three-day midget hockey tournament after playing five games without defeat.

Sixteen teams representing Ontario centres and Detroit participated.

Richmond Hill defeated defending tournament champions Orillia Bulldozers 6-4 in the final game of the series.

Mike Ball paced the winners with three goals while Collin Wood scored twice and Bill Weber got one. Pat Smith Bob Glass scored three goals and Danny Lutes added one.

Trenton 2 Points Back

Something Has to Give in 'B' Loop

Something has got to give between the New Year's playoff resolutions of Belleville and Trenton junior B hockey coaches.

With their 30 - game Eastern Ontario 'B' schedules just past the halfway mark neither neighboring community club shows any signs of running away from the other in the battle for the six - team loop's fourth and last playoff position.

With the Belleville Ellis Juniors currently holding down fourth place by a point over Cobourg and two points over Trenton's Golden Hawks, weekend games with Oshawa could either create more point daylight or complicate the traffic jam.

Tonight, new Trenton coach Roger Drake takes his injury-hampered Hawks to the Motor City for an 8 o'clock game with the second - place Crushmen and a chance to pull even with Belleville.

Juvenile forwards Terry and Teddy Brown have been added to the Golden Hawk roster by Drake for tonight's game to offset a couple of key injuries suffered in Trenton's costly 9-7 comeback win over Belleville a week ago.

Defenceman Andy Terwilliger, still suffering the effects of a knee injury in the Belleville game, probably won't play until next weekend's Hawk home-and-home series with Cobourg, Drake said.

And forward Bob Hall is not about to play any hockey for a while with the broken left arm he suffered against Belleville.

Drake plans to move forwards Chris Long and Bob Hadley back on defence, and play the juvenile reserves up front.

The Hawks got a well-earned 2-2 draw with the Crushmen in the teams' last meeting in Trenton.

Tonight, the Crushmen are in Belleville for a 7:30 evening game against the Ellis juniors, who have 12-2 and 8-2 drubbings at Oshawa hands to avenge.

The Ellis juniors had the unenviable Crushmen on the short end of a 6-4 score in their first meeting in Belleville, but had to settle for a 6-6 stalemate.

Coach Floyd Crawford saw his charges play their best two-way game of the season last Sunday in a 3-2 win over Oshawa leading Generals. Defenceman, then lone by the same score to last-place Cobourg the following night.

Providing some of the Ellis "now - you - see - them - now you - don't" — particularly high - scoring forward John McConnell and versatile Brian Coughlin — show on the Sunday night's game, Crawford gives his young club good chances to beat Oshawa.

Novices Start Right

BROCKVILLE (Special) — Last week the Towers Food City Novices won their own Belleville tournament, but at the moment, the city all-stars are on the track of some out-of-town silverware.

The Belleville novices hold a 4-1 decision from Ottawa Westboro this morning in opening round action at the Brockville International Atom Tournament.

Randy Hutchinson's two goals paced the Towers youngsters, with Bobby Crawford and Ricky Sprague contributing singles.

Next action for Belleville in the 16-entry "A" competition was to be a 4 o'clock game this afternoon against St. Vital.

Armour Back in Lineup

A's Needn't Expect Gratitude

BILLY ARMOUR
Returns to Slot

Woodstock A's have been doing Belleville Mo-Hawks some senior hockey favors lately, but they needn't expect any gratitude in tonight's 9 o'clock Memorial Arena visit.

A pair of upset wins by the cellar - dwelling A's over Oshawa in the last two weeks have helped keep Mo-Hawks in sole possession of third place in the eight - team OHA Senior A standings, eight points ahead of the Oaks and King size Aces.

But the only other of three wins Woodstock has managed in 24 outings came against Belleville Hallowe'en night. The A's have been dangerous in two losses to the Mo-Hawks, forcing them to overcome a three - goal deficit in the third period for a 5-3 win Nov. 16.

Tonight's game will mark the first appearance in 11 games of Billy Armour, who was sidelined by a severe thumb injury suffered in an industrial accident at his Peterborough job.

Armour had compiled 15 scoring points in his first 13 Mo-Hawk games before his injury, a total good enough to rank him sixth best on the club despite his five-week playing absence.

"Bill will probably be centring myself and Wayne McConnell," playing-coach Davey Jones said this morning.

Jones will take rookie Ray Johnston's left wing spot on the "second line," with the Peterborough 19 - year - old still on the limp from a knee injury picked up in last week's 3-1 home loss to Kingston.

The Mo-Hawks have lost only four times in their last 17 games, and two of the setbacks have been at the hands of the surging Aces, who entertain the locals in an 8 p.m. Sunday evening game in Kingston.

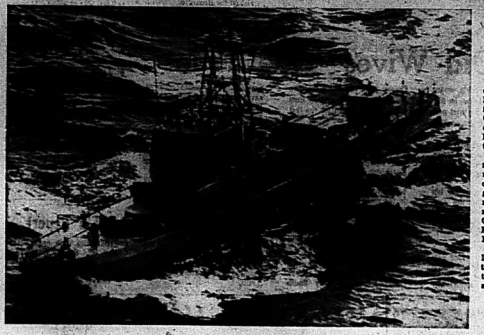
Hijacked Airliner, Grounded by Bad Battery, Waiting for Recharge



LIMA, Peru (AP) — Five young Brazilian revolutionaries and the jetliner they hijacked were grounded at the Lima airport early today. One of the plane's engines wouldn't start.

The hijackers—four young men and a girl—appeared in good spirits but were slightly nervous. Cuba was their destination.

The twin-jet Caravelle of Brazil's Cruzeiro do Sul airline had just taken off from Montevideo, Uruguay, for Rio when the five took it over at gunpoint and diverted it to Buenos Aires. They let off an elderly couple with heart trouble and took aboard fuel and dinner for the 20 persons still aboard. Then they refuelled again at Antofagasta, Chile.

After refuelling at Lima, the pilot started one engine, but a battery failure kept the other one still. After several futile attempts, he got the second engine and darkened the plane.

There was no starter equipment for Caravelles at the airport. The plane's chief engineer asked that the aircraft's five batteries be removed for recharge. He and airport officials went in search of equipment that could do the job.

Heading for Israel

This gunboat steams toward Israel after catching the world's imagination when five boats made a departure from Cherbourg Christmas Day. The ship is seen at first sighting 40 miles west of Haifa on Wednesday. (Associated Press Photo).

French Demand Israel Recall Admiral Who Is Buyer of Arms

PARIS (Reuters) — A French demand for recall of Israel's Paris-based chief arms buyer for Europe as a result of the Cherbourg gunboats affair is not expected to affect Franco-Israeli relations, observations said today.

The government Thursday demanded that arms buyer Admiral Mordechai Limon leave the country after five French-built gunboats sailed into Haifa, Israel, Wednesday night after stealing away from Cherbourg Christmas Day—despite a French arms embargo against Israel.

An Israeli spokesman said Limon would have left Paris in the coming months anyway to take up a new post in Israel, and observers noted that Limon had no high diplomatic standing.

But Franco-Israeli relations remained cool today as a result of the gunboat imbroglio. The boats were originally built for Israel as part of a 13-vessel order, but the export of the last five was blocked when the French slapped a total arms embargo on Israel a year ago.

The five slipped away from Cherbourg, where they were built, after French officials approved their sale to a company called Starboat Oil with addresses in Panama and Norway. The government has since launched an inquiry into the affair.

The almost frigid character of relations between the two countries was underlined at the traditional New Year's presidental reception for the diplomatic corps at the Elysee Palace.

Israeli Ambassador Walter Eytan, as the doyen of the corps, was the first to be greeted by President Georges Pompidou. But the president pointedly made no remarks to the diplomat, confining himself with a handshake.

He then went on to greet the other envoys, chatting and smiling with each one.

Beside asking for Limon's recall, the government supported two top-ranking French generals for their part in the affair. But that final word on their involvement is expected at the end of the inquiry, which could take some time.

The high-ranking officers are Gen. Bernard Cassilles, president of the inter-ministerial commission for the export of war materials, and his secretary-general, Gen. Louis Bonte.

Admiral Commanded Exodus

PARIS (AP) — Israeli Admiral Mordechai Limon, ordered out of France for his part in the gunboat affair, is a fabled figure who in the last nine years led a military purchase mission in Europe for the Israeli embassy in Paris.

Limon, 45, was an unobtrusive diplomat, especially since the French government imposed an embargo on arms to Israel after the June, 1967, Israeli-Arab war. He was listed only as a "counselor" on the official diplomats books.

Limon became a hero in his country when he commanded two ships, particularly the Exodus, which broke the British blockade of Palestine after the Second World War.

Limon was born in Palestine where his parents had arrived from Poland in 1924. He started his navy career in the Palmach sea commando, which were part of the Haganah, the secret army which the Jews formed in Palestine during the British mandate.

He left for England and entered the Royal Navy shortly before the Second World War, and afterward as a merchant navy officer he piloted Jewish refugees to their new homeland.

He later went to New York to study at Columbia University, then returned to Israel and became the chief of its navy in 1950. From 1958 to 1960, he headed an economy planning group at the Israeli defence ministry. Limon arrived in Paris in 1960 to become Israel's chief arms purchaser in Europe. Israel then was France's No. 1 aeronautics customer, buying 13 per cent of French aeronautical sales.

President de Gaulle's arms embargo at the outbreak of the 1967 Arab-Israeli war prevented Israel from obtaining 50 Mirage supersonic fighters for which she had paid more than $60,000,000.

Early in 1969, de Gaulle tightened the embargo by forbidding shipments of all types of military supplies to Israel, including spare parts for the French-made jet fighters already delivered to the Israeli air force.

In addition to the planes, some $40,000,000 worth of material for Israel was on the books of French arms dealers.

Later in the year, sources indicated that France had resumed delivery of some parts to Israel. The easing of the embargo was attributed to Limon's diplomacy.

A burly man, Limon seldom appeared in public except at a few official receptions. He and his wife were reported away for the weekend when his expulsion was announced. The admiral was to have left France shortly anyway, in the new director of the Israeli defence ministry, sources close to the Israeli embassy said.

Three Children Die in Fire

HAMILTON (CP) — Four-year-old twin boys and an infant girl died New Year's Day after fire destroyed a two-storey duplex building in the city's northend.

Police identified the dead as Brian and Bruce General, sons of Rita General, and Ginger General, three months, daughter of Marion General, 19

Fire department officials said Marlon and her sister Delores General, 21, were forced to abandon rescue attempts because of intense heat and thick smoke.

Kingston Man Slain

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Michael R. Hewitt, 23, formerly of Kingston, Ont., was shot and killed early Thursday, police said, when he allegedly attacked a Hollywood restaurant owner with a butcher knife.

Police said they were told Hewitt grabbed a knife from a table and tried to stab Reese the restaurant owner, who drew a two-shot derringer from under the counter and fired once.

Firefighters found the boys unconscious. They died two hours later in Hamilton General Hospital. The girl was found dead in her crib.

Fire officials estimated damage at about $25,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Jovan Pavic and their three children, who lived in the other half of the duplex, escaped unharmed.

Cause of the fire was being investigated by the Ontario fire marshal's office.

Heart-lung Recipient Is Dead

NEW YORK (AP) — Edward Falk, who received a transplanted heart and two lungs on Christmas Day, died today, New York Hospital reported.

The hospital said Falk, who was the second person to receive such a triple-transplant operation, died when his body rejected the new lungs.

Falk, 42, of Nerfon, N.J., had been in satisfactory condition for six days after the operation until he began showing evidence of progressive rejection of the lungs on Wednesday.

A hospital spokesman said his condition improved after Falk was connected to an artificial lung on Thursday.

The spokesman said his new heart "remained in excellent condition throughout his lung rejection."

Falk, who had terminal emphysema, a disease of the lungs, had received the heart and lungs of Eleanor Weber, 50, of New Britain, Conn., who died on Christmas Day.

Air Transport Command Jet Is First to Arrive at Sydney

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — A Canadian Air Transport Command executive jet skirted bad weather and soared into Sydney's Bankstown Airport to become the first plane to finish the final 600-mile Adelaide-to-Sydney leg of the big international air race.

Another jet, a Qantas Airlines entry manned by five Australians, landed 10 minutes later at Bankstown.

The two were the only entrants in a special jet class separate from the other 64 planes in the field.

The Aussies flew from London to Adelaide early today and won three bonors for the distance of nearly 12,000 miles, touching down 27 hours 31 minutes after leaving London.

The Canadians completed the London-Adelaide jaunt Sunday night in 29 hours 50 minutes.

Captain Tony Dobson, who led the Qantas crew, said the flight had been uneventful except at Damascus, Syria, when they were ordered to fly an alternative route to that planned, causing 40 minutes lost time.

The Canadians flew a French-built Dassault Falcon fanjet, larger and more powerful than the Australian entry. The Falcon cruises at 510 miles an hour and normally is used for fast light transport. It is attached to 412 Squadron, based in Ottawa.

The Aussies flew a twin-jet Hawker Siddeley 125.

The Canadian crew was headed by Capt. D. R. (Doc) O'Connor, 36, of Capreol, Ont.

With O'Connor, the flight commander, were three pilots, Maj. Roger O. Landay, 36, Smooth Rock Falls, Ont., Capt. C. (Midge) Pennington, 45, Winnipeg, and Capt. R. T. (Bob) Brinkhurst, 40, Cut Knife, Sask., and crew member Cpl. K. J. MacDougall, 32, Glace Bay, N.S.

The two jets are competing for a trophy only. They will not share in the cash prizes that go to winners of other categories in the long-distance competition.

The race is expected to be completed Saturday.

UNWANTED MAIL

TACOMA, Wash. (AP) — Jean Fuller began to wonder whether the mailman was making deliveries of letters or junk. "I got tired of throwing it away so I thought I'd save it for a year to see how much it would be," Miss Fuller said. On the first anniversary of her project she had received 23 pounds of "junk" mail.

The race, which started Dec. 18, commemorates the 50th anniversary of the first England-Australia flight by Sir Ross Smith and Sir Keith Smith in a Vickers Vimy biplane.

The race was also the first major event for 1970 in the celebration of Australia's discovery 200 years ago by Capt. James Cook.

Mennonites Complain Beatles Outrank Them

KITCHENER (CP) — Leaders of the Mennonite Central Committee of Canada say they cannot understand why Prime Minister Trudeau refuses to meet them to hear a brief on Mennonite opposition to war. yet has time to talk to Beatle John Lennon and Yoko Ono about their peace campaign.

C. J. Rempel, committee secretary, says the Mennonites have presented a brief on their beliefs to every prime minister since William Lyon Mackenzie King in the 1920s. But they have been unable to arrange a meeting with Mr. Trudeau after trying for a year.

"He granted Lennon with his new concept of peace an hour on the spur of the moment but he won't see the Mennonites who belong to one of the historic peace churches," said Mr. Rempel.

The Mennonites gave the brief to Justice Minister John Turner and asked him to deliver it to Mr. Trudeau. It recounts church history and describes what the group has suffered during 400 years of opposition to war. It says Mennonite conscientious objectors have served the country effectively in non-military ways.

First Raid Made 5 Years Ago By Palestinian Guerrillas

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Five years ago this week, four Palestinian Arab guerrillas from a refugee camp near Bethlehem raid in the new year by sneaking into Israel. Two of them blew up a water pump at El Koton, an Israeli settlement, with primitive bombs made of gunpowder and scrap iron.

The raid was a pinprick, but it was the first armed act against Israel by organized Palestinians, the start of a new Arab guerrilla movement.

At the time of that first attack, the guerrillas say, they had 82 men. Now they claim 1,700 active fighters backed up by 20,000 support personnel, including cadres, men in training and youth groups.

The commandos who organized the first raid had to raise $1,000 to buy second-hand weapons. Arab guerrilla groups received $5,600,000 in 1969, and Yasir Arafat, leader of the largest guerrilla organization, says he expects to get $19,000,000 a year from now on.

The guerrillas' arms supply, mostly Russian and Chinese, is growing rapidly. They say they now launch 400 armed actions against Israel a month. These are mostly rocket and mortar attacks from Jordan, Syria or Lebanon, but they also include raids into Israeli-occupied territory and into Israel itself.

Arafat, a 40-year-old bachelor, is head of the Al Fatah guerrilla organization and chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, which loosely controls half a dozen resistance groups.

When he walked into the recent Arab summit conference in Rabat, Morocco, he was dressed in baggy pants, sneakers, dark glasses and a green ski jacket. But he was treated like a head of state by the other Arab potentates in their Bond Street suits, uniforms and luxurious robes.

The other leaders at the conference, unwilling to commit their own unprepared forces to an all-out war against Israel, left the field of action to Arafat, and he took the spotlight willingly.

The plump commando chieftain, who met the late Latin-American revolutionary Che Guevara in 1965, has given the Arab guerrilla movement a personality to rally around.

One problem he faces, however, is a lack of unity.

Arafat claims that 91 per cent of all Arab guerrillas are in his Palestine Liberation Organization. But another major commando group, the leftist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, remains outside. Co-ordination is loose.

Arafat and other guerrilla leaders concede they have a "common goal," but they are unconcerned. After all, they point out, the Vietnamese have been fighting since the Second World War, and the Algerian FLN fought 13 years.

They believe Israel will weaken eventually. Then, they say, with the aid of the Arab armies, they will sweep to the Mediterranean and set up a non-denominational state in which Jew and Arab, Christian and Moslem, can live in peace.

Mao Tse-tung, chairman of the Chinese Communist party, once wrote: "Guerrillas must swim among the people like fish in the sea."

The Palestine commandos have friendly seas around their target, although the Jordanian and Lebanese governments are reluctantly co-operative and the Syrians favor guerrilla operations from somebody else's territory.

But Israeli occupation forces on the West Bank of the Jordan and in the Gaza Strip make the going there dangerous, and inside Israel there are only small puddles for the guerrillas to splash in.

So the Palestinians struggle mainly a war of attrition from the outside. The Palestine commandos must snap at Israel's flanks.

The 1,600,000 persons classified as Palestine refugees in Lebanon, Jordan, Syria and the Arab territories occupied by Israel in 1967 have looked to the commandos since the humiliating Arab defeat in the six-day war.

"We depend on God and the fedayeen," one refugee said.

The commandos hand out food and medical services to the refugees and print a weekly paper for them. This year they sold Christmas cards to raise money for the cause.

They work in terrain that is largely unsuitable for guerrilla war. They have no Vietnam jungles or Algerian mountains to hide in. They fight in open territory, mostly rocky hills or treeless plain.

And they are not fighting a corrupt dictatorship or a faltering colonial regime. Instead, they face a homogeneous, highly-skilled, tough nation whose people's will has been forged by centuries of persecution.

First Baby of Seventies Is Tillsonburg, Ont., Boy

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

The first baby of the year, and of the decade, born in Canada appears to be a seven-pound boy born in Tillsonburg, Ont., just one second into the new year.

Dr. Kenneth Warren of Tillsonburg, about 25 miles southeast of London, Ont., said the yet-to-be-named boy was born to Gerardus and Elizabeth Thoonen who live in nearby Courtland.

A close second for the title of first baby was an eight-pound boy born at 10 seconds past midnight to Mr. and Mrs. Hans Lizenka of Vancouver.

Manitoba was third among the provinces in the race for 1970's first baby with a seven-pound girl born to Mr. and Mrs. Larry Rodgers in Winnipeg General Hospital at 30 seconds into the new year.

Quebec's first-born, 15 seconds later than Manitoba's, was a seven-pound boy born to Mr. and Mrs. Jean-Marie Lachance of St. Gabriel de Brandon, 60 miles north of Montreal.

Some Precautions With Salmonella

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Would you please discuss the question of salmonella poisoning in your column? My children are very fond of egg nogs. But my husband thinks the danger of salmonella poisoning is very great. — Mrs. K.

Comment: A generation ago whenever anyone in the family came down with a gastrointestinal upset (nausea, cramps, diarrhea, vomiting, fever) that lasted for a day or two, the usual explanation given by the doctor was, "I guess it was something I ate."

Although he was undoubtedly right, what many doctor didn't even suspect was that the trouble was due to salmonella infection. Somewhere, somehow these bacilli got into the body (by infected water, food, dishes, eating utensils, etc.).

Now we are more aware of its likelihood as the cause of such upsets. The United States Public Health Service estimates that each year it affects more than two million Americans. Although it is not a serious infection, except in very old, very young and in those otherwise seriously ill, it can be an uncomfortable and devastating illness while it lasts.

Salmonella infections are due to prevailing life germs. Fortunately, everyone does not get sick.

For example, in a family of four, one child may complain only of cramps and diarrhea, another only of a passing nausea, the mother of vomiting, while the father is down for two days with the whole bundle of nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, stomach pains and fever.

The food source of the infection may be due to an innocent carrier of salmonella who handles food. Common sources of infection are chickens, turkeys, ducks, pork, beef, lamb, milk products, water, etc.

As for eggs, Mrs. A., they are a potential source of infection, too. But not usually when used raw and uncreated before use. The incidence of infection is greater when large amounts of eggs are pooled in drying and freezing processes.

I can't see any good reason why your children should be deprived of their enjoyment of egg nogs made by yourself. To be sure, egg nog should be pasteurized. You can do this by maintaining the liquid for 30 minutes at about 154 degrees Fahrenheit.

Here are some further tips to avoid infection by salmonella:

Never use eggs with cracked shells unless you cook them thoroughly.

If you have leftovers, the unused portions of food should be refrigerated immediately. Many housewives go on to other chores and leave foodstuffs on the table for hours. Be especially careful during summer months.

Cook food to at least 165 degrees Fahrenheit. Then serve while still hot or refrigerate immediately.

Treatment of the attack itself is usually routine: rest in bed, replacement of lost fluids due to diarrhea and vomiting and medication for the nausea and cramps.

"It was only something I ate" may be true. But in many unsuspected cases, salmonella was there, too. The public health service has a responsibility in keeping it under control. But we as individuals can supply a full measure of cooperation in keeping our foods edible.

Police Like Other People

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was pleased when my 14-year-old boy came in the house not long ago, shaking his head at some kids he had passed on the street, who were calling the police "Pigs" and less printable epithets.

"That's not fair," he said. "Police are pretty much like other people — some are nice, and some are mean. If you treat them all like pigs, they'll start to act like pigs."

Part of his home — and school — training has been to reject a "categorical" approach to blocs or groups of people and to think of them as individuals, which is the only way to move from the primitive to the civilized state. So I was pleased.

A few days later, he again came into the house, and exclaimed, "Boy, the police really are pigs!" I asked him what had happened to change his mind.

It seems that he and a friend had been playing on the street with a toy rifle that looked air with a resounding pop. The boys ducked behind cars and were having a mock war with the gun. A squad car came along, the policeman got out, and asked my son's friend what kind of rifle that was.

As the boy was explaining, my son came up and interjected, "Oh, that's just a toy. It belongs to my kid brother, who's 9, and we borrowed it to play with." I think he was polite, because he always is. He: "Shut up, you." The cop snarled at him: "When I want to hear from you, I'll ask you a question." He inspected the toy, tossed it back to the boys, grunted, got back into the squad car and drove off — leaving two more "radicalist-ed" youngsters in his miserable wake.

Now, of course, as I've told my son, nobody can generalize from one case, or even from a few. But this cop's attitude was more characteristic than not; even if he represents a minority, it is a large and voluble minority, who mistakenly imagine that toughness and rudeness show power and authority, even when pleasantness would work better.

A few more encounters of this sort, and all my son's schoolmates will be regarding the police as pigs, not thinking of them as individuals but simply as brutes in uniforms. This is how the regard for law breaks down — not so much by the attitude of criminals or the agitation of communists, but by the very image projected by the police themselves. When you accost a nice kid with a popgun as though he were a delinquent, he is going to look upon the police as the enemy, not as the protector.

CBC and Ham Operators Set Up Radio Network for Northwest

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — Residents of the Northwest Territories clustered around radios Thursday night, the first day of their year-long centennial celebrations.

For the first time in history, the outposts scattered through out the 1,300,000 square miles of the north were linked by a radio network, set up by the CBC northern service and CBC shortwave and ham radio operators throughout the area to commemorate the centennial.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, N.W.T. Commissioner Stuart M. Hodgson and Yellowknife Mayor Fred Henne broadcast messages over the network to the people gathered around radios and shortwave receivers set up in community halls.

Prime Minister Trudeau also was heard, by means of a prerecorded message, during the 57-minute program.

All four speakers commented on the hardships facing the people of the north, but were unanimous in predicting great advances for the territory's second 100 years.

Motor toboggans, hovercraft, helicopters and larger and faster ships of both sea and sky have shrunk the once impossible distances within the northland to more manageable proportions," Commissioner Hodgson said.

Mr. Chretien said the challenge facing the north in the next decade will be "to accelerate the pace of modern development while avoiding mistakes that were made in the south."

He also announced that the Eskimo Arts Council will hold an Eskimo sculpture contest as part of the centennial.

* * *

The contest carries $4,000 in prize money.

Prime minister Trudeau said it was a pity Canadians in the south never have the opportunity to see the north and meet "some of the remarkable people who live there."

The prime minister said he hopes to visit the territories during the centennial celebrations.

In other ceremonies, the territories capital of Yellowknife was officially proclaimed a city, although it has only about 6,500 people.

Commissioner Hodgson read a special ordinance Thursday required to make the change, because the new city's population does not meet standards required to become a city and Mr. Chretien presented Mayor Henne with a gold chain of office on behalf of the federal government.

Residents gathered at Frame Lake, on the city's outskirts, for a giant fireworks display.

They were treated to a spectacular—if unplanned—ending, when a stray rocket set off the remaining fireworks in a single, huge pyrotechnic replay.

Several of the communities also held fireworks displays but at Whale Cove, on the west shore of Hudson Bay, residents crowded candles to the community hall after all lights in the town were turned off.

Residents of Fort Simpson, about 225 miles west of Yellowknife, cleaned up their old buildings and collected refuse wood for a giant bonfire.

Manitoba Begins Centennial

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's Centennial Year officially began Wednesday afternoon with the emphasis on lights and songs.

A 30-minute New Year's Eve opening ceremony at the Manitoba legislature was carried live by radio and television stations across the province. When it ended, Manitoba householders joined in by turning on electric lights.

The province marks its 100th year in Confederation on July 15, 1970.

* * *

Speaking in English, French, Ukrainian and German, Premier Ed Schreyer paid tribute to the mixture of religions and nationalities which have helped build Manitoba, and looked forward to the next century.

U.S. Wants to Lessen Tensions with Red China

TAIPEI (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew arrived in Formosa today to assure Nationalist China the U.S. government intends to stand by its treaty commitments.

But en route from Vietnam he said the Nixon administration favors initiatives to lessen tensions with Communist China and permit a reduction in military spending.

Agnew told reporters traveling with him that the recent relaxation of American restrictions on trade with mainland China reflect a hope they will lead to steps by the Chinese Communists to lessen the tensions that exist in Asia.

The United States, he said, should not sit still in a stance of armed preparedness and make no initiatives to develop an atmosphere that will allow it to reduce military spending and use some of that money in programs needed at home.

But the vice-president said U.S. efforts to ease tensions with the Communist Chinese do not in any way affect the U.S. commitment to the Nationalist Chinese.

Nationalist Chinese leader are worried that President Nixon's new doctrine calling for greater self-reliance among Asian nations will mean a tapering off of diplomatic and military support for President Chiang Kai-shek's regime.

Recent reports that the United States is planning a reduction in naval petrols in the Formosa Strait, one of Nationalist China's major shields against the Communist Chinese, have convinced Chiang's government it has to seek more than vague assurances from the vice-president.

The Nationalists are particularly upset by the recent relaxation of U.S. trade embargoes against Communist China. The change in trade policy is regarded as a breach in U.S. diplomatic support which, among other things, has enabled the Nationalists to keep China's seat in the United Nations.

Chiang also is expected to press for an explanation of U.S. troop withdrawals from Vietnam, which were called "badly timed and ill-conceived" in a recent document from the Chinese legislative assembly.

Agnew, during his New Year's visit to South Vietnam, met with President Nguyen Van Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and other top U.S. and South Vietnamese officials, and spoke with U.S. troops at two bases and an army hospital north of Saigon.

The vice-president said his visit "confirmed to me the wisdom of our policies."

Agnew said he had reviewed "military activity and the effort to bring security and a better life to the Vietnamese people in the countryside and the cities and towns."

He praised "the air of confidence, willingness and quiet resolve which the South Vietnamese leadership displayed" in discussing the transfer of more combat responsibility to the South Vietnamese.

"They recognize there might be temporary setbacks," Agnew said, "but they urged that we have faith in them for in the end they would succeed. The detegnination of the Vietnamese people to preserve their right to decide freely their own future is the source of their strength and confidence."

Agnew Called Most Serious Threat to Press Liberty

ZURICH (Reuters) — The International Press Institute said Thursday Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew presented the most serious threat to freedom of information in the Western World last year.

In its annual review of press freedom around the world, the institute recalled Agnew's attacks on television and some sectors of the press for alleged bias in news selection and presentation of news.

"The most serious aspect of these attacks was that, although launched from an office which is traditionally of little effect in the United States government, it appeared that in fact they may have emanated from the presidential office itself," the institute said.

The institute, founded in 1951, is composed of some 1,600 publishers and editors from non-Communist countries.

It said in the review that the most serious threat to freedom of information in the Western World "was undoubtedly that from Vice-President Spiro Agnew, who having first censured TV commentators and producers for giving the public what he called a 'highly selected and often biased presentation of news,' then broadened his attack to include certain newspapers.

Sports Wager Ring Found

DETROIT (AP) — National sports figures will be called before a 23-man federal grand jury investigating a nationwide gambling ring, a United States government lawyer says.

James H. Brickley said that as a result of raids in which 10 persons were arrested "the government now has in its possession a great deal of records and additional evidence linking with this conspiracy a number of additional people, including well-known figures in the sports and horse racing worlds."

Dizzy Dean, 58-year-old former St. Louis Cardinals pitching great, was the only sports figure mentioned Friday when investigators announced a series of raids and arrests Thursday, but was not among the 10 persons arrested. The arrests involved nine persons in Michigan and one in Las Vegas.

Brickley said Dean and his Las Vegas motel room were searched under a warrant which allowed officials to look for "wagering records, wagering paraphernalia consisting of bet slips, rundown sheets, account sheets, recap sheets, money used in or derived from a wagering operation" and other instruments.

Brickley declined to say whether any such items were found in Dean's room. Mrs. Dean said none was.

Dean said he was questioned for 15 minutes about people he knew.

"I can't be involved in it because I don't know anything about it," he said.

Dean said he had met briefly one of those arrested, "but I don't know these guys. I never heard of them."

"I bet on the ball games yesterday with friends, like I bet in gin or on playing in a golf game, so does everyone else," he said, denying further links with gambling.

All 10 of those arrested were charged with "use of interstate communications facilities in furtherance of gambling" and with conspiracy to violate federal gambling laws. All were released on bond.

3,000 Immigrants Find Jobs Scarce

MONTREAL (CP) — A spokesman for a group of 3,000 French-speaking immigrants' families who want to leave Quebec to settle in Alberta says the group is fed up with being "unemployed professionals."

Andre Spinoza, an unemployed agricultural technician, said in an interview Friday the families are mostly from North Africa and found on their return to France that they were not well received.

"So we decided to come to Canada, a democratic and free country."

However, they found they could not get jobs in their professions in Quebec, and now want to move to Alberta to settle on what they claim is a 1,000,000-acre tract of land belonging to the Alberta government, 30 miles east of Lethbridge on the road to Medicine Hat.

Mr. Spinoza says he and two other immigrants, Jean Prieure and Stephen Covat, sent a telegram to Louis Bery, Alberta government representative in Montreal, and Mr. Roy apparently got in touch with the Alberta government.

"The reply is of course not an official one," Mr. Spinoza said, "but from what we have been told the land we mentioned about 30 miles east of Lethbridge is free and we could use it."

But R. T. White, general manager of Alberta's eastern Irrigation district, said in an interview in Brooks, Alta., that the immigrants' spokesmen are "full of hot air" if they expect to be able to get 1,000,000 acres of irrigated land in Alberta.

"They must be full of hot air because there's only 1,000,000 acres of irrigated land in all of Canada," he said.

There were 755,000 acres of irrigated land in Alberta with a maximum additional potential of only another 200,000 acres — "so their figures just don't add up."

Mr. White said he knew nothing about the group except what he had read in newspaper reports.

Fred Colborne, Alberta's municipal affairs minister, and Ray Hierson, attorney minister of agriculture, said they have had no communication with the Quebec group.

Mr. Spinoza said that last November, after finding the difficulties in getting work in Quebec, he, Mr. Prieure and Mr. Covat sent a telegram to Mario Beaulieu, Quebec immigration minister, but never got a reply.

In a letter later to Allan MacEachen, federal immigration minister, he said the group wanted to go to Alberta because of conditions in Quebec province, including a rise in terrorism and an increase in unemployment.

He said about 40 per cent of the families in his group are prepared to leave Canada within six months if nothing is done for them.

"If we don't get official approval for our project, we'll just pack up and leave the country. We came here to live, not to be unemployed professionals."

Mr. Spinoza said that most are agricultural engineers or technicians, "but we have people in all professions, including doctors, lawyers, engineers and many others."

Manuel Podelice a chartered accountant and another spokesman for the group, said the association began with 150 members but has grown to include the 3,000 families.

He said the families wish to form a co-operative community in Alberta with each family buying a plot to cultivate.

They Were Sent to Safety

When war broke out in Biafra in July, 1967, Albert O. Uhiara sent his wife Sylvia and 15-month-old son Chinedu to his wife's native Toronto for safety. Sylvia has made a solemn promise to return to make her home in Biafra.

Two Slain In Tavern

MONTREAL (CP) — Police today identified two men, shot to death in an east-end tavern Friday night, as Roger Labelle, a 44-year-old waiter at the tavern, and Gaston Blanc, 53, of nearby Ste. Therese de Blainville.

A few minutes after the shooting, police arrested a suspect as he fled from the establishment.

Two men injured in the shooting were taken to hospital. One was released after treatment while the other was kept under observation.

Names of the injured and the suspect were not released.

About 50 people were in the tavern at the time of the incident.

Toronto Man Tries To Rescue Fiancee From German Jail

TORONTO (CP) — George Svejk, 36, is trying to get his fiancee out of an East German jail.

While Karen Bonow has been awaiting trial on a charge of trying to escape to Austria, Svejk says he has been writing letters to the East German government taking the blame for her crime.

Svejk says he met Miss Bonow in Budapest, Hungary, last spring and persuaded her to escape to the West with the aid of a forged passport he acquired in West Germany.

Miss Bonow was arrested July 1 by Hungarian border guards as she attempted to go by train across Czechoslovakia to Austria, Svejk said. He was arrested on a later train.

Svejk said he served four months in a Hungarian jail for handling forged documents and then was expelled from the country. Miss Bonow was deported to East Germany where she had worked as a woman's columnist for a newspaper.

In a letter to East Germany, Svejk explained that he encouraged Miss Bonow to try to escape because "I wished and still wish to marry her. There is no legal way until 1971 when I shall become Canadian citizen."

Rumless Royal Navy Rumbles With Revolt

LONDON (AP) — The Royal Navy may face a minor mutiny if it insists on cutting off its sailors' daily rum ration, a member of Parliament said today.

"There is dismay and outrage in the Royal Navy over this," said James Wellbeloved, a former seaman and now a Labor MP in the Commons. "I shall press for a debate when the House reassembles after the Christmas recess."

Wellbeloved said sailors didn't even protest the no-rum rule and were barred by law from writing to members of Parliament.

But he said 58 Royal Navy men had defied regulations and written protest letters to him.

For 238 years, British sailors have been given a free tot of rum every day. The navy last month decided that in the interests of safety the grog ration will end next August.

Nova Scotia's Negroes Urge Aid for Biafrans

HALIFAX (CP) — A group of prominent Nova Scotia Negroes, calling themselves the United Black Appeal to Save the Children, urged immediate action Friday to "relieve the suffering in Biafra."

At a news conference, members issued a statement they said will be sent to the federal government. The statement demanded the government call a special cabinet meeting within 48 hours to deal with the Nigerian-Biafran conflict.

The statement was read by Dr. Lemuel Sealey of Halifax, chairman of the Afro-Canadian Liberation Movement in Nova Scotia. Those present included H. A. J. (Gus) Wedderburn, president of the Nova Scotia Association for the Advancement of Colored People; Gordon Earle of the Nova Scotia Human Rights Commission; J. A. R. Kinney, moderator of the African Baptist Church; Carlyle Warner, chairman of the Black United Front of Nova Scotia, and Jesse Dillard, recreation director for Halifax.

The group condemned the government for "inaction."

"For over four months, the government has side-stepped the issue by deliberate tactics of procrastination and indifference to the problem, while thousands of innocent women and children are dying.

"The government has shown blatant disregard and indifference to the urgent humanitarian cause of black children."

Immediate steps were urged to make available money and food for victims of the conflict and to bring both sides to the conference table to find ways and means of ending the war.

The group suggested the government condemn nations supplying arms for the war. The group has pledged to raise $2,000 to aid peace efforts.

The statement said Canairelief flights supported by the contributions of hundreds of Canadian citizens have been providing approximately 250 tons of food and medical supplies daily.

"The gallant efforts that are being made by private organizations like the Canairelief, though heroic, are like drops in a bucket and fall short of solving the urgent problem of food and medicine."

Snowmobile Hits Train

BELLE RIVER, Ont. (CP) — Paul Dupuis, 23, of Belle River escaped injury early today when his snowmobile rammed into the side of a slow moving freight train near this community 18 miles east of Windsor.

Dupuis and three other friends were driving the snowmobiles shortly after midnight when they hit a fog patch. Dupuis was unable to stop his machine at a level crossing.

Dupuis, who bought the vehicle Tuesday, jumped off the snowmobile after the skis hit a train wheel.

Viet Cong Raid Takes Big Toll

SAIGON (CP) — Troops suffered their heaviest casualties in seven weeks Friday night during a Viet Cong attack on a camp in the foothills of Quang Ngai province, the U.S. command said today.

Seven Americans were killed and 12 others were wounded in the four-hour battle, 312 miles northeast of Saigon, a command spokesman said.

The attack began shortly before midnight with a barrage of about 60 mortar shells followed by heavy small-arms and automatic-weapons fire against a night hivouac set up by a U.S. patrol.

The Americans retaliated with artillery and helicopter strikes. The assault force failed to breach the camp's defences and faded away into the hills before dawn, leaving behind 29 dead and nine weapons, the spokesman said.

U.S. B-52 bombers resumed their raids at the end of the New Year truce Friday, striking seven times at targets near the Cambodian border in Tay Ninh province.

Other B-52s droned northward overnight to pound North Vietnamese bases and staging depots near Laos on the rugged northern approaches to the Ashau Valley, which runs from the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The U.S. command reported two strikes near the valley within four miles of the Laotian border, and a third this morning 88 miles north of the capital.

South Vietnamese military headquarters said four shells in a Viet Cong mortar attack hit a civilian hospital in the provincial capital of My Tho, 34 miles southwest of Saigon. Three civilians were reported killed and 17 wounded.

'Don't Take It So Hard'

Woodstock A's goalie Ken Kitching even got some sympathy from Belleville Mo-Hawks' "Weiner" Brown last night after the Mo-Hawks had fired their ninth goal past Kitching en route to a 9-0 OHA Senior A win in Belleville.

While Brown consoles Kitching, linesman Don Ogden once again retrieves the puck from the Woodstock net. The win moved Belleville to within four points of second place in the Senior A league. (Story on first page, second section.)

Motorists Beware

Tow Away Zone Starts Monday

Motorists who leave their cars parked on certain sections of Pinnacle and Bridge rush hours may soon return to find their vehicles gone — courtesy of the police department.

Beginning Monday, the police will tow away any vehicles left on the north side of Bridge St. from Front to Church Streets and on the south side of Bridge St. from Front to Pinnacle Streets. No parking will be permitted on the west side of Pinnacle for 250 feet south of Station St.

The ruling, passed by city council last year, is effective Mondays through Fridays from 4 to 6 p.m. only.

Council's move is another attempt to unplug the traffic bottlenecks around the two major intersections of Bridge and Front Streets and Pinnacle and Station Street.

The "tow away zone" signs that went up Friday were made in the Public Works Yard by city employee Moe Huddleston. He is responsible for making all the city's traffic signs by a silk screen process on metal blanks.

IN MEMORIAM

MATTHEWS — In loving memory of our dear mother, Clara Matthews, who passed away on the 3rd of January, 1966.
"I am away, and I will not say,
That she is dead — she is just away."
With a cheery smile, and a wave of the hand,
She has wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair
It needs must be, since she lingers there.
And fain — O you, who the wild-ness years,
For the dear one stop and glad re-joice,
Think of her faring on, as dear In the love There as the love of Here;
Think of her still as the same, I say,
She is not dead — she is just away!
—Lovingly remembered by her daughter Kay, Mac and Robert, and Jack.
Jan-2

MATTHEWS — In loving memory of a dear Aunt, Cora Matthews, who passed away on the 3rd of January, 1966.
Till memory fades and life departs,
We will live never to forget you.
—Ever remembered by niece Alice and Gerald.

THOMPSON — In loving memory of a dear husband and father (Jack) who passed away Jan. 3, 1965.
His smiling face, a pleasant way,
What memories he left behind.
He had a kindly word for each,
And died most beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, but not now,
The day his hand in the better land,
Never to part again.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by his wife Linda and daughters Carole and Lynda.

NOYES — In loving memory of a dear mother, Evelyn Noyes who passed away on January 4, 1967.
If we had wings like birds above,
And heard the last sigh from your lips,
We would not have felt so bad,
We would have gone to you dear,
But we did not wish to part with you.
We only know you went away,
Your heart has ceased to beat,
We mourn for you in silence,
For words can not express
Our silent tears we used,
With memories we are blessed.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Dorothy, Alex and Stan.

NOYES — In loving memory of a dear mother, Evelyn Noyes who passed away Jan. 4, 1967.
When days are dark and friends are few,
Dear mother, how we often think of you.
Friends are friends if they are true,
We lost our best friend when we lost you.
—Always remembered by son Harold and Ruth.

STEWART — In loving memory of a dear husband, Al. Stewart who passed away three years ago, Jan. 3, 1967.
The years may wipe out many things,
But this they'll wipe out never,
The memory of a loving face,
Which we have gone to rest.
—Never forgotten by Al, sadly-missed grandchildren Donna and Stephen.

CULLEN — In loving memory of a dear grandfather and friend, Albert Sidney Cullen who passed away Jan. 3, 1968.
Within our store of memories,
There is place apart,
For no one else can ever be,
Quite so dear to our hearts.
—Sadly remembered Ann, John, Russell.

New Signs Go Up

Ralph Loney and Moe Huddleston of the Belleville Public Works Department made it official Friday afternoon - - - vehicles parked on portions of Bridge and Pinnacle Streets during rush hours will be towed away at their owners' expense. Although the men put the signs up yesterday, the bylaw won't go into effect until Monday.

Christmas Trees Now Hazard It's Time They Should Go

As families ushered in the New Year, the time most children dread is at hand — time to get rid of the Christmas tree.

It comes down with regret in most homes, but it is dispatched with as much efficiency as parents can muster.

The story does have a happy ending however, thanks to the department of public works.

Getting your Christmas tree out of the house may prove a slight problem, however its disposal, if you watch your timing, can turn out to be no problem at all.

Commencing Jan. 5 to be specific, the department of public works collects Christmas trees throughout the city, free of charge.

The only thing to watch is the timing — the department requests that you place your trees on the boulevard before 8 a.m. on the 5.

This service offered by the city is one, says Fire Chief Leo Culhane, "which should be taken advantage of."

The chief emphasized that since most trees were put up a week before Christmas, now is the time to dispose of them.

"At this stage, moft trees are dangerously dry, and present a definite fire hazard. I urge the public to take advantage of this opportunity to dispose of their Christmas trees through this service that is being offered," he added.

City Engineer W. C. Purcell explained that the trees will be collected and taken to the city disposal site where they will be burned.

He, termed public response to the service as generally "good", since most families get rid of their trees immediately after the New Year.

Kiwanians Seek Meeting Over Ameliasburg School

PICTON — A panel discussion between members of the Kiwanis Club and members of the Prince Edward county board of education was suggested recently by Kiwanian Jesse Mason.

The discussion would focus on the pros and cons of the proposed new elementary-secondary school to be built in Ameliasburg. Kiwanians agreed that such a discussion would "prove to be very educational".

In a brief press release last October school board members stated a delegation was scheduled to go to the department of education regional office in Kingston to discuss the Kente project further. The release also emphasized that there would be no definite statement by the board until costs were calculated with the taxpayer in mind.

Suffers Cuts In Accident

An RR 6 Trenton man is in Trenton Memorial Hospital this morning after his car went out of control on Highway 2 near Bayside early this morning.

Richard Davis, 22, went off the road at approximately 1:27 a.m. this morning and was taken to hospital with facial cuts and a severed ear.

Mr. Davis was alone in the car at the time of the accident.

Board chairman Holton Martin said last fall that all plans for the school were tentative, but a meeting had taken place between the municipal councils and the county board of education concerning the project. He added that the councils were in favor of obtaining cost figures. To date no cost figures for the proposed Kente project have been released.

No Legislation Contemplated

Snowmobile Owners Urged to Practise Voluntary Restraint

A "good neighbor policy" is the most effective means of regulating snowmobile use, is the opinion of Mayor J. Russell Scott.

The mayor left the impression that changes in provincial legislation on a city bylaw regulating use of the sports vehicles would be almost impossible to enforce.

"The snowmobile has created a sociological change in the community," he said. "It is now part of our way of life and there is no doubt it is here to stay."

Mayor Scott was commenting on the announcement that transport officials are studying the operation of Ontario's year-old snowmobile legislation to see if changes are needed to promote greater safety.

"Operators are going to have to use self control no legislation isn't necessary to curtail the use of their vehicles too much," the mayor said this morning.

He suggested three measures operators must heed to prevent legislative control of the vehicles.

"Many complaints would cease if they (the snowmobile operators) made an unwritten rule to stop using their machines after 10 p.m.," said Mayor Scott. "They should also resolve not to travel on roads with heavy automobile traffic, and to respect private property."

The mayor said local operators are "very good, when you consider the number in the community".

He said one reason might be easy access in Belleville to the country and the bay ice for snowmobiling.

Ald. Gerald Joyce, a snowmobile owner, said the issue is "a question of the bad apple spoiling the barrel".

"I see no reason why snowmobiles should be a menace to the public," he said. "I don't know how additional legislation would stop trespassing — we have laws against that now."

The alderman said he has received more calls from snowmobile owners who are afraid of the introduction of restrictive legislation than from citizens protesting snowmobile use.

"I have every sympathy with those whose privacy with regard to sleep is violated by nighttime snowmobile use," Ald. Joyce said. "If bylaws are necessary, I would like to see us start with one limiting the hours of operation within the municipality."

City traffic committee chairman Art Keegan feels no restrictive bylaws are necessary at the present time.

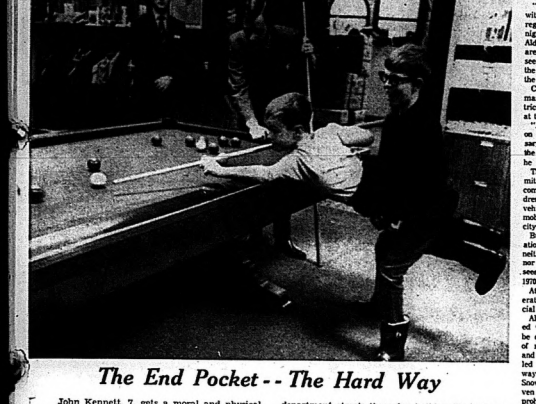
"But we are keeping a file on complaints and if necessary we will enact bylaws if the situation gets out of hand," he said this morning.

The alderman said his committee had received a few complaints, chiefly about children under 16 operating the vehicles and five or six snowmobiles at one time using a city street for a raceway.

But at the moment the situation is under control and neither the police department nor the traffic committee foresees a restrictive bylaw in 1970.

At present, snowmobile operation is regulated by a special act introduced a year ago.

All snowmobiles are required to be licensed. They can be operated on the shoulders of most provincial highways and are allowed on the travelled portion of certain highways, mainly in rural areas. Snowmobiles can also be driven on municipal roads unless prohibited by a local bylaw.



Snowmobile drivers on these roadways are required to be at least 16 and to carry insurance.

In announcing the legislative study, Ontario's minister of Transport Irwin Haskett said yesterday he isn't sure how much further he can go in placing restrictions on the vehicles.

"I can't really tell people what they can do with a play machine they may only use in their own backyard. It would be like licensing a tricycle," he commented.

Concerning the number of snowmobile accidents during the holidays, Mr. Haskett said he thought there were a number of irresponsible agents promoting the sale of the vehicles to children.

Asked if his review might include the requirement that operators be licensed, he said he doubted that would be examined. He pointed out that licenses are not required to operate motorboats.

Bancroft Still Awaits Decision on Liquor Vote

The village of Bancroft enters 1970 with a question mark over its corporate head — is it wet or dry?

Following a liquor vote Dec. 1, the village was officially wet — by one vote. The referendum drew 76.8 of the registered voters to the polls, with 619 voting in favor of licensed dining lounges and 409 voting against. The figure of 619 is just one more than the 60 per cent majority needed in a liquor referendum.

However, the manager of the negative side in the referendum, Rev. Roy Campbell asked for a recount in view of the slim majority. Bancroft's clerk-treasurer Jack Gordon delivered the sealed ballot boxes to the chambers of Judge J. C. Anderson in Belleville about three weeks ago.

The recount is still in progress, and Judge Anderson says he may have an announcement next week.

In the meantime, Bancroft has no licensed dining lounges or beverage rooms, although facilities are available just over the village line in adjacent Faraday township.

Thomas Joseph Gajdicar, B.Sc. M.Sc., son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Gajdicar of RR 3, Belleville received his degree of Doctor of Philosophy from the University of Toronto at the December 5 convocation. Dr. Gajdicar and his wife are now residing in Trieste, Italy where he is doing postdoctorate work at the International Centre for Theoretical Physics.

Autos Checked

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Smoke observers snared 41 vehicles Friday in Erie County's one-day crackdown on automotive air pollution.

Seven two-man inspection teams patrolled Erie County highways Friday. Only one team a day will continue the patrols, the health department says.

The 41 vehicles included 26 trucks, two buses and 13 cars.

A Look at the 70s

Minis Here to Stay, Hair to Go And Student Unrest to Cool It

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

After the conclusion of the turbulent sixties, humanity is beginning to assess and predict what will occur in the seventies.

A number of questions plague mankind, questions prompted by events of the decade that has just been completed.

Internationally and nationally there are problems to be solved and many things that could possibly change, as well as questions to be answered.

Will racial prejudice continue in the United States?

Will French Quebec still pose a problem for the rest of Canada?

What will happen in space now that the United States has landed astronauts on the moon?

Will youthful dissent become more severe, less severe or remain in its present strength?

What will be the fate of present clothing styles—the mini-skirt, the maxi and male long hair?

Will the world continue to pollute itself and will anything be done to stop it?

The Intelligencer polled three factions of society in a search for some ideas and predictions concerning what the future decade might hold. A businessman, a housewife and a teenager offered their ideas on the seventies.

Generally the three unidentified individuals differed in most opinions. Only the space program produced an almost unanimous response of confidence and optimism.

"By 1999 we'll have seen Mars explored," the businessman said. "I think we'll also see a space platform to explore space. The landing on Mars won't originate from Cape Kennedy."

He also predicted that "the Yanks are going to get out of Vietnam" and that there would be a loosening of cold war troubles.

Concerning styles, he said he thought the miniskirt would be around for awhile yet. However, hairstyles (male) would return to real "horns".

But if the cold war was going to decrease in intensity and the Vietnam war cease, the outlook was still not that bright.

"I think there will be more youth dissent," he said. "I don't think it is a rebellion of youth, but they are concerned about their future."

"They know that war is coming and it is hell and they don't want any more Dunkirks."

With instant news and communication, he felt that young people saw death first hand and that they didn't know what to expect in the future.

But he was more optimistic about the pollution situation.

"I think that you're going to find The United States government spending billions of dollars to crackdown on pollution.

The housewife saw the United States trying to find out about Mars and possibly making a soft landing on the planet.

"We'll suppose the United States will have a manned space station on the moon," she added

She was optimistic about youth dissent. "I don't think youth dissent will continue. I think they have upset things and made people aware that war is wrong. I predict that youth will become more conservative by the end of the seventies."

Fashion would also become more conservative, she said. "Styles always change. I don't think we'll see the long hair at the end of the seventies that we see now. Skirt lengths will be somewhere in between the mini and the maxi."

She also felt that styles would cater more to the older woman in the 1970s.

A continuation of political upheavals in Canada and the United States was another prediction. She expected more trouble with Quebec.

"I think we'll always have war," she added.

Pollution was one of her main concerns. "I think it simply has to stop. We have a beautiful country. They'll crackdown on it."

"I think society is realizing that it can't just make things and then let them do harm, but I don't think the government will do anything unless the people want it."

The teen-age prophet saw a similar pollution situation. "I don't think the pollution problem will be solved until it is actually pushed into the government's face.

"The only time people resolve the problem is when they start to die off," he said.

She predicted that the Russians would land on the moon, following the lead of the United States. She felt that the Americans would develop a manned space station but would not land on Mars during the seventies.

Youth dissent, she predicted would follow different patterns in the United States and Canada.

"It will continue at the same rate in the United States, but slow down in Canada. I think the young people are beginning to realize it doesn't do any good to protest."

Politically, she had some emphatic predictions. "Trudeau is not going to last. He's going to resign or get kicked out."

She also predicted that Quebec would separate from the rest of Canada during the next decade and that Canada would let it happen.

The United States would continue to have its problems in her eyes.

"I think they're too proud to pull out of Vietnam in the seventies. The Negro problem will improve but will not be resolved," she said.

Speaking of fashion she prophesied the fall of the maxi.

"The mini will always be in, but with a space look. Males will always have long hair. I don't think it will go short. Male clothing will also have a space look about it and flare pants and exotic shirts will continue."

A Measure of Progress

In Belleville in 1969 new residential construction accounted for $4,117,400 of the $9,679,379 figure for home and industrial building.

Total permits issued, as announced earlier this week, numbered 475 and the physical evidence of this growth is all around. Brooke Bond and the other big plants being erected are familiar to most of us, but it is in home construction perhaps that the population growth is most evident.

A drive around the city these days is revealing. The new apartment building being erected on West Bridge Street reflects the growing demand for this type of dwelling. But that is not all by many means, for whole new suburbs are growing up.

The Hillcrest Road area off Dundas Street East is an example. The homes there are of recent construction and more are going up. The designs are contemporary and appealing; varied too, and it is good to see the modern home in Canada getting away from the rather stultified, box-like structures of the more recent past.

A glance at the City Directory of 1968 reveals but three names in Joyce Crescent in the area of which we speak. Now the crescent is practically complete; where before there was vacant ground, albeit earmarked for building, now it has all the appearance of comfortable modern living.

The homes are indicative not only of Belleville's population growth but also its increasing affluence, which in turn is a cameo of the overall wealth of the nation.

At the same time such homes are also a reminder that not everyone shares in this material wellbeing and that not only does a housing problem still exist in Canada but homes of more modest proportions and cost are needed by many.

But whatever its dimensions, in terms of the city's varying needs and the requirements of its citizens, the fact that this growth is taking place at all and in such proportions is a matter for satisfaction and for confidence.

Costs More

Maybe it is the long-term result of former President Nkrumah's extravagant ways, whereby money was poured into image-making ventures to the neglect of basics like agriculture, but five years of bad cocoa crops in Ghana will probably mean smaller chocolate bars for Canadians.

That is the word from a number of manufacturers. The shortage of cocoa beans has boosted the price to more than 50 cents a pound from 15½ cents during the last four years.

It is the same in the United States, as witness the passing of an American institution — the five-cent Hershey bar. Hershey Foods Corporation (they have a plant in Smiths Falls) announced recently they were discontinuing their 5-cent chocolate candy bar.

It was the foundation on which Milton S. Hershey built his chocolate empire.

Ah well, coffee has gone up, now cocoa — and so it goes on.

Think Positively

To think positively and make the best of things is one of the best qualities of mind and character. We were reminded of this by Governor-General Michener in his New Year address.

Mr. Michener spoke of the seventies as a time for the best that youth can put forward. For those who had "past the meridian," however, well the inference was that not all of us would make it to the end of the decade.

The Governor-General, however, was not admitting he would not still be around playing tennis and doing push-ups when another ten years elapse. And he paused on the words of the poet, "Gather Ye Rosebuds While Ye May," and reminded us that we live in an "energizing climate which keeps us all on the jump." And so we do!

An Artist's View

To a youngster an afternoon is a long time; the whole world stretches before him and each day is a new eternity, a new source of wonderment. But to an old man the days flash past just like minutes. That is the mood of the paintings of Quebec artist J. P. Lemieux. His work — portrayed in one of those documentaries the CBC does so well, on New Year's Day — captures young and old against a background of space and time; the essence of life and death and immortality on canvas.

Union Publication Takes A Look at CNR Finances

Canadian Railwayman

Perhaps now that the Trudeau Government has agreed to send the question of CNR financing to the Commons Transport Committee for study and scrutiny, worthwhile action may follow.

"Every year," Lec Benjamin (NDP — Regina-East, Centre), said in the Commons, "we put up with the spectacle of the Parliament of Canada bailing out the CNR from under debt charges that it should not be expected to carry.

"When the CNR was formed in 1923, and ever since, the deck has been stacked against it in favor of the economic pirates who promoted and invested in several railways that subsequently went belly up. The deck has been stacked to make sure that those people are paid off. They have been, but the people of Canada have been paying ever since, and are still paying."

Noting that the CNR had shown a railway operating profit in 17 of the last 24 years and that in 21 of those 24 years, after taking in income from other operations such as hotels and telegraph services, it had shown an operating profit, and that losses had only occurred in 1958, 1960 and 1962, Mr. Benjamin said that in 1968 the CNR had an operating profit of $41,274,438 but that interest on its debt was $70,450,969, leaving it $29,176,530 in the red.

So long, he added, as the CNR is required to operate under such conditions it can never operate efficiently and can never provide an effective transportation system for the Canadian people.

Total number of CNR employees has declined from the peak in 1952 of 131,297 employees to today's figure of 85,340, a loss of some 46,000 employees.

Pointing out that while the CNR and the people of Canada continue to pay dearly, its competitor, the CPR thrives on gifts from the people of Canada which since 1881, have returned dividends to this corporation and its shareholders amounting to hundreds of millions of dollars.

"I think," he said, "one could safely say that they have been in excess of 13 billion. Surely this kind of situation in our rail transportation is grossly unfair to the management and to the employees of the CNR and to all the people of Canada."

On pensions for retired CNR employees, Mr. Benjamin said that while governments and the CNR management have always been able to find ways of persuading this Parliament to provide moneys for equipment and buying up old boats, they have done nothing about the pitiable pensions received by retired CN employees.

"As of October 7 last year," , he said, (in a return filed in answer to a question of Mr. Stanley Knowles, NDP-Winnipeg North Centre), "there were, believe it or not, 388 retired CNR employees receiving less than $25 a month.

There were another 639 receiving between $25 and $29 a month. There were another 1,301 receiving between $30 and $39 a month. There were another 1,052 receiving between $40 and $49 a month, and until one arrives at the figure of $50 a month there is a total of 7,715 retired CNR employees receiving less than $100 a month as pension . . ."

"The first commitment," Mr. Benjamin emphasized, "should be that the government and the CNR management will bring in a measure in the next session of Parliament to provide for an increase in the pensions of retired CNR employees.

"The second commitment should be that the government will bring in measures in the next session of this Parliament that will relieve the Canadian National system of at least the long-term debt which amounts to $1.9 billion; in other words, that this be written off the books. We do not want any more of those half - made commitments. Yes, we are going to consider it seriously,' and 'Yes, we will announce it in due time as government policy,' for that will take too many years . . ."

J. Clarke, A. E. Thrasher and Lt.-Col. E. D. O'Flynn. At a later meeting the directors re-appointed W. Jeffers Diamond as secretary-treasurer.

Windsor's Concern

Litter—A National Problem

Windsor Star

Litter is a problem with which any city must cope. It is evident that Windsor and the surrounding area are not doing a good job in this regard.

No doubt most of the problem is the John Wilkin, director of operations for Windsor's department of public works, says: "People are not litter conscious."

However, the incredible filth which litters many of our streets cannot help but be noticed by Windsor residents. Is it that Windsor residents have become so inured to seeing litter-lined curbs, garbage - filled drainage ditches, and garbage dumps in open lots that they no longer care?

The condition of this city is not only a reflection on the city itself but also on the rest of the country because Windsor is a window of Canada for many American citizens who visit it. Certainly we cannot take any pride in its appearance despite such attractions as Jackson and Alexander parks. The latter two cannot begin to offset the poor image made by a litter - lined Ouellette Ave. or Riverside Dr., on Americans who pass through the community.

Obviously the responsibility lies with the city's management to ensure that the city is clean. This will entail improved street cleaning services and an all-out campaign to educate Windsor residents about their rules in keeping this city clean.

Such a program cannot but improve condition of the city even if there is only a small increase in effort on the part of the city administration and the community as a whole. It is something which requires immediate attention.

Canadian Documentaries Score

Montreal Gazette

In Bilbao, Spain, Canada recently was awarded another prize for documentary films. Canadiags may find the title of the winning work, "Cosmic Zoom," a little difficult to be proud about, but the important thing is that this country continues to win universal acclaim in his specialized field.

Very well. If there is something which we have a talent to do better than most everyone else, let's build on that talent. Instead of trying to play the whole field, competing with the multi - million - dollar efforts of Hollywood and Rome, of Paris and London, let's concentrate on what we already do very well and do it just that much better.

Why shouldn't Canadians make the very best documentaries in the world? The Swiss, with half our population, have the reputation for being best in several lines.

Canadians make best snowmobiles in the world, and the best snow-removers, too; they make the best bush aircraft and the best light turbines, and our fashions are coming along very well, too. The key has always been the same: specialize.

In a recent shot on a "data explosion," there is going to be a great hunger for documentary films.

Canada knows how.

Letter to Editor-

The Deer Population

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In an article that appeared in the December 13 issue of your paper, Mr. Cheshire, a wildlife official reported there was a large deer population in the Tweed forest district. Most deer hunters disagree, in fact some hunters think the deer population is dangerously low.

Recently we talked with a resident of north Hastings and inquired about the number of deer in his area. He stated there were not nearly as many as in former years.

The Department of Lands and Forests apparently do not think that wolves kill many deer. When small animals become scarce, then what are the wolves going to eat? Some members of County Council have expressed concern about the wolf problem, which many people think is getting serious.

Beaver are also indirectly a threat to deer because they are flooding many areas, thus depriving the deer of food and shelter.

If during next hunting season the weather just happens to be ideal and the deer kill is still far below average, then what excuse will the wildlife officials have?

In 1968 the Ontario government placed a five dollar increase on deer licences and a two dollar increase on resident hunting licences. How much of this additional revenue is being spent on actual wildlife conservation?

We sincerely hope that Mr. Cheshire's estimate of up to 30,000 deer in the Tweed district is reasonably close, and not just wishful thinking.

A. DEERHUNTER.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Herbert Hoover was named director-general of relief work for the whole of Europe 51 years ago today —in 1919—by the Allied governments. Since the beginning of the war he had been in charge of the American committee for relief of the devastated areas of Belgium and France, disbursing nearly $1,000,000. Even after the Treaty of Versailles—which ended the First World War—was signed, the future president of the United States organized volunteer relief groups to aid famine-stricken eastern Europe. In 10 years he organized distribution of about 25,000 tons of food, clothing and medical supplies.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—American armored troops smashed 5½ miles northeast of Bastogne toward St. Vith, beating into outskirts of Michamps and into Malster Woods through stubborn German resistance; Chinese troops recaptured Wanting, Burma road border town.

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945-United States 1st Army troops advanced in a new offensive into the north flank of a German bulge south of Grandmesnil; the Nipiwan Park was torpedoed 17 miles off Halifax; Russians took 277 more blocks of buildings in Budapest, making a total of 1,300 blocks in Russian hands.

Training for Dropouts

Vancouver Sun

What a delight it is to find an opportunity to praise the B.C. government — and Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan at that — for not only having an imaginative and constructive idea but putting it to work.

But Mr. Kiernan's wilderness job - training camp for high school dropouts offers exactly such an opportunity, and it's a pleasure to seize it.

What's happening on Vancouver Island is that, under the government parks people, a bunch of youngsters are learning to build not just a park but a livelihood. The idea is that they will work for salary for 10 months — they travel trucks, bulldozers, front-end loaders and so on — and by the time another summer rolls around they will have the knowhow, discipline and self-reliance to make a living for themselves.

Capital Feels Out Of Things

Ottawa Journal

Not that Ottawa feels quite like a neglected child, not quite but 10 inches of snow stacked beside Vermont's 40 or 50 and Quebec's 30 don't do a thing for our winter reputation. When even parts of New York state, dull places like Albany and Oneonta, receive twice as much as the Ottawa area, it's enough to give us an inferiority complex. A few years ago when 18 inches simply wasn't a storm. All the fussing here over the weekend was if Ottawa was trying to make something out of nothing to salvage a bit of honor.

The cruellest cut of all was Montreal's 29.9 inches — not 30 inches, 29.9. When a better snow-measuring device is made, the McGill University Weather Observatory will have it. Many have it, but right now it's making do with something which can pin down sinking, drifting, blowing snow to one-tenth of one inch!

Era of Christendom Over Says Churchman

NEW YORK (AP) — In external dimensions, Christianity in the United States is falling behind.

American church membership is sagging. Attendance has slipped. Other signs of decline in church influence have appeared, not only in the U.S. but also abroad.

As many religious scholars see it, believers may become an ever smaller minority in the world.

The "era of Christendom is over," says Rev. Eugene Carson Blake, general secretary of the World Council of Churches. "We are in a secularizing age, and the idea of the church dominating culture or dominating government has gone. This is complete."

However, a new image of a "servant church"—that works simply for the causes of men's good rather than exerting powers over their institutions—is emerging among many Christian thinkers as the vision of the church in those ahead.

In their view, it may be a "church in diaspora"—a scattered minority in society. The description initially was used by German Catholic theologian Karl Rahner, and has since been echoed by many others.

"The plain fact is this—Christians today are being outgrown, outdistanced, outbred," wrote Rev. Canon Howard A. Johnson, an Anglican theologian, after a world tour studying the status of Christianity.

"Unless counterforces are set in motion, it may be that proportionally, Christianity is doomed to shrink more and more and become a minority movement with diminishing capacity for influencing culture and history."

A United Nations report noted that Christians constituted a third of the world's population at the start of the century, but now are only 31 per cent, and continuation of that same downtrend would reduce this to 22 per cent by the century's end.

Bishop Odd Hagen of Stockholm, a leader in the World Methodist Council, has said a projection of the most recent figures indicates that "only nine per cent of the world's population, by the year 2000, will call itself Christian."

Most major denominations in the U.S. have slipped in membership growth in the last few years.

The most recent statistics show that 63.2 per cent of the U.S. population now are church members, compared with 64.4 per cent the year before, near where membership had hovered for three years, ending a long, steady climb.

Nearly all major denominations, Protestant and Roman Catholic, last year slowed to their lowest gains in decades. Some, such as United Methodists, United Presbyterians, American Baptists and the Lutheran Church of America, had declines.

WORST FIRST

RUBIACEA, Brazil (AP) — The priest said the final blessing and the newlyweds stepped from the altar to greet 200 guests. A strong wind blew in several windows of the village church and the roof, weakened by days of rain, collapsed. One person was injured.

WOMANLY PATHS

"Women differ from each other in their capacities and their needs."— Virginia Graham.

"Yes, for me there's nothing like being a housewife, mother and career-woman. I have to be free to think, act and express myself, as I see fit," declares one Belleville housewife, while another declares:

"Just doing the routine of housework, looking after the children, doing a bit of volunteer work, seems about the extent of what I'm able to do. It seems enough self-expression for me. I really enjoy being just what I am."

Whatever our tastes, desires and demands as women, a wise, gentle old lady says with much conviction: "We, all of us, regardless of what we do, — need to be a woman as well."

"Just how?"

She gives four rules:

"Regardless of how busy you are, daily do something, for your house; for your garden; for someone outside the family; for yourself."

"Daily? To do something for the house?"

"Yes, the daily round might be a standard. A delightful, beloved painting. An exquisite piece of furniture. Or a priceless ornament of some kind; something always there, that gives an uplift, a pleasure. Or things of the daily kind: a piece of colorful knitting on the go; making sachet-bags for clothes closets; or bowls of bulbs ready by Christmas. Things that are fun and life one pleasure to do. It must be enjoyable."

"What about gardening?"

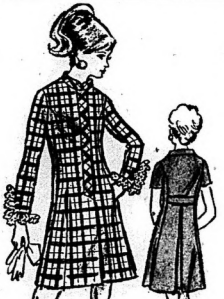
"The point is have an interest in growing things of nature. A flower box, if nothing else is possible. But outside, where it's good to be in the sun, work with the soil, be a part of it. have the feel of the seasons. Even a very few minutes a day . . .and enjoy it."

"And something for somebody else?"

"No, this is not a case of being a Lady Bountiful, but rather of practising the Bible's reminder, of casting bread on the waters. Doing for others allows you to keep in touch with fellow-men, and they with you. It's an ebb and flow — and makes you live. Somehow bread cast on the water always comes back buttered."

"The last — to do something for refreshen yourself?"

"This does not suggest, things outside of yourself, as a cup of tea, a concert, or a smoke. Rather it is deeper, more valuable, more needed. It has to do with the spirit, the mind, the heart. To read or memorize a favorite poem to say privately during the day; to play or listen to some music; to do nothing; to walk leisurely instead of hurriedly, to be alone, relaxed, if even for only ten minutes; when small plans of the day fall away, give way to larger vision which is a perpetual power or refreshment — peace."



She added:

"These four little rules, or unwritten hints, if followed as guide-lines in one's world as a woman— make a world of difference. I know, for my life was formed by them — when another wise, old, old lady — told me, when I was young and gay. It keeps a woman fit, as a person who must be the heart of the home as her husband is the head, regardless of her capabilities, desires and need for self-expression."

Takes Oil Truck For Joy Ride

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto woman who celebrated New Year's Day by taking an oil truck for a seven-block ride was put on a year's probation Friday and ordered not to drink during the period.

Ella M. Cartier, 31, was under the influence of liquor, her lawyer said, when she took the truck. She pleaded guilty to taking it without the owner's permission.

MR. AND MRS. VERNON SARGEANT

Sargeant – Bridge

Holloway St. United Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Patricia Ann Bridge, Belleville and Vernon William Sargeant, son of Mrs. William J. Sargeant, also of daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rex Bridge, Belleville and Vernon William Lamb.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Maureen Bridge and Miss Catherine Miller.

The bridegroom was attended by William Hickson and his brother, Kenneth Sargeant.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Canadian Legion Hall.

Earliest Teapots from China; Were Made of Porcelain

Picture Credit: Dundurn Castle Restoration.

The earliest teapots were Chinese and made of porcelain. Bottger, the man who first perfected porcelain in Europe, devoted much of his production to teapots. Europeans quickly developed other styles which were executed in china, pottery and silver.

Chinese teapots were small, intended for one person. Early European teapots were small and "bullet" shaped. (An 18th century bullet was ball-shaped not cone-shaped). An inverted pear shape with a small base followed. The sizes of teapots gradually increased and by the end of the 18th century were much larger, with straight sides and broad flat bottoms. Such teapots required trivets to keep the table from being marked.

By 1800, ball feet were added to the bottom of the pot, as shown in the small metal pot illustrated, and the trivet was dispensed with. Pots became generally larger and more bulbous.

In 1837 emigrants were advised to pack ¼ of a pound of tea to last for a nine week trip to Canada. The traveller was also advised to bring a small white iron (stone) pot and small white iron(ne bas-in, (meaning bowl), large enough to hold porridge and small enough to be used as a teacup. By the end of nine weeks at sea it must have been hard to decide whether the bowl contained tea flavored porridge or porridge-flavored tea.

Tea drinking was brought to Europe in 1559 by the Portuguese. It was not widely used until the next century. In 1665 Thomas Garway of London advertised tea for sale at 16 to 30 shillings a pound.

By 1728 the price had dropped. Bohea was advertised at 10 to 20 shillings, green tea at 12 to 30 shillings. In those days it was a very expensive commodity, kept under lock and key by the lady of the house, to be doled out when required.

Black teas and green teas come from the same plant. Black tea is prepared by allowing the leaves to dry in the air and partially ferment, then the leaves are roasted. Bohea, Congou, Oolong, Pekoe and Souchong are all black teas.

Gunpowder or Pearl and Hyson are green teas. They are made by roasting the leaves as soon as they are picked. Most housewives made their own blend of tea from a combination of different types of black and green teas.

Wife Entitled To One-half Net Assets

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The Minnesota Supreme Court upheld general terms of a $1,500,000 divorce award Friday, ruling that the wife is entitled to half her husband's net assets— even though she has substantial funds of her own.

The ruling involved a divorce granted in 1968 to Mrs. Jean C. Bolenbach, wife of Williard M. Bollenbach, Jr.

In a 26-page opinion by Justice Robert Sheran, the court upheld a lump-sum property split worth about $1,500,000 to Mrs. Bollenbach.

The court returned the case to Ramsey County district court for consideration of a specific plan to carry out the division of the husband's assets.

Bollenback had asked his wife to initiate the divorce action in 1967 and did not contest it. He appealed to the Supreme Court, however, on grounds that the monetary awards to his wife went beyond her needs and amounted to "punitive" damages.

Hadassah-Wizo Groups Will Hold Convention

"Action, not rhetoric is the dynamic concept motivating the 22rd biennial convention of the Hadassah Wizo Organization of Canada," said Mrs. Hyman Wiesenthal, National President, in discussing the theme "Deeds Determine Destiny," which has been adopted as the slogan for this national event to be held at the Hotel Vancouver, Vancouver, B.C., from January 10th to 14th, 1970. "In a rapidly changing world, formulas must be found to keep pace with the demands of the times. The convention brings together all leaders from coast to coast for a concentrated period of discussion and evaluation of all projects with the objective of a national consensus in all fields of endeavor."

Problems and responsibilities are carefully scrutinized at educational sessions, workshops, seminars and consultational forums. The decision taken in Vancouver will govern and influence activities for the next two years.

Deliberations will introduce many innovations in procedure, new ideas have been formulated which have helped to streamline activities, so that the Organization may utilize to an even greater degree the unique talents, energies and creativity found among its leadership.

The convention is not all work. Many glittering events will be held with world renowned personalities as guests of honor including the Excellency Miss Angie Brooks, President United Nations Assembly; His Excellency Michael Comay of Israel, Political Advisor to the Minister of Foreign Affairs and Ambassador-At-Large; Zubin Mehta, famous conductor, who will receive the Rebecca Seuf Humanitarian Award for outstanding service to Israel; Mansheim Shapiro of New York, Sociologist Educator, Mr. Aian Rose, Montreal, Assistant Director, Canadian Jewish Congress; Mrs. Samuel Rothberg, Illinois, outstanding Philanthropist. Mr. Abe Tooch, Israel's Aliyah Director in Canada; Mr. Shlomo Argov, Minister of Israel in Washington, D.C. and many others.

Inaugurated in 1917, this is the first time that Hadassah-Wizo of Canada has scheduled a national convention on the West Coast. Great enthusiasm has been engendered in the membership of 16,000, and it is anticipated that 800 accredited delegates will come from 14 centres, from St. John's, Newfoundland to Victoria, B.C. to participate in these deliberations.

Many delegates will be accompanied by their husbands, for whom special events and tours have been arranged.

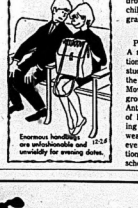
Sprackett Family Holds Annual Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. James Sprackett of Gilmour were hosts recently to their family for the seventeenth annual Christmas dinner. Guests were their three sons and a daughter. There are 13 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren. All were present except a granddaughter and a grandson and their families.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sprackett; Mr. and Mrs. Don Sprackett; Mr. and Mrs. Clayton M. McKenzie, Gilmour; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sprackett and Bill and Mr. and Mrs. Ray Peters, Oshawe; Mr. and Mrs. Ted Sprackett, Tony, John, Danny and Kelly; Mr. and Mrs. Tracy King, Kristen and Jamie; Mr. and Mrs. Brian Plumbe of Belleville; Rev. and Mrs. Keith Sprack. ett, Hamilton; Cheryl and David of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Anderson, Karen, Kristen and Kirt, Gananoque; Mr. and Mrs." Pat Hogan, Jennifer and Timmy Hogan, Belleville and Mr. Ian Thompson, Huntsville; Mr. and Mrs. Ron McKenzie, Danny and Barry, Cardiff; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Jenkins, Tim and Theresa and Judy Jenkins of Belleville. Also present were Mrs. Sprackett's brother, Jack Mc Gee and Peter Jeffery of Toronto.

After dinner, the children received gifts from under the tree. Instead of exchanging gifts the adults, for the past few years, have sponsored a Korean child each year.

Couple Celebrate 62nd Wedding Anniversary



NAPANEE — Christmas Day had a double significance for Mr. and Mrs. John Benn of Mill St., as it was the 62nd anniversary of their marriage. Because Mr. Benn is just recovering from illness, the day was spent quietly, although they were visited briefly by many of their relatives and friends. All seven of their children were with them at some time during the day.

Mr. and Mrs. Benn, who was Essie Young, both had homes in the Roblin area, but both were working in Napanee when they met. They were married by Rev. Charles De Mille at the parsonage of the Hay Bay charge. For six years they lived here, and then began farming in the Forest Mills area, where all their children were born and grew up. Twelve years ago they retired and have since lived in Napanee. They are members of Trinity United church.

Mrs. Benn noted Wednesday that if all their family were together there would be 99 of them at least, and that there has been only one break in the family. A great-grandson was drowned. There are 25 grandchildren, and 51 or 52 great-grandchildren.

QUESTION OF DRESS

PONCE, Puerto Rico (AP)— A slacks for coeds resolution of the Catholic University student council is opposed by the Catholic Action Youth Movement and other campus groups, co student president Antonio Maldenado is thinking of holding a referendum asking girls how they feel about wearing pants to class. Whatever the outcome, administration permission is unlikely, a school spokesman said.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE ANANNY

Ananny – O'Connor

Rev. Stanley Lieut, officiating at the ceremony was Father Guzely. Organist was Rev. Sister Mary Avila and soloist was Bill Mann.

The bride, given in marriage by a close family friend, James Gratton, wore a white silk velvet dress with an empire waistline, long tapered sleeves and stand - up collar. The billowing skirt was caught up in soft folds at the back and the floor-length veil of silk illusion was attached to a circlet of white flowers of peau de soie. Her flowers were a trailing bouquet of red roses and ivy.

Maid of honor was Miss Anne O'Connor, sister of the bride. She wore a red velvet empire-style dress with a stand up collar and a wedding band headpiece in red velvet trimmed with holly.

Bridesmaids were Mary O'Connor, sister of the bride and Fay Ananny, sister of the bridegroom. They were identically attired in the maid of honor with a sprig of holly in their hair. Each carried a white fur muff adorned with sprigs of holly.

Best man was Lieut. Robert Ogilvy of Ottawa. Ushers were Lieut. Douglas Martin, CFB Trenton and Lieut. Charles King, CFB Borden.

For the reception held at the Pinnacle Room, Hotel Quinte, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a classic tailored two-piece suit of beige and gold brocaded peau de soie. In her hair was a cluster of holly leaves sprayed gold. Gold accessories and a corsage of orange talisman roses completed her attire.

The bridegroom's mother wore a two-piece ensemble of navy crepe and green embossed brocade with black accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip to points east, the bride changed into a green melange worsted ensemble featuring a coat with a double-breasted effect. The Napoleonic look enhanced the semi-fitted bodice of the coat. The dress in matching fabric was a fitted sleeveless sheath with a high jeweled neckline. Her corsage was a bronze 'mums and accessories were bronze leather.

The couple will reside at 3 Village Dr., Apt. 8, Belleville.

Where There's Smoke There's Danger

By DORIS CLARK

For the first time, 28 Western Hemisphere nations have joined forces in asserting that "cigarette smoking should not be presented as harmless". They are calling for a hard assessment of warnings given to the cigarette smoker on dangers to his health, and what still could be done to warn of health hazards.

The officials declare in no uncertain terms that it is "now well established that cigarette smoking is an important cause of, or a substantial factor in contributing to, premature deaths from bronchopulmonary cancer, coronary disease, chronic bronchitis and chronic respiratory insufficiency."

Among other things, they are trying to determine what measures can be taken to limit advertising and whether smoking can be curtailed in public gatherings — including their own! — News Note from Pan American Health Organization

* * *

Dear Doris: The other night as I was putting dinner dishes in the dishwasher with Kenny helping me, I was remembering with nostalgia a poem about a little boy who went to a telegraph office. He wanted to send a message to his mother, who had gone to Heaven.

You used to recite it to me when I was a little boy and drying dishes for you. Do you suppose you could remember it well enough to write it out for me? I want to tell it to my own little fellow! — Pete

Dear Nephew Pete: Indeed I can, and already have. When my secretary typed it out she said she wept a few tears over it herself. She loved it.

I had a few extra copies made just in case anybody else would like this seven-verse narrative poem. The title is "The Telegram".

* * *

Dear Doris: I am 15 years old; my boy friend is 17. Don is very smart in school and looks forward to a promising future. He doesn't drink, smoke or use bad language.

My mother knows indirectly that we date on weekends. My big problem is that I lie to her about who I'm with but I'm not. a very good liar and she finds out. I want to tell her right out what I'm doing but I can not, because sometimes it seems that she doesn't mind what I'm doing and other times she doesn't like it at all.

I would like to add that there is no sex in our relationship because he doesn't believe in it and no more do I until marriage. — Want To Tell

Dear Want: I'd take a dim view of any mother of a girl 15 who didn't want to know for sure where that girl was.

If Don is the boy for you, it will work out. Take courage in hand, tell her about him, ask her to set down a few rules about curfews and dating. Have him call for you and meet the family.

This is the grown-up way to act. Start practising it and lose all that guilty misery.

* * *

What's troubling you? Putting it on paper to Doris is the first step towards solving your problem.

Women Being Lured Into Smoking Cigars

NEW YORK (AP) — The cigar people think they're on to something in teaching women to smoke. Already there are an estimated 100,000 women cigar smokers in the United States and that leaves millions more to cultivate as customers.

Don't for a minute underestimate the seriousness of their intentions. With cigarettes under attack as hazards to health, the cigar people feel that their chances of luring women to the bigger weed are greatly improved.

They have redesigned their product to make it slimmer, more graceful in appearance and less obtrusive. They have mentholated it, flavored it with bourbon, rum, sherry and other fruits and have put plastic tips on the end.

In order to promote the product, they have named a former beauty queen, Judy Lynn Prince, as assistant director of the Cigar Institute of America, a job that requires her to tour the country, talking and puffing.

And just so the ladies won't ruin the act before it really catches on, the institute officials have issued rules of etiquette for female smokers.

Among the bits of advice:

—Remove the cigar from the mouth between puffs.

—Never permit the cigar to dangle from your lips.

—Wait until everyone is finished eating before lighting up.

—Remove the discarded stub from the ashtray promptly.

—Never smoke a cigar on the streets.

Until the last few years, the rules almost might have included: Don't let anybody ever see you smoke, or smoke only in the privacy of your own boudoir.

Ann Landers

Love and Tenderness Could Solve Problem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last night they had one of their ceiling-cracking arguments. They were both shouting in an attempt to get a message across. Neither one was listening to the other.

ANN LANDERS

My mother accused my father of thinking only of himself. My father accused my mother of being cold. He said she didn't appreciate anything. It's a shame they weren't listening to each other because they were both saying the same thing. Each wanted the other to show more affection and understanding. It makes me sad that they have forgotten they were once young and very much in love.

If I had the nerve I'd say, "Look, Mom and Dad, if you want something good out of your marriage, you'd better put something good into it. If each of you would give the other some real love and tenderness, you'd get it back. Try it." — SALISBURY, MD.

* * *

DEAR SAL: "From the mouths of babes . . . " Thank you very much.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our entire unit (we are stationed in Bamberg, Germany) reads your column in Stars and Stripes. A letter signed Montreal Brown Eyes set off a wild debate. The first sergeant said the boss had no business offering trips to Las Vegas as prizes to his top salesmen unless their wives were included. The sergeant said he would not have accepted such a prize, even if it mean his job.

A few of the guys sided with the sergeant. Most of us (including me) said it would be a real treat to go someplace with just guys. No dames. There are 227 pairs of eyes waiting for your answer. Should the prize trips have included the wives? — MAJORITY VERSUS THE FIRST SARGE.

* * *

DEAR MAJORITY: Most sales prizes include wives. This particular one did not. If a winner wants to pay the little woman's way and take her along, fine. If he would enjoy a trip with just the guys, I say, let him go.

"Montreal Brown Eyes" was furious because her husband wanted to go without her. She threatened to follow him on the next plane and asked me to back her up. I told her to stay home. No wife ever kept her husband faithful by following him or attaching herself like a barnacle.

I do think, though, that the boss was shortsighted. Nothing is more important in motivating an employee than his family's enthusiastic support of his job.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: For twenty years I have gone with my husband to social gatherings, business functions, civic meetings and what have you. Eugene never introduces me to anybody. His excuse is, "Oh, I thought you knew everyone."

Recently Eugene was named an executive with a large firm. We've been going to a number of parties where he knows the people and I don't. It is the same story. Last night I told him I think he is ashamed of me. He accused me of having an oversized inferiority complex.

Set him straight, will you please? — MRS. WUTTZER-NAME.

DEAR MRS. WUTTZER: If Eugene has been taking you to social gatherings, business functions and civic meetings for twenty years, he isn't ashamed of you.

Some people have a hangup about making introductions. They do it poorly and avoid it whenever possible. Obviously Eugene is one of these people. You should have recognized this long ago.

Stop depending on him. When you see an unfamiliar face, extend your hand and introduce yourself. No one will resent it. In fact, they will appreciate it. And so will Eugene.

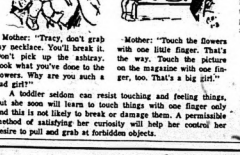
Recipe Which Calls for Frozen Lobster

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I am a collector of cookbooks. Wish I had yours. But when I search through them for a recipe for lobster thermidor the recipe always starts with "split two large or three small lobsters lengthwise." Where we live we cannot buy live or cooked whole lobsters. I buy it in cans (12-oz. net) fresh frozen and it is wonderful. My husband wants me to make Lobster Thermidor. As you may have guessed he is a transplanted Newfoundlander. Could you teach me how to do it? — Leah N.

ANSWER: Incidentally Leah, tonight I am cooking 12 fresh lobsters from Newfoundland. Wish you were here with your husband.

SIMPLIFIED LOBSTER THERMIDOR



NOTE: This recipe calls for canned fresh frozen lobster from the Maritimes.

1 cup cream or milk
2-3 cup boiling water
1 chicken bouillon cube
1-3 cup sherry
One 10-oz. can button mushrooms including liquid
¼ cup butter
6 tbsps. flour
1 tsp. dry mustard
One 12-oz. (net weight) can fresh frozen lobster thawed
Buttered bread crumbs (optional)
Parmesan cheese (for topping)

In the top of the double boiler over boiling water blend the butter, flour and mustard. Stir in milk, boiling water and chicken bouillon cube until thick. Add whole button mushrooms and their can liquid and stir. Open can of thawed fresh frozen lobster and carefully lift claw tips to a small plate for garnish (see below). Remove flat bones from plump upper part of claws. Cut lobster into bite size pieces and add to sauce. Add sherry. Stir in sherry. Place lobster claw tips on top and heat through. When you have two choices: serve on fluffy boiled rice garnishing rice with the lobster claws or serve Lobster Thermidor the orthodox way by spooning mixture into four or six medium baking "shells" or earthenware individual casseroles and sprinkle sparingly with buttered breadcrumbs and Parmesan cheese and bake at 450 deg. Fahr. until mixture bubbles. Serve on breakfast-sized plates, protecting your plates with folded paper napkins under hot lobster shells or casseroles.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Tracy, don't grab my necklace. You'll break it. Don't pick up the ashtray. Look what you've done to the flowers. Why are you such a bad girl?"

A toddler seldom can resist touching and feeling things, but she soon will learn to touch things with one finger only and this is not likely to break or damage them. A permissible method of satisfying her curiosity will help her control her desire to pull and grab at forbidden objects.

Mother: "Touch the flowers with one little finger. That's the way. Touch the picture on the magazine with one finger, too. That's a big girl."

Washington Crime Rises

Court Rules Protecting Suspects Blamed for Crime Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — Murder, rape and robbery reached an all-time high in Washington in 1969 and many capital law enforcement officers say there will be no slowdown until Congress acts and court attitudes change.

Police Chief Jerry V. Wilson released charts labelled to show that crime turned upward here in 1963 after investigative arrests were stopped and accelerated even faster after the Supreme Court decision in the Escobido case in 1964 and the Miranda case in 1966.

These conditions established strict rules regarding questioning, arrests and subsequent interrogation of suspects and the manner in which confessions could be taken and used in court.

Since 1958, Washington's crime index offences have increased nearly 600 per cent, according to Wilson's figures. The uniform FBI reporting device for cities lists seven crime categories: homicide, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft.

In 1958, Washington had 10,612 index cases; in 1962 there were 15,919 and four years later it jumped to 29,479. And in the first 11 months of 1969, the district's reports totalled 61,617.

For the district police officer, Washington's Bail Reform Act is a major headache.

"It's murder," one officer said.

The act makes it mandatory that the court release the accused on his recognizance, if unable to post bail, if he has ties in the community. A recent court decision prohibits the court from considering the suspect's danger to the community.

Clogged criminal courts have caused some judges to dismiss cases, another officer said, and he cited the instance where a prosecution witness was not immediately available and the "judge dismissed the case and a stick-up man walked out scotfree."

Many officers who feel courts have been too lenient in the past point to what happened in 1969 when bank robberies decreased drastically.

Last January, 19 financial institutions were robbed; then a bank robber was given a 45-years-to-life sentence and another had his bail fixed at $250,000.

Statistics released by Wilson show that bank robberies dropped to two the next month. At year's end, the bank robbery total stood at only 50 compared with 102 in 1968.

"Legislation is needed now—no, it was needed last year and the year before," one high official said.

President Nixon's proposed legislation for controlling crime in the District of Columbia, already approved by the Senate, is awaiting action in the House of Representatives. It calls for court reform and new wiretap and search warrant powers.

In Washington during 1969, homicides increased to 291 from 194, armed robberies to 7,071 from 4,640, and rapes to 236 from 260.

In February, 1969, Washington had 170 officers working overtime to hold down crime. Presence of the officers is credited with causing armed robbery to drop from approximately 650 in February to less than 300 a month by May 1.

But when the number of officers on the streets was reduced, and there was a court decision making bail easy, the armed robbery rate shot up again and by Sept. 30 it reached almost 700 cases a month.

City of Thunder Bay Officially Born Friday

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — The city of Thunder Bay was officially brought into the existence Friday night.

Although the amalgamation of Port Arthur and Fort William, and the townships of Shuniah and Neebing, has been on paper for almost a year, the new city formed by this alliance wasn't an official fact until the new year.

And Friday night all the pomp and ceremony surrounding such an occasion was performed before several hundred persons at Selkirk high school, chosen because of its large auditorium which was filled to capacity for the historic event.

Federal, provincial and civil officials took part in the affair to launch the eighth-largest city in Ontario.

"The area now can perhaps get opportunities that may have been lost in the past," said the city's new mayor, Saul Laskin, following his official swearing in.

"Everyone has a part to play in the city of Thunder Bay. Let us all have faith in our ability to create a great city."

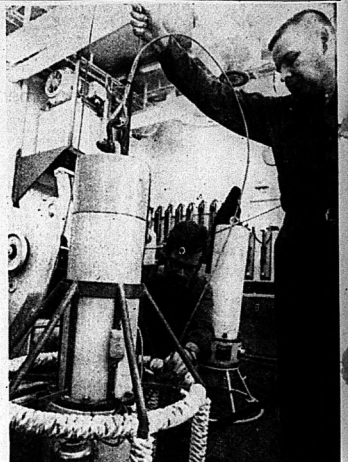
Many of the residents of the new city of 107,000 people on the shores of Lake Superior had turned out New Year's Eve for a special event at the gateway separating Port Arthur and Fort William.

Because, for the record, Thunder Bay became the official name at the moment the new year was heralded in and there was no more fitting a place to mark the occasion than the spot that had been a symbol of division for years.

Called the Welcome Arch in the past, the entrance was renamed Unity Arch with a blow of a champagne bottle, ending the friendly feud that had existed between the twin cities.

At an hour-long official inauguration, Mayor Laskin and his 12 councillors were given the formal oath of office by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

The city's first aldermen to take the oath were Walter Assef, Hubert Badanai, Wallace Bryan, Hugh Cook, Michael Hennessey, Dr. Charles Jondon, Edgar Laprade, Donald Lenardson, George Lovelady, William Morgan, Grace Remus and the former mayor, minister of Ontario, George Wardrope.



Darcy McKeough, municipal affairs minister, was guest speaker. He presented a framed copy of the act incorporating the city to Mayor Laskin.

He said the new council was elected by a turnout of voters of 63½ per cent, which was above the provincial average for an election, and, added:

"This occasion marks the beginning of different relationships between the new city and Queen's Park and among the residents of the former municipalities."

Following the ceremonies, Mayor Laskin presented Mr. McKeough and Mr. Wishart with honorary citizenship certificates of Thunder Bay.

The first announcement of amalgamation was made last January and elections of a mayor and council were conducted June 23.

Snowmobile Rules May Be Changed

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Irwin Haskett said Friday his department is studying Ontario's year-old snowmobile legislation to see if changes are needed to promote greater safety.

He said in an interview he was not sure how far his department could go to control snowmobiles when they are operated off public roads.

"I can't really tell people what they can do with a play machine they may only use in their own backyard. It would be like licensing a tricycle."

Asked about the number of snowmobile accidents during the holidays, Mr. Haskett said he thought there were "a number of irresponsible agents" promoting the sale of snowmobiles to children.

The transport department review was expected to be completed in time for the opening of the new legislature session Feb. 24.

Snowmobiles came under special act in November, 1968. The vehicles are required to be licensed, can be operated on the shoulders of all provincial highways and are allowed on the travelled portion of certain highways.

The act also said snowmobile could be driven on municipal roads unless prohibited by a municipal bylaw.

Snowmobile drivers who use roadways are required to be 16 years or over and to carry insurance.

Catholics Will Fight For More School Aid

TORONTO (CP) — Joseph Fullerton, newly-elected chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto separate school board, warned Friday night that Roman Catholics in Toronto will use "every lawful weapon" in their fight for extension of public support for separate schools.

At present, support ends at Grade 10 and Catholic parents who want their children to continue in a separate school until Grade 13 have to pay about $400 yearly.

"Let's make no mistake about this," Mr. Fullerton, 49, said in his acceptance speech after he was named to succeed Rev. Percy Johnson as head of the 73,000-pupil city Catholic school system.

"We will fight, using every lawful weapon at our disposal to preserve and extend our school system until we have equality for the Catholic children of this province."

Mr. Fullerton noted that both the Ontario Liberal and New Democratic parties have come out in favor of extension, but he cautioned that the NDP policy supporting shared facilities for separate and public schools was only partly acceptable.

"We are willing to co-operate in the sharing of facilities and services wherever feasible, but we don't intend to be swallowed up."

British Young People Do Not Rush to Use New Privileges

LONDON (AP) — Everyone got excited about adult privileges for British youth—with the apparent exception of the teenagers themselves.

Parliament voted 18-year-olds the right to sell houses, vote, bind, make wills, sue, apply for passports, marry without parental consent and buy on credit without a guarantor.

This happy situation for 3,000,000 residents between 18 and 21 years of age began with the start of 1970.

But the new adults haven't rushed off in great numbers to get married. They haven't asaulted lawyers' offices to buy on the instalment plan.

Instead of a rush of young lovers to wed, the Marriage Guidance Council, a private body with state backing which has been campaigning to educate youngsters for marriage, reported a big jump in young callers wanting to set up divorces.

"I can't account for it," said a council staffer.

BOSTON (AP) — A book published Friday says Mary Jo Kopechne was alone, driving Senator Edward M. Kennedy's car when it carried her to her death off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island last summer.

The book, The Bridge at Chappaquiddick Island, by Jack Olsen, a senior editor of Time Inc., is being issued by Little Brown and Co. three days before the opening of an inquest into Miss Kopechne's death.

Olsen, who made investigations on Chappaquiddick and Martha's Vineyard after Miss Kopechne's death, says Senator Kennedy alighted from the car after a deputy sheriff approached.

The writer said Kennedy wanted to avoid embarrassment and misinterpretations of his presence with Miss Kopechne. A Washington secretary who had worked for his brother, the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy (Dem. N.Y.).

In Washington, a spokesman for Kennedy said the writer "is aware of this latest theory and, as before, does not feel it appropriate to discuss each new theory that is developed."

Hollywood Restaurateur Is Released in Shooting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Hollywood restaurant owner was released Friday a day after being arraigned on investigation of murder in the shooting death of Michael R. Hewitt, 23, forgery of Kingston.

James Reeves, 30, of Los Angeles, owner of the Elbow Bend restaurant, acted in self defence, Harold Lynn, deputy district attorney who rejected the criminal complaint, said.

Lynn said Hewitt entered the restaurant with four other men and began arguing.

After Reeves pushed one man outside, Lynn said, Hewitt picked up a 12-inch-long butcher knife, cutting Reeves's shirt and nicking his chest.

Reeves warned Hewitt that he had a small revolver, Lynn said, but when Hewitt paid no attention Reeves fired once.

Involved in the argument, Lynn said, was Hewitt's roommate in Hollywood, Gary James Powell, whom police earlier believed to be Hewitt's brother.

Hoover Says New Left 'Inflamed From Without'

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, 75, suggested Friday that New Left and militant black groups are "encouraged and inflamed from without" in a violent campaign against the United States government.

He accused the Black Panther party of ambushing policemen, and he sought to link the huge anti-war rally here last Nov. 15 with "international Communist elements."

The charges came in Hoover's report on FBI operations during 1969.

Assailing what he called the New Left movement, Hoover said "America today is struggling with forces from within, encouraged and inflamed by forces from without, as it strives to retain its position as the most progressive civilized nation in the world."

Hoover blamed New Left Groups, and particularly the Students for a Democratic Society, for violence on college campuses during the year.

He said there have been 16 incidents of arson on campuses, two bombings and more than 350 arrests since last September.

Turning to the American Communist party, Hoover said its 50th anniversary celebration during 1969 was "a muted one which befitted the current status of the party."

F111A Grounded

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States Air Force has placed a complete ban on all flights of its 223 F-111A aircraft following a crash Dec. 22 when a wing broke off a plane, an air force spokesman said Friday.

The air force said the order was issued asa result of the investigation to date of the crash at Nellis Air Force Base, Nevada, Dec. 22. In which two crew members died.

The controversial swing-wing fighter bomber now has been suspended from flying for varying periods five times since it took to the air early in 1965.

The age of consent in most European countries is 21.

Around 3,000,000 18- 19- and 20-year-olds now have the right to vote, if they registered by Dec. 16, along with another 3,000,000 first-time registrants between 21 and 25. An unofficial survey claimed 61.5 per cent of the first category and 65 per cent of the latter had registered by the deadline.

Jurors and political candidates still must be 21 years old.

Meanwhile at Gretna Green, a Scottish haven for young lovers, registrar Bob Hastings was philosophical:

"I don't expect all the couples coming from Europe who used to catch a train to Gretna will stay at Dover and Folkestone and get married there.

"I will still have about 100 couples a year to marry, those of 16 and 17 who still can't get permission in England. But soon even the law in Scotland may be changed."

Food City Novices Top Contender for Brockville Title

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Seven teams were eliminated from further play in the annual Thousand Islands International ston hockey tournament hre Friday.

Eliminated were Ottawa Nepean, St. Vital, Que., Cobourg, Kingston Frontenac, Smiths Falls and the host Brockville team.

But there are still 25 teams in the running for the four championships at stake in the two-day tournament for 11-year-olds.

Belleville is the only team with two victories in the AA class, winning 9-2 over St. Vital and 4-1 over Ottawa Westboro.

Andy Lupenette's three goals paced Belleville's Towers Food City Novices in their 9-2 thrashing of St. Vital. Randy Hutchinson and Mike Bennett each scored twice, with Gary Geegan and Bobby Crawford adding singles.

The Belleville novices nursed a tight 1-0 lead after the first period, but began to widen the gap with three unanswered goals to start the second period.

Pending the outcome of a 1 o'clock afternoon game today with Oshawa, Belleville was scheduled to play again at 5 p.m.

Agincourt, Ont., and Beaconsfield, Que., are two-game winners in the A-class. Agincourt downed Smiths Falls 1-0 and blanked Kingston Township 2-0. Beaconsfield whipped Brockville and Cobourg by identical 2-0 scores.

Results:

AA class: St. Vital 3 Ottawa Nepean 4; Belleville 4 Ottawa Westboro 1; Oshawa 3 Montreal North 1; Kingston 4 Verdun 3; Orillia 5 St. Jean de Matha, Que., 1; Barrie 3 Oakville 2; Ottawa Rockcliffe 4 Burlington 3; Cedar Hill, Ont., 7 Ottawa Warriors 6; Ottawa Westboro 4 Ottawa Nepean 2; Belleville 9 St. Vital 2; Montreal North 3 Verdun 1.

Dump Woodstock 9-0

Mo-Hawks Go Up in Lights

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Sports Editor)

No matter how you cut it, 9-0 is a pretty lopsided score for a hockey game.

And no-one among the 1,600 people in Belleville's Memorial Arena last night realized that more than Ken Kitchen.

The Woodstock A's goal tender was in the Belleville line of fire 51 times as the Mo-Hawks racked up their mightiest offence in three winters to creep within four points of second place in the OHA Senior A standings.

After the Mo-Hawks led 3-0 with the game not yet eight minutes old, nobody really wondered IF they would score, just HOW.

It was strictly hockey by adding machine.

The Mo-Hawks divived up 25 scoring points, and the only players in last night's lineup who didn't add to their total were linemates Ralph Plane and Gary Dalliday, and goalie Steve Rexe.

Both forwards played excellent two-way games while Rexe had his easiest senior hockey evening of the year, handling 22 Woodstock shots in recording his second shutout. The best Woodstock rookie has played more on a third-period breakaway, but the puck was almost always shot wide of the Belleville goal.

Al Ferguson and Wayne McConnell led the lamplighting with two goals each. George Godson, "Weiner" Brown, Greg Marchen, John "Shaker" Baker, and Davey Jones each contributed one.

Ferguson's pair — his 18th and 17th — snapped a goal slump for the Banana-blade ace. Marchen's goal — a low first-period point shot — was the first of the year for the rugged defenceman.

After scoring only twice in his previous 10 Mo-Hawk games, "Shaker" Baker made it three goals in the last four outings last night, while George Godson's third-period power-play goal, along with Brown's, moved the latter over the club scoring leadership.

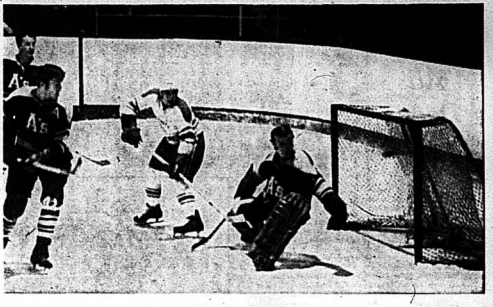
Godson now has 27, points in 25 games, one more than linemate Lorne O'Donnell who has paced the Mo-Hawks most of the season.

O'Donnell only managed a pair of assists last night, which was two more points than the Woodstock lineup got.

Veteran "Weiner" Brown, who went scoreless in his first 14 games on the Mo-Hawk defence, scored his second in as many games last night and it proved, as they say, to be the winner.

With Woodstock's Bob Bradley sitting out a first period slashing minor, Brown used the other four Mo-Hawk attackers as decoys, walked in on Ken Kitchen's left side undetected and beat him with a low 25-footer.

The Mo-Hawks had the game won after only three minutes and 30 seconds.



The other big first period light was a body check perpetrated on Woodstock's Wayne Goetz by defenceman Lou Kazowski at the Belleville blueline.

It was a body check only in the sense that a head-on collision is a fender-bender. Goetz took a full head-and-a-half to get to his feet and needed doctor's attention in the Woodstock dressing room.

Kazowski, who picked up three assists to remain the fifth highest point-getter on the club with 21, suffered a badly pulled back muscle during the second-period which club doctor Ross Sturr said he would still be feeling in Sunday night's 8 o'clock game in Kingston.

The Mo-Hawks are four points ahead of the sixth place Aces (two ahead of fourth-place Oakville) and have dropped their last two meetings with Kingston after winning the first three encounters.

Next home action is a 8 p.m. Memorial Arena game with Barrie Flyers next Friday night.

One That Missed

Here's a Belleville Mo-Hawk shot that didn't go into the Woodstock net during last night's 9-0 rout at the hands of Belleville Mo-Hawks. Here, Mo-Hawk forward Gary Dalliday, along with Woodstock goalie Ken Kitching and his defence, watch a point shot sail wide of the net during first-period action in the OHA Senior A game viewed by 1,600 in Belleville's Memorial Arena.

Ellis Juniors Hear Knocking

Opportunity has knocked again for the Belleville Ellis Juniors, and, with the playoff stretch drive in sight, the Belleville B's can't afford not to answer the call.

Last night's 13-1 shellacking absorbed by Trenton Golden Hawks in Oshawa leaves the Ellis juniors in sole possession of fourth place in the six-team Eastern Ontario Junior B league, one point ahead of Cobourg Cougars and two in front of Trenton.

But the Ellis' can't expect the league trailers to do them too many more favors.

Tomorrow night the Belleville B's get a chance to widen their point advantage in a 7.30 game with the visiting Oshawa Crushmen.

The Ellis' have absorbed 12-2 and 8-2 setbacks in Oshawa, but in the teams' first meeting in Belleville, the second-place Crushmen had to rally to earn a 6-6 tie.

Sunday evening's game will mark Loyalist College night, with Loyalist student cards earning the bearer admission for a mere 25 cents.

Golden Hawks Drubbed 13-1 After Reserves Fail to Show

OSHAWA (Special) — Roger Drake didn't get a little help from his minor hockey friends last night, but it's doubtful the expected reserve strength would have meant much difference in the Trenton Golden Hawks' landslide 13-1 loss at the hands of the Oshawa Crushmen.

Drake — recently - appointed coach of Trenton's last - place Eastern Ontario Junior B entry — had been expecting player support from Trenton's juvenile all-stars to fill two big injury - caused gaps created by defenceman Andy Terwilliger and forward Bob Hall.

But Drake was informed late yesterday that a juvenile league game precluded the possibility that the Hawks could get the services of Teddy and Terry Brown, a brother forward combination on the Trenton juveniles.

As if the injury situation hasn't had enough, forward Jim Stenburg last night drew a third-period match misconduct for disputing team-mate Chris Long's penalty.

That means Stenburg will sit out the game as the Hawks desperately try to pull out of the basement of the six-team Eastern Ontario "B" loop.

Last night's loss left the Hawks two points back of fourth - place Belleville Ellis Juniors and one behind Cobourg Cougars, who tangle with Trenton in a crucial home-and-home series next weekend.

Bim McFaul avoided total Trenton embarrassment last night, scoring midway through the third period with the second-place Crushmen nursing a 10-0 lead.

Linemates Jim Robson (3 goals), Doug Wiggins (2), and John Nestic (2) paced the Oshawa attack. Robson's hat trick rounded out the scoring after McFaul scored Trenton's lone goal in the final period.

Other Oshawa scorers were Ken Gyles (2), Bob Kirk, Bob Hutton, Eric Howard, and Wayne Blanchard.

In all, Golden Hawk goalie Brian Wilson was called on to handle 49 Oshawa shots, while his mates only managed 23 shots on Oshawa's goal.

Basement-bound Seals Celebrate Miserable Road Holiday

By GRAHAM COX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When things start to go wrong for you, sometimes there seems no end to it—just ask Freddy Glover.

The Oakland Seals coach is flightier than a fish out of water in the Western Division cellar in the National Hockey League and to establish a franchise in the difficult San Francisco Bay area.

So what happens?

Well, the club draws an 18-day road trip that covers both the Christmas and New Year holiday periods—no way to keep the troops happy, or their families either—and then they run into what amounts to a stone wall.

They started off with a 4-0 loss to Chicago Black Hawks on their last home date Dec. 19 and since then have managed only a win and a tie in five games.

They won't be home until Wednesday, when Boston Bruins pay them a visit, but in the meantime the Seals are in Montreal against the Canadiens tonight and in New York against the Rangers Sunday.

The Rangers lead the senior Eastern Division, the Bruins are second and the Canadiens third.

Happily, Glover, trying hard to convince the 6,000 to 7,000 home fans the club draws as an average, is something of a philosopher.

"These trips are tough, but it's the way things work out," he said after managing a draw against the punchless Toronto Maple Leafs Wednesday.

"If there is anything else on in either our area or in Los Angeles then we have long trips like this. Eastern teams just won't come all the way west for one game."

Earl Ingarfield, his ace centre, isn't so happy though, even with an assist on the Thursday goal.

"It's a heck of a note. I sent my wife and kids home to Lethbridge for Christmas and said I'd see them when we got back.

"It's grim. And if you happen to be in a slump, a trip like this is even worse."

Other games tonight have the Black Hawks in Toronto, the Rangers in Minnesota against the North Stars, Boston taking on the Kings in Los Angeles, Detroit Red Wings visiting the Flyers in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh Penguins taking on the Western Division-leading Blues in St. Louis.

Kapp A Keeper

Contrast in Q-backs Highlights Showdown

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Joe Kapp and Bill Nelsen, a pair of take-charge quarterbacks, are the key men in Sunday's National Football League title game between the favorgd Minnesota Vikings and Cleveland Browns.

Nelsen, 28, operates out of a pocket because damaged knees limit his range. Kapp, 31, who played eight years in the Canadian Football League with British Columbia Lions before joining the Vikings three years ago, is a blood-and-guts, rough-and-tumble warrior.

"Their styles are not similar," said Minnesota coach Bud Grant. "But they have the common ingredient of being winners.

"Nelsen doesn't go run as far as Joe but he may go to play action with his quick release. He throws well up the middle and not all quarterbacks have the confidence to do that."

Grant, who came to the Vikings after coaching Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the CFL, added: "Joe will not put the ball up in the air as much. He likes to move out of the pocket and fold the ball longer. On occasion he will run with the ball."

Grant made the last remark tongue-in-cheek. It was Kapp's running the ball on a 12-yard scramble and a two-yard touchdown run that led the Vikings past Los Angeles Rams last Sunday, 23-20.

"Kapp is an under-rated quarterback," said coach Blanton Collier of the Browns. "I don't know what you would want a man to do that he hasn't done.

"Talk about his passing. I know it is not healthy to have a man open when he throws. They don't pay off on whether the ball flutters. He's like Bobby Layne. All he could do was beat you.

"Nelsen, like Kapp, also has great leadership. He is a pocket passer. Joe can come out of the pocket with rollout runs. Maybe he does more things than Nelsen but they are different types, both as individuals and physically."

Both Grant and Collier are inclined to throw out the 51-3 win scored by the Vikings over the Browns in a regular-season game Nov. 9.

"Nobody is that much better than any other club in the NFL," said Grant. "Look at last year. Cleveland beat Baltimore in the regular season and then the Colts beat them for the championship 34-0.

"Cleveland is just as capable of scoring 50 points as we are. I expect a real butting contest," Grant said.

"The Browns come at you attacking with a fine quarterback behind a great offensive line and great receivers like Paul Warfield, Gary Collins and Milt Morin and runners like Leroy Kelly and Bo Scott. Let Nelsen get eight or 10 plays in a row and you're in trouble," he added.

"The other game was in regular season," said Collier, "This is a playoff situation. I can't believe there is the same relationship as during regular season. Our Dallas score last Sunday (34-14) was not indicative of the strength of the two clubs.

"Dallas has a fine football team. I hope our 51-3 loss was not an indication of the relative strength of these two clubs."

Both coaches reported their clubs in good shape physically. The Browns worked out at home and flew here Friday night.

They planned a workout today and the Vikings also expected to drill briefly at the University of Minnesota.

The Metropolitan Stadium field, where Sunday's game will be played, has been covered since last Saturday. Unless it snows during the game, it should be in good condition.

The game, being carried live on television in Canada and the U.S., begins at 1 p.m. EST.

Only the weatherman knows the real story of Sunday's game that will send the winner into the rich Super Bowl against the American Football League champion Jan. 11 at New Orleans. Oakland Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs meet for the AFL championship later Sunday afternoon.

The latest word from the weatherman was that partly cloudy skies and extreme cold will be on tap for the game.

AFL All Done Sunday

OAKLAND (AP) — Oakland Raiders and Kansas City Chiefs meet Sunday in the last American Football League game in history, each team carrying one questionable element into the championship struggle for survival on the road to the Super Bowl.

The questionable elements—the game plan for the Chiefs and the condition of wide receiver Warren Wells for the Raiders—remained the focal points as the teams began the final countdown for this 61th AFL game that pulls down the curtain on the junior league.

The AFL legally becomes part of the National Football League next season, ending a run that began on Sept. 9, 1960, when Denver defeated Boston 13-1. Denver defeated Bostgn 13-10 and kicked off a decade in which the new league gained equal stature with the NFL.

The exact moment of equality came on Jan. 13, 1969, when New York Jets brought the AFL its first triumph in the Super Bowl, the championship struggle between the leagues.

Winner of the Oakland-Kansas City game will advance to the Super Bowl against the victor of Sunday's NFL clash between Minnesota Vikings and Cleveland Browns.

The major questions remaining before the game were whether Wells, who has been sidelined with a shoulder separation, could go at top speed and what offence Kansas City coach Hank Stram would throw at Oakland.

With quarterback Len Dawson still sidelined by leg injury, Stram employed a ground-based offence the last time the clubs met. Dawson attempted only six passes as the Chiefs lost to the Raiders 10-6—their seventh defeat in the last eight games at the hands of Oakland.

Stram has guarded closely his plans for this game but says: "We'll have a few surprises for them."

John Madden, the Raider coach, fully anticipates that.

"They've had two weeks to prepare," said Madden. "That's the time you expect them to come up with something different."

While Stram has kept Madden guessing about his game plan, Madden has been able to keep Stram guessing about Wells.

Wells suffered the shoulder separation the last time the teams met and it was reported at the time that he would be lost for the remainder of the season.

Wells, however, has been working out with the Raider and is reported ready, although some people remain skeptical.

Wells was one of the keys to the passing attack guided by Daryle Lamonica in taking the Raiders to the Western Division title with a 12-1-1 record. Lamonica connected for a league-leading 24 touchdown passes, hitting Wells with 16 and Fred Biletnikoff with 12.

Czechs Stick at Home Until 30

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — In case anyone is wondering why the National Hockey League isn't overrun with Czechoslovakians, the answer is simple.

"It's our national policy that no player leave his country to play professional hockey until after he is past his 30th birthday," the Czechoslovakian national team coach, Jaraslov Pitner, said Friday.

The touring Czech team had just held the Canadian national team to a 2-2 tie in an exhibition game, although they controlled the play through 40 minutes of the game after dominating the Canadians en route to a 4-0 shutout at Toronto the previous night.

The teams had earlier traded 3-2 victories at Winnipeg. The teams complete the best-of-five exhibition series at Ottawa Sunday.

Meanwhile, Canadian team manager Buck Houle confessed that his squad was being muzzled around by the Czechs, who are playing their first series in Canada under rules that allow body checking all over the ice.

"A little older and a little bigger . . . that's what we need," said Houle. "We've tried with the younger, smaller boys and it just doesn't work. The day of the good little hockey player in this class of hockey is long gone."

The Czechs started strong Friday night but were unable to beat goaltender Wayne Stephenson. The Canadians perked up in the second period and held a 2-0 lead on goals by Corby Adams and Billy Harris.

Sports Briefs

LONDON (AP) — The flu epidemic hit soccer teams Friday and cause postponement of four of today's games in the third round of the English Cup. Three league games also were called off. The Cup matches called off were Brentwood vs. Northampton, Coventry vs. Liverpool, Hillingdon vs. Sutton and Reading vs. Luton. Coventry, a first-division team, reported only five of its players fit to play. The English Football Association told Coventry Thursday it must go through with the game if it could put 11 fit men onto the field — even though they are reserves. The club's position was so bad on Friday that the FA gave way.

Betsy Clifford Aiming For Retirement at 18

OBERSTAUFEN, West Germany (AP) — Betsy Clifford of Otawa, Canada's top woman skier, aims to win gold medals in all three Alpine events at the 1972 Olympics and retire from racing at age 18.

"If everything clicks, I think I can be the first person to do it," Miss Clifford said.

"But if I don't make it, then I'll keep racing until I'm 22," the 1968 Olympic Games vet eran said.

Miss Clifford also believes she can win races this year, especially in the downhill competition.

In four slalom events to date, she has earned 10 World Cup points and is 13th among the world's women Alpine racers.

Today and Sunday she and more than 90 other racers go after more points in special and giant slalom events at this Bavarian town.

"When I don't win, I tell myself it's just not time for me," she said. "But I know I can beat anyone on the circuit—I've beaten them all at one time or another."

Canadian coach Franzen Peter predicts: "Betsy will win a few races this year. Her strongest event may be the downhill and the downhill races are coming up."

Coach Dennis Agee of the U.S. women's team agrees.

"Betsy is a natural, she does everything right. She lacks polish but that will come with experience."

The five-foot three-inch teenager first climbed on to skis at the age of four. Her father, a former Canadian national water ski champion and Alpine skier, taught her how to race. She perfected her hobby at Camp Fortune, near Ottawa, where her father runs a ski lift concession.

She credits Nancy Greene, Canada's two-time World Cup winner, with teaching her concentration.

"Nancy taught me that you have to memorize the course and think about what you want to do to win. I'd learned it before but Nancy made it stick."

Miss Clifford says she has no regrets about her skiing life, except "you have to give up a lot for it—like social life."

In her free time, she strums a guitar and sings folk songs. She also enjoys pop music by such groups as the Rolling Stones.

Players Back Flood

NEW YORK (AP) — Curt Flood, planning a federal suit to challenge baseball's reserve clause, has received the support of the Major League Baseball Players Association, Steve Hamilton, New York Yankees' player representative said Friday.

"We're not interested in helping Curt Flood make more money," Hamilton told the New York Post. "We're interested in modifying the reserve clause.

"We don't want Flood taking the case to court and then dropping it when somebody offers him double his salary. We agreed to back him on this test case when we were convinced of his sincerity and staying power."

Flood, a veteran high-salaried outfielder traded by St. Louis Cardinals to Philadelphia Phillies on Oct. 8, petitioned baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn for the right to negotiate his own contract, but was turned down, setting up the proposed court battle.

Flood, who has hired Arthur Goldberg, former United States Supreme Court justice, to handle the suit, informed the players association of his intentions at their December meeting and received the organization's full support, including a promise to foot the bill in the event of a court case.

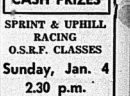
No Sign Of Cup

OTTAWA (CP) — Carl Norton, a city detective who played centre for Ottawa Rough Riders in the late 1930s, is puzzled about the problem of finding the stolen Grey Cup.

"We don't know where the hell to look," Det.-Sgt. Norton said in an interview Friday, almost two weeks after the football trophy was swiped from its case here.

"Maybe the prankster got nervous and flung it some where," he said.

There haven't even been the usual anonymous telephone calls, let alone anything like a clue.



"There just aren't any leads at all," said Frank Clair, general manager of the Ottawa football club.

His feeling is that the prankster got the ungainly trophy home and now is uncertain about how to get it back. Nothing else in the Riders office was touched in the Dec. 20 theft.

"It's just a shame to lose it after all that sweat and tears," he said. "I just hope that somebody has a kind enough heart to send it back, even by mail."

Riders won the trophy Nov. 30 but Clair isn't certain whether the victory was engraved on the front emblem since 1929 of the Canadian football title.

Teacher Is A Chorine

Blue-eyed blonde Jinny Jasper appears, right, in the clothes she wears as an instructor of vocabulary, grammar, literature and creative writing at exclusive Browning Boys school in New York. At left, the 24-year-old former Orange Bowl Queen wears a costume her pupils are not accustomed to seeing her in — that of a chorus girl in the show "This Was Burlesque." (AP Wirephoto)

Allan Funt Makes A Movie About Reactions to Nakedness

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "You mean this going to be on Candid Camera on television?" asked the fat woman after she viewed the nude male model.

"No, no. It's going to be a movie," replied the irrepressible Allen Funt.

The long-time guru of Candid Camera now may have reached the limit of his irrepressibility. He has produced a movie for United Artists called What Do You Say to a Naked Lady? The film sets about to answer that question. Also, what do you say to a naked man, as in the case of the fat woman mentioned above.

Funt used his old Candid Camera formula of recording the reactions of normal citizens in outrageous situations. Only this time he has employed nudity and sex situations. The result is expectably hilarious, but Funt claims it is also an exercise in psychology. United Artists also hopes it will be an exercise in profits.

"For 10 years I've been wanting to make a movie," remarked Funt. "Always the answer from the film companies was the same: Episodic pictures don't sell. The same example was brought up by the executives every time: they all said there was an episodic picture called Tales of Manhattan that didn't make any money.

"By a very fortunate circumstance, Candid Camera went off the air just at the time that the sex revolution, or new era of permissiveness, was beginning to happen. It also coincided with the new kind of cinema, in which the standard formulas no longer prevailed.

"Two years ago I went to United Artists and gave them a two-sentence outline of what I wanted to do, telling them I could deliver it for under half a million dollars. They said, 'Go ahead.'"

Unfettered by censorship, Funt put his rampant imagination to work. What would happen if a nude girl stepped off an elevator and asked a passing man for directions? How would motorists react to a nude hitchhiker? What would students in a college on sex education class say if the teacher turned out to be an undressed beauty? That sort of thing.

Funt spent $485,000 photographing such ideas, and the biggest expense was film.

"On the television show, I used to figure the ratio of exposed film to the finished product was 10 to 1," he said. "On this picture, the ratio was 200 to 1."

While waiting for the February release, Funt has been showing the movie to psychology students at universities. He has found them to be exceptionally receptive—more so than their elders who have seen the film.

Funt admitted that he had to do a selling job on the picture:

"I've got to convince people that the fellow who used to make those cute pictures on television with nursery students hasn't turned into a dirty old man."

Few Belleville Residents Pay Attention to Resolutions

If you ask most Bellevillians, New Year's resolutions seem to be an unnecessary thing of the past.

In fact, it seems most people don't even have time to think about resolutions, let alone make them.

That is the way the picture appeared after a telephone survey yesterday.

When told the purpose of the survey, the usual responseq was a blank indicating the lack of high faith in resolutions is possibly at a record low, if it exists at all.

Long lists of resolutions made to be held firmly through out the new year have been abandoned in favor of an attitude: "I don't make any, I will just break them anyway".

The following are the results of the survey:

Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown: "To duplicate 1969 — without breaking the other ankle, of course."

Donald Foster, who got last year's Santa Claus parade on the road: "With enough people helping and an early start, we can come up with a better Santa Claus parade than ever in 1970."

Grant Ashley, of Ashley Furs: "I never make them, I never have and I don't intend to, you just end up by break but them.

J. S. Barber of Barber's Florists: "I never make any. It saves breaking them."

Miss Olive Delaney, chief librarian, Carby Public Library: "I haven't really got around to making any yet. I hate to make any in case I break them. I suppose you could say that my resolution is that next year I will get to work and make some."

O. F. Bradley, secretary - manager of the Chamber of Commerce: "I haven't made any yet. Not until I have my board meeting on Monday."

Mrs. Dorothy Clarke: "I haven't had time to make any resolutions yet this year. In fact, it hasn't occurred to me. I have been so busy."

One of the secretaries in Bell Telephone Company of Canada who preferred to remain anonymous made a statement that resolutions are "made to be broken", even though many people make them.

Two of the younger set, who would only give their first names, JoAnne, 11 and Cheryl, 12 both were very definite about their resolutions. JoAnne emphasized she is going to save money, while Cheryl maintains she is not going to eat as much candy.

Maurice Switzer, Sports Editor of the Ontario Hockey Association, has resolved not to enlist, I will not run for city council, and I will not, under any circumstances, accept the Pulitzer prize."

Mrs. Van Ochten, RR2, Trenton: "Try and get organized and do things on time."

Best resolution of all came from the City Editor: Next year we won't bother to do this, story."

Coffee a Quarter In Downtown Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The 15-cent cup of coffee in most downtown restaurants has gone the way of the 15-cent glass of beer.

Jack Hemmings, executive vice president of the Canadian Restaurant Association, said a five-to-10-per-cent increase in menu prices since restaurants started paying their help more than minimum wage rate has been accompanied by a general boost to 20 cents in the price of coffee.

Although many restaurants in the suburbs are holding the line on the 15-cent cup, some in the downtown area have raised the price to 25 cents, he said.

JUST TO PLEASE THE EMPEROR!

Around 50 A.D., the Emperor Nero was served a delicious concoction of fruit juice and snow . . . the forerunner of our beloved ice cream. The Chinese added milk and Europeans brought the recipe to America where it's been a favorite since colonial times.

So the family prefers to buy their ice cream at the store instead of making it, turn that cold-souled ice cream freezer into cool cash . . . with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Call 962-2171 for details and ask for Classified.

Investors Show Signs of Renewed Confidence in Stock Market

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

This week, as Canadian stock markets entered 1970, investors showed what could be the makings of renewed confidence.

A modest advance Monday and Tuesday developed into a strong upswing Wednesday which held Friday. Exchanges were closed New Year's Day.

For months, analysts, mostly technicians, have been forecasting a sustained upward drive in the first quarter of 1970.

Because of the federal government's fight-to-the-finish with inflation—which touched off the Great June-July Slump of 1969 —investors became market-shy, resulting in a trading drought in the last half of 1969.

But a new year and a new decade could have the psychological effect needed to draw investors back to the trading floors.

While the four-day rally was less than spectacular and undoubtedly sparked by strength on Wall Street, an increase in volume during the period and a lack of profit taking gave the impression of a return of confidence.

However, monetary conditions, while remaining tight, continued to be uncertain.

The federal government has hinted at new methods to control inflation in 1970 if its present attempts fail.

Several brokerages in Canada and the United States are suggesting that both countries, if not already in a mild business recession, could enter one in 1970.

On the other end of the stick, some say there are signs of a relaxation in the government's fight-money policy.

But the only thing certain is the uncertainty.

Although hopes are up for 1970 and Canadian markets appear to have got off on the right foot, the trend of the last seven months could continue into the new year unless positive developments occur.

Statistically, on Index at the Toronto Stock Exchange this week, industrials rose 0.42 to 186.52, western oils 13.91 to 202.84, golds 6.44 to 148.21 and base metals 4.77 to 117.06.

Volume was 19,234,000 shares compared with 10,532,000 two weeks ago. Exchanges were open only three days last week. Gains outnumbered losses 920 to 196 with 214 issues unchanged.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index gained 1.40 to 180.90. Combined volume was 4,911,000 compared with 4,751,000 two weeks ago. Gains outnumbered losses 293 to 84 with 99 issues unchanged.

Value of trading in stocks listed on Canada's six exchanges was a record $8,200,000,000 in 1969, a gain of 13 per cent over the previous high of $7,200,000,000 in 1968.

The value of trading in mining and oil securities totalled $2,600,000,000 and $5,600,000,000 in industrial trading.

Volume of trading on all exchanges was about the same as in 1968 at 1,860,000,000 shares.

Trading on the Toronto exchange in 1969 contributed 67 per cent to the total value and 44 per cent of the total share volume of all listed trading in Canada.

New Signs of Inflation Seen In U.S. During Year's Last Week

NEW YORK (AP) — Further signs of a stubborn inflation in the United States surfaced during the year's last week in business, in a kind of symbolic climax to 1969 and the soaring '60s.

Strong inflationary elements were part of the controversial tax reform bill finally signed into law by President Nixon.

"The tax reforms on the whole are good . . . ," Nixon said, but he added the bill will "make our fight against the rising cost of living more difficult."

He said it unduly favors spending at the expense of saving at a time when demands on savings are heavy for housing, credit and small business firms and farmers and to finance needed state and local government projects.

The bill, which cuts tax dodges and gives most ordinary taxpayers a reduction, was signed Tuesday.

Labor Secretary George P. Shultz was also unrelaxed in interview the same day that workers, businessmen and consumers will be in a "tough mood" in 1970 under pressure of the government's continued fight against inflation.

Workers will look at rising prices and demand bigger wage increases, consumers will buy less until prices begin easing and businessmen will resist labor demands as sales drop, he said.

He added there are signs the flames of inflation are dying. Retail sales have not expanded for six months and business inventories are increasing, he noted.

Among signs the last week that some prices continue to rise, however:

—Copper prices were raised four cents a pound by two producers and observers saw signals of a forthcoming industry-wide price increase, which would be the second in three months.

—The Illinois Central Railroad Co. in Chicago applied for its first general commuter fare increase in more than eight years, claiming wages were 40 per cent higher than at the time of the last fare increase in 1961.

—A survey of businessmen indicates the plan further price rises in such industries as autos, paper, construction and potash in 1970.

—Bethlehem Steel Corp. announced an increase in the price of reinforcing bars by $6 a ton over the current market price of 5.4 cents a pound, effective with shipments of Jan. 12.

—Meat prices were raised to 8½ per cent from 7½ per cent on loans backed by the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans Administration. The move was called a reflection of the most severe housing shortage in the U.S. since the end of the Second World War.

British Police No Nearer Finding Journalist's Abducted Wife

LONDON (AP) — An 18-year-old waiter, charged with criminal deception in the case of the vanished wife of a British publisher, was ordered held without bail today. Police said they still were no nearer finding missing Mrs. Alex McKay.

William Alexander Peat was brought handcuffed into court at suburban Wimbledon, less than a mile from the home from which Australian-born Mrs. McKay disappeared Monday.

Peat was charged with attempting to get £200 ($480) by deception from the missing woman's husband. No details of the case were disclosed and Peat was not required to enter a plea at the preliminary hearing.

He was ordered held in custody until Jan. 12.

Peat was arrested at Wimbledon railway station Friday night as crowds of commuters hurried home from work.

Detectives say they still are treating Mrs. McKay's disappearance as a case of kidnap.

But they increasingly are investigating the possibility that the 53-year-old woman may have vanished for her own reasons.

"We just have to take account of every possible solution," one detective said.

Mrs. McKay's husband has been under constant medical care since his wife disappeared. He started a new job last month as a director of two London newspapers, The Sunday News of the World and The Daily Sun, both published by fellow-Australian Rubert Murdoch.

Some published reports suggested Mrs. McKay may have been unhappy about her husband's new job because she had been hoping to return to Australia.

But a statement from her son Ian, which he said he was making on behalf of his father, said:

"Both he (Alex McKay) and his wife wish to continue to make their permanent home in England, where they have lived happily for 13 years."

The statement added that the new job meant McKay and his wife "would have had the opportunity to visit Australia more frequently than otherwise in view of the Australian interests of the group."

Police investigations have been plagued by a series of hoax calls, some demanding ransom, others purporting to tell where Mrs. McKay could be found.

All have been checked out by the hundreds of detectives on the case but each has led precisely nowhere.

Detectives say the only solid clue remains a letter posted on Tuesday in north London and delivered to the family house in south-west London Wednesday. They accept that it was written by Mrs. McKay.

The first part of the letter was in an unconcerned hand, as though the writer were in the dark or pretending to be so.

It said:

"I'm blindfolded and cold. Only blankets. Please do something to get me home. Please co-operate or I can't keep going. Muriel.

The second part was in a firm hand which the family say is beyond doubt Mrs. McKay's writing.

It said: "I think of you constantly and the family and friends. Have been calm so far, darling. What have I done to deserve such treatment? Can you do something soon?"

Her family doctor warned Friday that unless Mrs. McKay is given medicine and injections, she is "in very serious danger." She is in fragile health with arthritis.

Police meanwhile were checking a hand-printed letter claiming Mrs. McKay was being held prisoner until the newspapers her husband controlling publishes agree to quit printing what it called "filth."

"I will let Mrs. McKay go if The News of the World and The Sun publicly announce that they will not corrupt our kids any more by printing all that filth," it said.

Police were unable to say whether the letter, delivered Thursday night to another newspaper in suburban North London, was genuinely connected with the case or whether it was the work of a crank.

News of the World is a Sunday newspaper that features racy stories. The Sun is a daily tabloid that spices its news pages with photographs of scantily-clad girls.

The letter contained no direct demand for ransom.

Troops Won't Be Sent to Asia Without Approval of Congress

BANGKOK (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew said today President Nixon would not send U.S. combat troops to Asia "without congressional approval and unless some very extreme, provocatory and substantial action took place.

Agnew gave this as a reason for Nixon's endorsement of the curb voted by Congress last month on possible use of U.S. ground forces in Laos or Thailand.

Speaking with reporters aboard the plane carrying him here from Formosa, Agnew said Nixon's support of the curb "indicated the president's conviction that we would not become involved in any combat activities with our troops in Asia unless some very extreme, provocatory and substantial action took place that might make it necessary for him to seek reevaluation by the Congress."

At the same time, the vice-president disclosed that the Asian leaders with whom he has talked so far, rather than fearing subversion and infiltration, are afraid of "overt attack, not infiltration—an unmistakable attack by another power which would be an act of war."

While he did not say so precisely, the implication of Agnew's words was that any U.S. action to carry out its treaty commitments in Asia, barring a sizable external attack, would be confined to naval and air forces.

Before leaving Taipei, Formosa, Agnew met with President Chiang Kai-shek. On the flight, he praised Thailand s "self-reliant attitude" in supporting Sout Vietnam while "simultaneously combatting armed Communist-led insurgents within its own borders by using its own forces."

Agnew was greeted here by the Thai premier, Field Marshal Thanom Kittikachorn, Foreign Minister Thanat Khoman and U.S. Ambassador Leonard Unger.

Agnew later drove downtown and went to the royal palace for an audience with King Bhumibol and Queen Sirikit.

As in other stops of his 11-country Asian tour, Agnew's visit to Thailand was designed to give reassurances that the United States plans to maintain its Asian treaty commitments while stressing Asian self-reliance.

Before leaving Formosa, Agnew assured the Chinese Nationalists that the United States will stand by them even though it is seeking contacts with Communist China. Agnew said recent actions by the United States to ease trade restrictions were only "baby crawling motions" to see how Peking would react.

Agnew also said changes have been made in U.S. naval patrols guarding Formosa from mainland China and that "the coverage on the straits is to some extent even greater than it was before these changes were made."

In addition, Agnew said, U.S. vessels "will stop at Taiwan as a port of call to give evidence of our continued commitment and support."

Hydro Workers Seek Raise

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiators for 10,000 employees of Ontario Hydro submitted 1970 contract-demands Friday which, if accepted, could cost the huge power company more than $30,000,000 in wage increases.

The current contract with Local 1000, Canadian Union of Public Employees, expires March 31. New contract demands include a 14-per-cent wage increase in a one-year agreement. Current hourly rate for a lineman is $4.27.

The employees, who went on strike before signing a one-year agreement in 1969, also want longer holidays, double time for all overtime, a 10-per-cent increase in shift premiums and payment by Hydro of 100 per cent of medical plan premiums rather than the 80 per cent now paid.

The union represents hourly-rated maintenance tradesmen, clerical and technical employees, including head office staff, thermo-nuclear and electrical operators and other trades.

Hydro management has submitted 49 items including the right to schedule a five-day work week which could include Saturday or Sunday or both, providing the employee received two consecutive days off.

The union opposes the scheduling provision.

Highway Toll Rises Despite Breath Tests

By THE CANADIAN PRES

Canadian police departments say the compulsory breath test, made effective Dec. 1, has helped reduce accidents and traffic fatalities, but the highway death toll during the New Year's holiday was higher this year than last.

Cross Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that 17 Canadians lost their lives in traffic accidents from 6 p.m. local times Wednesday to midnight Thursday.

During a similar 30-hour period last year, 14 Canadians were killed on the highways.

A comparison of the two years shows a vast difference in the number of people who died in fires during the 30 hours.

The 1970 total was 13 by fire across the nation while in 1969, there was only one.

Union Wants Damages For Late Pay Cheques

OTTAWA (CP) — A union representing federal professional employees announced Friday it has filed a petition with the Exchequer Court in a bid to force the government to pay damages for delays in issuing retroactive pay cheques.

The move by the 12,000-member Professional Institute of the Public Service is the latest in a series of steps by federal-employee unions to get the government to issue cheques within 90 days of the signing of new labor contracts.

The 130,000-member Public Service Alliance of Canada has a formal complaint on the same pay issue before the public service staff relations board which oversees federal-employee collective bargaining.

The institute's petition is on behalf of E. K. Culley of the Canadian transport commission—but his pay grievance is representative of many other cases.

The contract covering Mr. Culley and others in the economics, sociology and statistics group was signed July 17, 1968.

"Some six months later Mr. Culley had not yet received the monies due to him," said a union statement Friday. Under the terms of the contract he was owed $2,128 as of Dec. 31, 1969."

The institute asks the court to award damages to Mr. Culley "as he had lost use of the money owed to him and had also suffered additional losses due to financial commitments entered into as a result of the signing of the contract and the expectation that the employer would fulfil its legal obligations with the money forthcoming within a 90-day period."

The bargaining legislation sets out 90 days as the period in which the government is to implement new contracts.

A year ago the alliance filed a formal protest with the staff relations board. Last summer the board ruled that it was the government's obligation to meet the 90-day deadline—but it recommended no penalties for late payment.

Last month the alliance filed a fresh bid with the board, this time arguing that the government should be ordered to pay interest on the amount of back pay owed an employee after the 90-day period. Hearings on this application are adjourned until later this month.

The alliance is using a contract signed May 22, 1969, on behalf of some 2,500 employees in the engineering and scientific support group, as its test case.

At Dec. 8 some 220 members of this group still had not received back-pay cheques.

Church Organist From City Is Next Mayor of Mariposa

ORILLIA (CP) — In Stephen Leacock's Mariposa, no event was complete without the town's brass band.

Next Monday while the town's band tootles in Orillia's opera house, a dignified church organist with change on his mind will be inaugurated as mayor. It's the sort of scene that could make a ghostly Leacock sit down to write a sequel to his book that made Orillia or Mariposa famous — Sunshine Sketches of a Little Town.

The star of the show at the opera house will be David G. Brown, a courtly man who'tips his hat to ladies and feels slightly uncomfortable when Orillia folks call him Dave the first time they meet.

David Brown is not your typical Orillia church organist.

For starters, he's a transplanted city slicker. He maintains three homes: a 19-room house in Toronto, a Canadian pine farmhouse at Uxbridge, Ont, and a modern showplace on Lake Simcoe with three stained glass windows, an excellent mixture of antiques, a couple of dogs and a deaf white cat.

Until 11 years ago, Mr. Brown headed a clutch of businesses including a construction firm, a plastic plant, a graphic arts and advertising firm. He was revered as Cassidy in Toronto and senior commissioner of York County.

Mr. Brown with his grey hair, moustache to match and erect posture has not played with a rock group so far. He was more familiar—seen from the back—at the console of the organ at the Presbyterian Church.

When he talks about Orillia, he uses words such as "expand . . . potential . . . prosperity . . . boom." Orillia, he says, is the logical hub of Ontario—only 1¼ hours from Toronto. It has plenty of land, a good water supply, two rail lines, summer and winter sports, a park at the lakefront, three foundries, new industry, an Ontario hospital school, cable television and of course, the opera house.

His passion was and is music. He studied under the late Dr. Healey Willan, Canada's foremost composer of church music, and Mr. Brown would give up anything before his music.

After an illness, he retired from his businesses and settled with his wife and three daughters in Orillia, 85 miles north of Toronto where snowmobiles drive down the main street that Leacock immortalized.

At 59, he began thinking about what will happen to Orillia as Ontario's industrial corridor pushes north. This fall he carried out a mayoralty campaign the Orillia Packet and Times called the most active in years. His supporters hired The Enigmatable Blues Revival to play at campaign meetings and when the music stopped, David Brown had beat the incumbent by 62 votes.

"Never met the man, but voted for him," said a stout taxi driver as he drove along the 14th line to the mayor's house. "Heard tell a lot about the fella."

"He's a cool guy," said a rock singer who sang with the Blues Revival. "Maybe we can get him to play with the group."

"There's been a reticence on the part of some people to change for fear of spoiling this typical Canadian town. It's all very nice for Orillia to be the home of Stephen Leacock, but you can't live in the Leacock era forever. Of course that doesn't mean I want Orillia to lose its character and just be part of a minor megalopolis."

He figures Orillia can have it both ways if the 20,000 people, through community meetings, care enough to plan ahead for the coming boom.

He is starting with his council, holding weekly meetings until they clear up a backlog of work, then opening meetings to the public. He'll travel at least once a month to the department of municipal affairs at Queen's Park. He'll push to attract more tourists, acquire potential industrial land, arrange rapid transit.

"I'd be a darned fool to say there wasn't going to be an increase in taxes in the foreseeable future," he warned.

"You know, Stephen Leacock wouldn't have stayed in a place where nothing happened."

Forest Hill Students Will Test 'Free-school'

TORONTO (CP) — Forest Hill collegiate will take a new step in the student's life a three-day "free-school" program this spring.

A student committee, with the backing of the school's principal, will conduct at least 21 seminars on topics as diverse as the Nigerian civil war, astrology, Chinese history and the Toronto board of education.

Bran Cadsby, one of the leaders of the committee, said in an interview Friday the students "want to experiment with a different educational method."

Mr. Cadsby added that "if the experiment fails, it will still be a success, because we will have learned an awful lot."

The school's 60 teachers will be on hand because their contract demands they be on the job, but they will only joint students in the seminars if asked to do so. Main leaders of the study sessions will be from outside the teaching staff.

Students who only want to play in the gymnasium during the three days will be encouraged to do so.

Mr. Cadsby said they hoped to get an expert in all fields to take on the leadership in seminars.

"What we're trying to do is far a few people—not so much in the school as on the board—into trying a few new ideas in education."

Over-protection Can Cause Problem

The term "lack of communication" has undeniably been done to death in recent months but when static jams communication between parent and child, I believe one should make an attempt to bring the relationship into clear focus. For example, I hope the mother of this 14-year-old reads her letter:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My mother reads your column and that is how I know of it. I am 14 years old and an only child. My problem is that my parents won't let me do the things that other children do. I don't want to smoke or anything like that. It's just that I would like to be able to go places by myself or with my friends. I'd also like to ride my bicycle in other places than dead ends and sidewalks.

I can understand my parents' argument that I could get run over, but I no longer have a desire to ride my bicycle. You see, my friends don't want to wait until my mother gives me a book of instructions like "look where you go, walk toward the cars etc.," things I think I have enough sense to know and remember.

I think I should tell my mother where I'm going at least, but I think most, of the things I already know she should—n't be told me over and over again. It is true that my mother has nerves, and this is why I'm writing to you because I'm scared that I'm making them worse. Please tell me what to do. I realize that I might be wrong, but I also know that I am an only child. My relatives tell my mother she's wrong, but she won't listen. — Miss B.

Comment: Here is one example of how over-protection can make an intelligent teenager unhappy and upset. I hope today's column acts as a mirror so the mother sees herself as she really is and gives this child more freedom. Otherwise, she may soon have a real medical problem on her hands. (Be thankful, Miss B., that relatives are on your side.)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is there any substance to the theory of a seven-year cycle in the recurrence of physical ailments, i.e. specific ailments such as fevers or colds "acting up"? Mr. C.

Comment: There is something magic about seven. We hear of seven-year economic cycles, for example — seven years of plenty and seven years of economic distress. So I suppose it's not unusual to give birth to a theory of seven-year recurrence of physical ailments. Until you mentioned it, Mr. C., I had not heard about it. I doubt there is any scientific basis for its validity.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In a recent column you reassured a reader that the "little blackeye specks" are floaters and usually nothing to be concerned about. Well, I had "floaters" and my doctor discovered that I had a torn retina. They can't be dismissed lightly. — Mr. E.

Comment: Chest pain should not be dismissed lightly; Yet every chest ache is not due to a heart attack. Stomach pain should not be dismissed lightly. Yet every upset is not due to an ulcer or gall bladder attack or acute appendicitis.

For the many thousands of individuals concerned about specks floating before their eyes occasionally, I still repeat they are not serious. However, as I always do (and will continue to advise ad nauseum) I suggest that whenever there is any doubt or concern, one should seek proper medical advice to solve the problem.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Can anxiety cause anemia? — Mrs. M.

Comment: I don't see how or why — unless the person becomes so nervous he cuts down on his normal food intake and suffers from malnutrition.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 4

Your birthday today: Your year gets off to a slow start but builds rapidly thereafter. It is filled with promise especially beyond your ability to exploit fully, so you must choose which of many offers to follow. Any reasonable venture is almost certain to thrive, but in erratic ups and downs without warning of change.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): There are advantages in doing the normal Sunday routines and simply watching for new perspectives you people near you. Find out what is going on in the personal worlds of your friends and neighbors.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you must putter around, do it with your own things, not your partners. You can find some interesting and educational experiences just by talking with new acquaintances, friends you haven't seen lately.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Work with other people on moving items, rearranging your home. Take the initiative socially. If there is a rivalry going, strive diligently but gracefully to prevail.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): New horizons open — new hobbies with people already busy and ready to welcome you. Modern gadgets, chemical products results you don't intend: read the directions and precautions carefully.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Don't sulk or feel rejected just because some group has formed without inviting you. An outer face brings your chance later. Tinkering with appliances does not produce good results now.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The inspiration of the morning works well all day. Dress up to fit a venturesome mood. Take your loved ones with you; enjoy revisiting some place where there are happy memories.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Get started early with your with your share of the community expression of faith. A midday siesta is helpful, as your many different activities end in a social evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): News from far and near trickles through, and your prospects improve. Take nothing-for granted, listen carefully, and check your facts. Social and romantic interests thrive this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You find out things you'd rather not be responsible for knowing. But there's little you can do about it. Visit to older people foster good long-term results. Let the past alone in your general conversation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This Sunday you are too easily drawn into bickerings. Keep to your schedules—pleasure comes last unless arrangements doesn't work. Your appetite may be more than your real needs; moderation is suggested.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19): Friends now turn out to be helpful, without conscious effort. Proceed step-by-step with the plans you laid out last week. If you have no particular aims, see what your loved ones are about and join them.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You may misunderstand something either by hearing only one side of the story or by loss of context. Read between lines in letters. Enjoy the quieter, passive pleasures of home today.

For January 5

Your birthday today: At the end of this coming year you will take a long look back and realize that details spelled out today would not be believed. Your circumstances are subject to changes from crises or outdated influences you cannot see until the last minute. Be prepared to be nudged to revise your plans on short notice. Dramatic interests thrive this week.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): There is no reason to rely on transit schedules. Start extra early. Make notes about a novel idea for your work which occurs about midday. Put it into action after considering the details.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Some problem connected with your work is solved. Make room for more productive action. You can revise home arrangements.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your work requires all the pressure that can be applied. Personal relationships are quite the rage.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Everybody has a different idea for using your time and making use of your facilities. Tools and appliances balk at the least mishandling. Abide by the advice of loved ones and wait for the phase to pass.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You have the grace and serenity to overlook the-bad manners of others. Take a little time to plan for a vacation. Avoid promises or pressing for declarations from others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your friends are full of well-intended surprises, not all of them quite what you can use. Share your work load.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your work is marked by the unexpected, perhaps some passing moment of crisis. Free time is filled with talk and noise unless you take special efforts to find quiet.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): More good prospects develop as you put your information together and proceed with your plans. Change your pace completely at quitting time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You are still prone to awkward situations, particularly with mechanical or borrowed equipment. Your temper is under considerable stimulus; be justly proud by holding it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Nothing relating to financing should be taken for granted or left unchecked. Family disputes perhaps should come into the open and be settled. It is better to back away from a confrontation with outsiders. Secret romantic attachments suffer jealousy.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 19): You can bring some friends together on some of your plans now.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You are called upon to understand the shortcomings of others and to put up with delayed receipts of money due you.

Israel Commandos Return With Seven Ton Radar Station

TEL AVIV (CP) — Excited weapons experts today were examining an entire radar installation which Israeli commandos stole from Egypt and flew back to Israel, sources disclosed today.

The Soviet-built radar station, seized from an Egyptian base on the Gulf of Suez near Ras Ghareb on Dec. 26, weighed seven tons and was reported to have cost $1,000,000.

Capture of the brand-new equipment was a well-known secret here but details were squashed by military security. Only after the story was first published abroad did military censorship relax restrictions.

No official announcement has been made on the dazzling capture but word of the feat has spread quickly through Israel.

While research on the radar station was reported being carried out at the Weizmann Institute of Science 13 miles south of here, new fighting flared today on the Israeli-Lebanese border.

The Israeli military command said an Israeli task force had penetrated inside Lebanon, blowing up a guard post and returning with 21 Arab captives.

The 2½-hour raid was in retaliation for what the Israelis said were a number of "aggressive" incidents on the border, including the kidnapping of an Israeli night watchman by Arab commandos on New Year's Day.

Sources here said today the radar station was taken by commandos who surprised a small garrison at Ras Ghareb on the west coast of the Gulf of Suez about 125 miles south of Suez town. The raid was carried out with air cover, according to military sources at the time.

Israeli jets struck at military targets in the area while the commandos slowly crawled toward the station, the Israeli military correspondent describing the action said the sentries of the Egyptian posts started firing only when the raiders had moved in close.

During the raid the Israelis captured four Egyptians and inflicted "several casualties" on its defenders, the sources said.

After the Israelis had located the radar station, they called in heavy-duty helicopters and began dismantling the equipment with acetylene torches.

After the raiders returned to the Israeli-held Sinai, the chief of staff, Lt.-Gen. Haim Bar-Lev, told them:

"What you did was so complicated and involved, and carried out with such precision despite many obstacles, that it seems like something from a film world rather than from the world of reality."

Although word of the capture quickly spread throughout Israel, local newspapers and foreign correspondents were not permitted to print or file stories of its capture.

Target of the Israeli raid on Lebanon today was, the little border village of Qela, where the watchman was reported taken after his abduction.

The village was throughly combed by the Israelis, who withdrew into Israel without firing a shot, the Israeli spokesman said.

After their departure the area came under Arab shell fire.

The Israeli action followed recent increased aggression mounted from Lebanese territory, the spokesman said.

Hijacked Jet Gets Battery; On to Panama

LIMA, Peru (CP) — A hijacked airliner that five Brazilian revolutionaries got control of for 27 hours at Lima's airport left today for Cuba. It will stop on the way to refuel in Panama.

The airliner was hijacked Thursday and, after it landed in Lima to refuel, the pilot said he was unable to restart the plane because an engine wouldn't turn over. Mechanics installed a new battery that was flown in from Chile and arrived late Friday night.

Before continuing on their delayed flight to Cuba, the four men and one girl who had hijacked the Caravelle aircraft had waited impatiently at Jorge Chavez Airport for the new battery to arrive.

Forced to wait inside the plane with them—the Brazilian hijackers were armed with revolvers, grenades and knives—were 21 passengers and seven crew members.

Waiting outside were officials and police, who surrounded the plane to keep away journalists and anyone who might upset the hijackers.

The Brazilians took over the plane Thursday night just after it left Montevideo, Uruguay, on a flight to Rio de Janeiro.

It landed at Buenos Aires, where the hijackers allowed an elderly couple to leave after the woman fainted, and at Antofagasta, Chile, for refuelling.

The hijackers' plan went wrong when the jetliner landed here Friday to refuel.

The two engines did not start and Jorge Chavez Airport does not have the correct electrical equipment to charge the Caravelle's batteries.

So, while arrangements were made for generators to be brought here to do the job, the long wait began.

The hijackers were identified as James Alan Luce, Athos Magno Costa e Silva, Claudio Galeno Magalhaes Linhares, Luis Alberto Silva and an attractive 22-year-old girl, Isolde Sorensen.

They said that if their plane did not start, they would ask that another airliner be sent from Brazil. They refused to transfer to another plane here to continue their trip to Cuba.

Church Hall Raid Claimed As Unfair

TORONTO (CP) — A United Church minister Friday criticized police for arresting a Roman Catholic priest and six of his parishioners following a New Year's raid on a church hall.

Rev. Vernon Kimball, pastor of Queen Street United Church, said he had gone to the dance as an invited guest with other Protestants and as he arrived police were questioning Rev. Ambrose McCabe, 33.

Father McCabe was charged with keeping liquor and selling it on the grounds that the banquet permit issued the priest had the wrong address. It should have carried the address of St. Mary's Church hall, but instead had the address of St. Mary's Ukrainian Catholic Church.

"The people felt they were treated like animals," Mr. Kimball said in an interview. "They were good people, at a nice party. There were grandfathers and grandmothers there...It was not a drunken brawl, or anything like one."

Police seized 431 bottles of beer, 28 full bottles of liquor and 13 partly-full bottles.

Joseph Chappell, chairman of the dance committee, said the statement in the address was also made by Father McCabe.

"It was made either by a liquor salesman who helped Father McCabe, or by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario itself when typing out the permit."

Mr. Chappell said parish members would protest to Provincial Secretary Robert Welch.

"It is our obligation to clear Father McCabe's name, which has been seriously hurt by this

The priest said in an interview that police knew about the permit but did nothing until the dance started.

"Police knew on the morning of that day that there was a mistake in the address of the banquet permit for the hall and they did nothing. They could have approached the dance committee and the matter could have been corrected in a few minutes.

"But instead, they waited all day till liquor was served, then came in and laid charges. ...Their attitude was terrible. One told me 'well, this is the first time I've arrested a priest for bootlegging.'"

Two Hour Difference

Australian Entry Beats Canadian Falcon Jet

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — A Hawker Siddeley 125 jet trainer, owned by the Australian airline Qantas, Friday won the jet section of the London-to-Sydney air race by beating its only competitor, a Falcon fanjet entered by the Canadian Air Transport Command.

The Qantas aircraft completed the final Adelaide-to-Sydney leg in one hour 42 minutes, making a total flying time from London to Sydney of 31 hours 29 minutes and 30 seconds.

The Canadian jet took just over two hours longer, even though it landed in Sydney about 10 minutes ahead of its rival.

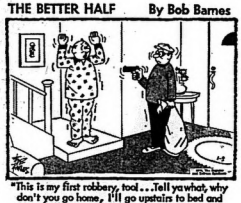
The final leg of the race began Friday but low-lying clouds, gale-force winds and heavy rain forced race officials to halt the competitors at Griffith in southwestern New South Wales. It had originally been intended only as a refuelling stop.

The Canadian and Qantas craft were the only entrants in a special jet class separate from the other 64 planes in the London-to-Sydney race. The jets were competing for a special trophy only and did not share in the cash prizes awarded to winners in other categories in the race.

Several planes were unable to land at Griffith Friday, and one leading Australian competitor, a Beechcraft Bonanza piloted by Trevor Brough'a'm, lost all chance of winning the $25,000 first prize when he crash-landed on a farm.

Among flyers diverted from Griffith to Narrandera, some 35 miles away, was British, woman pilot Sheila Scott.

Miss Scott is almost certain to win the prize for the first "all-woman" crew to complete the 12,000-mile air race.



The Canadian French-built Dassault Falcon executive jet is larger and more powerful than the Australian entry. The Falcon cruises at 510 miles an hour and normally is used for fast light transport. It is attached to 412 Squadron, based in Ottawa.

The Canadian crew was headed by Capt. D. B. (Doc) O'Connor, 36, of Capreol, Ont.

With O'Connor, the flight commander, were pilots, Maj. Roger O. Landay, 36, Smooth Rock Falls, Ont., Capt. C. (Midge) Pennington, 45, Winnipeg, and Capt. R. T. (Bob) Brinkhurst, 40, Cut Knife, Sask., and crew member Cpl. Ken MacDougall, 32, Glace Bay, N.S.

The race started Dec. 18 and commemorates the 50th anniversary of the first England-to-Australia flight by Sir Ross Smith and Sir Keith Smith in a Vickers Vimy biplane.

Dual Government

Rochester Has Two Mayors

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Michael W. Roche elected to the city council last November, has two homes. As a result, Rochester now has two mayors and two city councils.

The government turmoil apparently will have to be settled in court.

Roche's election gave the Republicans a five-to-four majority on the council, but Democrats charged Roche lived in an apartment in suburban Chili, not Rochester.

The dual government developed Friday when the council met to organize.

Roche took his oath of office, but his name wasn't mentioned in the first roll call. Democrats held a council majority under the old administration and Democratic Mayor Frank T. Lamb, as the presiding officer, refused to recognize Roche.

The council's first vote was whether Roche's name should be called. Roche shouted his vote without being recognized.

The Democrats recorded the vote as a 4-to-4 tie. The Republicans recorded it as 5-4 in their favor.

Rochester's council elects the mayor. The Republicans claimed to have elected Councilman Stephen May as mayor by a 5-4 vote.

Lamb said the vote was 4-4, and he was still mayor.

Lamb recessed the meeting and the Democrats walked out. The Republicans stayed on, saying Mayor-elect May had not called a recess.

The Republicans continued the meeting, recording with each motion that the Democrats did not vote. After the Republicans ended their meeting, the Democrats returned and adjourned theirs.

When Roche's two residences became known after the election, the Democrats sued in U.S. district court to have his election voided. They were turned down but brought another suit in state Supreme Court, where a ruling is expected Monday.

Lamoureux Cuts Off Foyer As Studio for MP Interviews

OTTAWA (CP) — Television and radio reporters have been advised by Speaker Lucien Lamoureux that the foyer before the Commons chamber is off limits henceforth for interviews by members of Parliament.

Mr. Lamoureux has offered instead a room on the floor below the foyer for such interviews.

The Speaker says that many members consider that the foyer interviews aren't in keeping with the dignity of Parliament.

TV and radio equipment and cameras are banned from the actual Commons chamber and the practice had developed in recent years of interviewing cabinet members and other MPs as they emerged after the daily question period.

Mr. Lamoureux says the new practice, starting with the resumption of Parliament Jan. 1 will be carried out on an experimental basis to see how it works.

Beagle Has A Nose for Marijuana

LOCKPORT, N.Y. (AP) — Mitzi, a clean-living beagle pup, is developing a reputation as a marijuana hound.

At 10 months of age, Mitzi and her sensitive nose have been in action twice for the Niagara County sheriff's department, which credits her with sniffing out hidden stores of the weed.

In the latest raid, on New Year's Day, deputies said she turned up a cache of marijuana in a pool table pocket at a motorcycle club. Fifty-two men and women were arrested.

In mid-October Mitzi accompanied a raid on a hippie clothing shop and found marijuana in a television set, an officer reported.

"She follows the scent of the marijuana," said Deputy Sheriff J. R. Reid, "and after she finds it she stays right there and kind of wags her tail."

Deputy William D. Tolhurst says he has been training Mitzi to find marijuana since he got her as a six-week-old pup for his son, Dean, 15.

"It took about three weeks," he said, "but she's still in training. We work her all the time."

Tolhurst said the odor of raw marijuana is similar to newmown hay, but not easily detectable by human noses.

"Mitzi can find very small quantities of the stuff," Tolhurst said. "She can find it, even if there are only a couple of seeds."

Canada Withdraws From World Hockey

Swedes Demand Ahearne Quit

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Swedish newspapers today demanded the resignation of J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne, English president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, following Sunday's decision in Geneva to move the 1970 world championships from Canada to Sweden.

After a stormy federation meeting, the Canadians withdrew from March tournament because they would not have been allowed to use professionals. The event was awarded to Sweden, the reserve venue.

Praising the Canadians' "resolute" stand and lamenting the further deterioration of transatlantic hockey relations, the morning newspaper Dagens Nyheter said:

"Ahearne has conducted this confused affair so badly that he should now leave his post. Otherwise there is a great risk that the cold war will be protracted."

Sports editor Bobby Bystroem added that Canada had all his sympathy in the conflict over the use of professionals. Sweden will stage a championship in March contested by "Russians who are paid better than their doctors. Czechoslovaks who get 4,000 crowns ($832) in monthly wages and Swedes, of whom hardly a single one can swear the Olympic oath with a clear conscience."

Sports Editor Martin Lehman of the Swenska Dagbladet commented: "Now it should really be time for Ahearne to take the consequences of an exceptionally devious career and resign. . . . He has declared himself incompetent."

Lehman also noted: "Canada has the courage and power to stand up to (Olympic president) Avery Brundage—none of the major ice hockey nations have done so."

Meanwhile, Swedish hockey officials today estimated that they would lose about 1,000,000 crowns (about $208,000) through Canada's absence from the tournament.

"The Canadians always draw the crowds," one said.

At an initial planning session today, officials were deciding whether to stage all the matches in Stockholm, as last year, or in several different centres around the country.

GENEVA (CP) — Canada lost a battle Sunday in international hockey politics, but the real war appears to be just beginning.

Without a backward look, Canada withdrew from international hockey and lost to Sweden the 1970 championship scheduled for March at Winnipeg and Montreal.

"We quit, said Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association. "We will not retur nuntil the rules permit us to enter a team that is truly representative of Canadian hockey; so we can play our best players as all other countries do."

Mr. Dawson's announcement, which followed a dispute over use of professionals in the 1970 tournament, set off roars in Canada. But they were not roars of protest.

Canadians greeted unlted Sunday night behind the stand of Mr. Dawson and Charles Hay of Hockey Canada, which operates the Canadian national team.

The federal government backed the Canadian delegation to the hilt.

Health Minister John Munro, interviewed in Ottawa as he watched the Canadians play Czechoslovakia in an international hockey game, said the federal government had agreed to underwrite any losses suffered by the CAHA in

Air Battle Is Fought Over Suez

From AP—Reuters

Israel claimed two kills and Egypt one after their first air battle in more than a month of almost daily Israeli strikes.

The Israeli military command said two of Egypt's MiG-21s exploded in the air and a third was hit during the battle Sunday over Egyptian territory near the Suez Canal.

A spokesman in Cairo said one Israeli jet was shot down in the dogfight and that an Egyptian pilot took an aerial photograph as it exploding. Israel said all its planes returned safely.

Israeli spokesmen said Egyptian jets intercepted the Israeli raiders about 20 miles west of the canal while the Israelis were on a bombing mission against military targets.

The strike lasted 1¼ hours, the spokesmen said, and the Egyptian planes "did not interfere again" after the dogfight.

Viet Cong Attacks Growing

SAIGON (Reuters) — Terrorist activity in Vietnam today appeared to be on the upswing with reports of a new guerrilla attack on a populated centre north of Saigon.

Guerrilla gunners Sunday fired three mortar rounds into a market place at Ben Cat district town 25 miles north of Saigon, killing three civilians and wounding seven others, a South Vietnamese military spokesman said today.

The casualty toll from another Viet Cong mortar attack Sunday on two refugee centres near Da Nang rose to 12 killed and 72 wounded, the U.S. command said today. "Since there was no military installation in the area, we are considering this a deliberate attack against a population centre," a U.S. spokesman said.

"It could be in keeping with hir (the Viet Cong's) terrorizing the population to create the impression of military strength and erode the feeling of security in the ability of the government to protect the people," he said.

The attack on the camps at An Hoa 24 miles southwest of Da Nang was part of a significant increase of Viet Cong activity in the northern provinces, the spokesman added.

Eighteen Perish In Fires

ST. ROCH DE L'ACHIGAN, Que. (CP) — Eighteen persons died in two fires during the weekend in Quebec—including 12 burned to death Sunday when a small frame home was destroyed in this Laurentian village.

The other fire Saturday at Lac des Iles, 140 miles northeast of Montreal, took six lives.

Provincial police said there was nothing anyone could have done to save the 12 at St. Roch de L'Achigan, 30 miles north of Montreal. All that remained was a stove jutting out from rubble.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Proulx, 37 and 34, and their five children: Renee, 12, Daniel, 11, Alain, 8, Maurice Jr., 4, and Linda, 2.

The other victims, visiting the

Thieu Is Criticized For My Lai Killings

SAIGON (AP)—A South Vietnamese Senate committee reported today that U.S. troops massacred civilians at My Lai, but said President Nguyen Van Thieu "must bear the entire responsibility."

The report of the Senate defence committee, read by its chairman, Senator Tram Van Don, accused Thieu not only of making only a cursory investigation into the alleged massacre, but also of failing to make sure his subordinates clearly understood "national policy" on the conduct of the war.

By this, the report apparently referred to a need for closer co-operation between province chiefs and southern allied military forces operating in the field.

Thieu's government has maintained since last November that no massacre by U.S. troops took place in My Lai, although the U.S. Army has filed charges against two soldiers. One of them, Lieut. William L. Calley Jr., is accused of murdering 109 civilians in the village on March 16, 1968.

"A number of U.S. troops fired and killed indiscriminately, causing fatalities to a number of civilians, most of them aged people, women and children," the Senate report said without estimating the total number killed.

"The South Vietnamese government tried to cover up its responsibilities concerning a massacre of many civilians right in our national territory by issuing a short statement," it added.

The defence ministry had said on Nov. 22 that reports of a massacre were "completely inaccurate," and that 20 to 25 civilians had been accidentally killed by U.S. bombs and artillery.

The finding was not "based on any accurate investigation, despite the fact that executive branch has all the necessary means to perform this said investigation," Don's report said.

Trudeau In Paris

PARIS (Reuters) — Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau arrived here today on his way to Geneva for a vacation in Switzerland.

Trudeau, who was met at Orly Airport by a French government protocol official, went to a hotel to wait for his flight to Geneva.

Trudeau returned to Montreal Sunday after spending a week skiing and skin-diving in privacy during his Caribbean vacation and commented the British Honduras government for its "great discretion" in handling his visit.

Agnew Doing Well in Defining Policy

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew appears to be making headway in communicating a clearer definition of the Nixon Doctrine to the leaders of U.S. allies in Asia.

Conversations with diplomats and members of the vice-presidential party indicate Agnew is off to a good start as a presidential emissary.

One of the main reasons for his 11-nation Asian tour was to clear up misunderstandings about the policy President Nixon outlined last July in Guam, a policy combining a U.S. pledge to meet its treaty commitments and provide a nuclear shield for Asian allies, while at the same time emphasizing Asian self-reliance.

Agnew today arrived in neutralist Nepal after visits to four U.S. allies—the Philippines, South Vietnam, Nationalist China and Thailand.

In each of the four latter countries, government leaders questioned him closely about what the United States is going to do. In each, he has given the same firm reply—that the United States plans to remain an Asian power and keep its commitments, but that they must take more of the burden of their defence.

"American officials in Bangkok said they thought part of the problem has been that the doctrine indicates more of a change in emphasis than in basic policy. An Agnew aide termed it more a change in tone. The difference, he said, is that when Nixon and Agnew talk about Asian self-reliance, they mean it.

"It's a matter of giving teeth to the platitudes," he said.

This approach appears to have been especially successful in Thailand. Thai officials made clear to Agnew they believe they can handle their own Communist insurgency problem without the assistance of U.S. troops. Actually, the officials said, the United States started implementing something like the Nixon Doctrine several years ago when it stopped flying helicopters into battle for the Thais.

Mayor Tells Inauguration:

Province and Municipalities Should Stage Conference

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The gradual loss of administrative areas over which the city no longer has control has prompted a suggestion by Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott that a provincial – municipal conference be held — to discover where the municipalities are going.

The need for a conference between provincial and local governments was expressed by Mayor Scott at this morning's inaugural session of Belleville city council.

"Increasingly," said Mayor Scott "there are many areas that are not come under the control of our council. These are problems which directly affect our citizens and we must deal with other levels of government in order to take care of them."

Mayor Scott listed health, welfare and social services, administration of justice, and — starting this year — assessment, as areas over which council now has no direct control.

He went on to say that education was now almost entirely removed from municipal decision except for the responsibility of collecting school board's money.

"These sharing and total loss of responsibilities are advantageous, but in some instances make municipal governing more difficult."

* * *

"It is time that we had a provincial-municipal conference of the province of Ontario with the cities and urban centres to establish a bill of rights for municipalities — to find out where we are going."

Mayor Scott noted the need for proper planning on an area basis.

Belleville, he said, must join with neighboring municipalities in an unselfish manner to plan for a "great new urban area here in the Quinte district so that the entire area will enjoy the benefits of our age."

"Proper planning for a larger area must be carried out so that our heritage shall not be lost to our children," Mayor Scott added.

As an opener for his inaugural address Mayor Scott said that Belleville and the city's elected representatives faced a challenging and fascinating three years.

"It will be necessary for all members of council to bear equally the burden of work and responsibility."

He said the people of Belleville wanted more jobs with better pay.

"This has been decided for us and it is our responsibility to carry out their (the people's) decision."

But, he warned, this must be done in an orderly manner. The city must have water, sewers, roads, bridges, smooth traffic movement on good traffic arteries, shopping facilities and urban renewal schemes.

But before any urban renewal could be commenced in Belleville on a large scale, either by private or public funds, the mayor said it would be necessary that some fund control program be instituted to prevent possible spring flooding in the downtown area.

"Nothing has really been done about this in all the past 100 or more years," the mayor said.

He went on to say that an excellent report on this matter was shortly to be presented to council and said he would press for commencement of some start of flood control measures in co-operation with the Moira River Conservation Authority.

But in dealing with more material matters, or "structual steel for orderly growth," the mayor warned that the heart and soul of the community must not be forgotten.

"These," he said, "are partially covered by increased library facilities, increased recreational facilities, increased and new museum facilities, arts and theatre facilities, hospital facilities and most of all all we must not forget the people.

"The ecology of our environment must be maintained and reversed, if possible, by increased efforts against pollution of air and water.

"With a three year term there may be a tendency to finance projects over this span. This type of financing must be limited or it can end up with balloon payments in the final and third year. This piled on top of normal increase could make the third and final year unbearable for the taxpayer and economically unsound.

"It is my intention and pledge to be diligent and continue to work in the best interest for all the people, and I look forward to the challenge of working together with such an excellent council."

A Familiar Trail

Today was the first day back to school for approximately 14,000 Belleville area students after a 16-day vacation that began on Dec. 19.

It's Back to School As the Holidays End

If a trait of younger people today seems to be long faces, there is probably good reason for it.

The Christmas and New Year's holidays ended this morning for approximately 14,000 Belleville area students who trotted back to school after vacation.

For 16 days, Belleville's young people took time off from books to enjoy Christmas and New Years and all those days in between.

And examinations are in the offing for two of the Belleville secondary schools. Both Quinte and Moira Secondary Schools will hold January exams.

Quinte Secondary will hold tests Jan. 13 through to Jan. 23 Moira will begin examinations on Jan. 19, running through until Jan. 23.

Chamber to Hold Planning Session

The first meeting of the new directors of Belleville Chamber of Commerce for 1970 will be held tonight at 7:30 at the Bank of Montreal board room.

The event is a planning meeting, called to deal with policy and budget for the new year.

The Chamber of Commerce has 12 directors, from which the executive is chosen. The new executive is expected to be announced following tonight's meeting.

PE Auxiliary Blood Clinic

PICTON — The women of Prince Edward County Hospital Auxiliary are "out for blood" this week.

A donor clinic will be conducted under their sponsorship in the Anglican Church Parish Hall on Wednesday, Jan. 7.

Mrs. John Mathies, spokesman for the Women's Auxiliary has stressed the urgent need for donors. This clinic, the first of three scheduled for 1970, has set its goal at 200 pints.

The donor clinic will be open from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and from 6.30 p.m. to 9 p.m. this Wednesday.

'Mild' Asian Flu in Belleville

Hong Kong flu, which has caused hundreds of deaths from Britain to New Guinea, has surfaced in Belleville in a mild form.

Locally, it is "more of a nuisance than a serious health hazard," says medical officer of health Dr. C. R. Lenk.

Dr. Lenk can testify personally to the flu bug's arrival in the city — both he and his wife suffered mild cases of the disease.

"There are lots of mild cases around, of about three days duration," the medical officer says.

He labels them "similar to the Asian flu cases in the much milder so far.

"Antibodies built up in people who had attacks of Asian flu in previous epidemics don't seem to combat this new strain of flu virus," Dr. Lenk adds.

He added that flu vaccine is also probably ineffective.

"The flu virus is interesting from a scientific point of view, because it changes its nature so quickly — sometimes within a couple of months' time," the doctor said. "But it is far from being a major health problem there."

He warned, however, that older people, those with known respiratory conditions and flu patients who develop severe complications should notify a physician immediately. The virus infection can lower resistance and lay the way open for secondary infections such as pneumonia.

The local health unit has been asked to conduct a pilot survey of the incidence of Asian flu by picking a representative school and reporting weekly on its absentee rate. Within a month, Dr. Lenk expects this survey to indicate whether or not the local flu incidence has grown to epidemic proportions.

$500 Missing After Break-in

Belleville City Police are investigating a weekend breakin at Belleville Food Sales Wholesale Ltd. on Albion Street which resulted in the theft of $500 in cash.

According to police, the breakin occurred sometime Sunday evening or early Monday. Thieves gained entry through a basement window.

Only item damaged in the breakin was a cash register which was pried open to obtain the money.

Twelve-mile Trail Lures Snowmobilers to Presqu'ile Park

Sign Tells Park Sports Story

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
(Staff Reporter)

BRIGHTON — Presqu'ile Park, the site of much "summer fun" for years now, has added a new dimension — a snowmobile trail for "winter fun."

"Snowmobile recreation is new within the last few years and Presqu'ile Provincial Park is a multi-purpose park so we're trying to integrate snowmobiling as a recreation in Provincial Parks."

Ken Moore, the superintendent of Presqu'ile Provincial Park and the man who made that statement, estimates that Presqu'ile's snowmobile trail serves residents within a 50-mile radius of the park, which is located just two miles south of Brighton.

The park superintendent noted that, since the trail was completed in mid-December, 332 machines and 583 visitors had made use of the park's facilities, including snowmobile owners from both Belleville and Peterborough.

MORE

"People want to use their machines in the parks and a number of provincial parks are getting into trails such as this so I would say that it's a department of lands and forest policy to have snowmobile trails where suitable," Mr. Moore said.

He also pointed out that the snowmobile trail served an essential purpose: "This trail allows us to exercise some control over the machines and thereby eliminate destruction of small shrubs and the disturbing of wildlife."

A boon to urban residents who have no place to use their snowmobiles, the well-marked Presqu'ile Park trail and attendant parking facilities are offered for public use at no charge.

A study of the one-way 12 mile trail reveals that the initial two miles pass through an area of low sand flats and cedar trees leading into a mile of sand dunes and mature plantation.

Miles four and five cover sparsely planted open fields and mile six winds through heavily wooded mature mixed stands of such species as maples, beech, birch and hemlock.

For the next mile and a half the trail follows Paxton Drive through varied stands of timber and some plantation before crossing Lakeshore Drive and winding through the little camp roads for another mile and a half.

A three mile journey down the lakeshore just back of the sandy beach brings one to the finish of the trail and back to the parking lot and starting point again.

"The trail is just a little rough at present because of a lack of snow but I'm sure this will change — indeed I'd be surprised if it didn't," Mr. Moore said.

He expressed satisfaction with the success of the trail to date but revealed: "We're sizing up the situation and seeing what use is being made of the trail and then we'll see what we can do to enlarge it, perhaps including snowmobile camping next year."

Officials stated that the only problem has been in keeping people on the trail and requested that everyone stay on the trail and off the many shrubs planted in the surrounding area.

The Lands and Forest officials have placed no restrictions on hours or use of the trail and will not do so unless the park is abused.

First Three-year Council Takes Office in Belleville

Belleville's first three-year term for city council was officially launched at city hall this morning with inaugural ceremonies in the council chambers.

Mayor elect J. Russell Scott, was officially sworn into office by City Clerk Adam Stalker and was invested with the robes of his office before a small crowd of interested spectators.

The aldermen for the three year term of council had been sworn in previous to the inaugural session.

In his inaugural address Mayor Scott referred to the gradual loss of administration responsibilities by municipal council bodies and called for a provincial-municipal conference so that municipalities "could find out where they were going."

City Manager J. R. Reynolds opened the inaugural session and invited Mayor elect to take their seats within the bar.

Mayor Scott was then sworn in and was invested with his robes of office by Aldermen Arthur Keegan and Mrs. Jean Smith. Alderman E. A. Orr presented the mayor with his chain of office, while Alderman Donald Soutter presented the gavel.

The inaugural session was marked with presentation of plaques to retiring aldermen Douglas Boyle, Kenneth Soden and Donald J. Williams. Ex-Alderman Richard Ellis was also handed a receiver his plaque.

Alderman Mrs. Robin Jeffery presented Mrs. Scott with a bouquet of roses, while Lt. Col. Ross Allan commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment presented regimental badges and a replica of Peter-owna-Mara, regimental mascot, to Mayor Scott, for his efforts in helping to establish the militia unit in Belleville.

Replying to Mayor Scott's inaugural address, Alderman Gerald Joyce noted that the past two years under Mayor Scott had been very productive, and trusted that the three challenging years ahead would also be productive.

"The key to Belleville's future could conceivably be in the hands of this council," Alderman Joyce said. "Co-operation and hard work can open the door to the brightest future any city could ever have."

Members of the three year council term are as follows: Mayor J. Russell Scott, Alderman J. B. Corke, Alderman E. David, Alderman J. A. Ireland, Alderman (Mrs.) R. Jeffrey, Alderman G. W. Joyce, Alderman A. Keegan, Alderman E. Orr, Alderman P. D. Russell, Alderman (Mrs.) J. L. Smith, Alderman D. M. Soutter.

Among the morning regular business was the passing of the municipal borrowing bylaw authorizing the city to borrow up to $3,429,000 until taxes are collected and a bylaw to provide for the levying of an interim tax rate.

The year's interim tax rate will be for 24 mills for commercial and 32 mills for commercial and industrial properties. Dates for payment on interim taxes will be February 27, and April 30. The penalty for unpaid current taxes will be at the rate of 0.25 per cent per month.

Mrs. Redcliffe is survived by five daughters, Mrs. Ryerson (Nettie) Papst of Brighton; Mrs. Bertha Lawrence of Frankford; Mrs. Hayden (Evelyn) Smith of RR 1, Dartford; Mrs. Laura Burns of Campbellford and Mrs. Clarence (Annabelle) Ellis of Campbellford; four sons, John and Donald Redcliffe of Campbellford. Also surviving are a sister, Mrs. Lily Taylor of Campbellford; 16 grandchildren and 18 great grandchildren.

She was predeceased by her husband, Samuel Redcliffe and by two daughters, Nancy and Ethel Redcliffe.

MRS. FREDERICK WHITE

In failing health for some time, Mrs. Lucy May White of 40 Benjamin St., Belleville, died at the Montgomery Lodge on Sunday evening. She was in her 81st year.

Born in Bath, England, Mrs. White resided in Belleville since coming to Canada in 1913. She was predeceased by her husband Frederick White.

She is survived by two sons, Frederick James White, of Belleville and Lionel Walter White, also of Belleville, as well as two daughters, Mrs. Jack (Violet May) Caddick and Mrs. Richard (Rosie) Gladys Ellis both of Belleville. She leaves two brothers, Stanley Holley and Percy Holley, and one sister, Mrs. Len (Gladys) Gibbons, all of England. She is survived by nine grandchildren and nine greatgrandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 3 p.m. from the John R. Bush Funeral Chapel. Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery, with Rev. E. F. Le-Roy officiating.

A Decade's Challenge

The New Year forecasts of Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott and the leaders of neighboring municipalities are eloquent of the need for this community and the whole region to be equal to the challenges of the seventies.

Barring some international calamity, or a recession brought on by uncontrolled inflation, Canada has only one place to go and that is forward. It will do so in large measure by the initiative and careful planning of its towns and cities.

The continued concentration of people in urban areas, and the growth that this entails, presages many problems of a kind which Canada will do well to avoid. A look at what is happening in the United States should be a guide to planners in this country; a lesson also for the law enforcement people.

In a country where the availability of guns of every description in private hands totals millions and where some 17,000 people die from gunshot wounds every year, where violence in the cities is rampant and the predictions are that it will become worse . . . these are the kind of trends Canadians must avoid at all costs.

We will avoid such evil portents largely through the quality of our urban planning as evidenced by the availability of homes, parks, recreational facilities and so on. As of now the general quality of life in this northern part of the continent is as good as it is anywhere. We must resolve to keep it that way, to "do our thing better in 1970," as Governor-General Roland Michener, borrowing from his granddaughter's phraseology, put it in his New Year message; and in the knowledge that in Canada, broadly speaking, we are pretty well off, a fact quietly set forth by Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau in his message for the seventies.

Those Names

What's in a name? Lots . . . as a reading of any book about the origins of names will prove.

Unfortunately a great many of us have little "feel" for names. That is, they exist not so much for identification as to be mis-pronounced, misused, "dropped" (in the case of the famous) or even by clergymen, government employees and friends (once a year at least, at Christmas) in a manner that often makes one wince.

For units of speech then, if we may refer to them as such, and in daily usage, it is strange they are not accorded more attention.

Oh sure, there is plenty of glad-handing and calling a fellow by his christian name from the moment of introduction, but what about surnames. This is the area in which most confusion exists.

There are all those variations in spelling, such as the Johnsons and the Johnstons and the Johnstones; the McDonalds and the MacDonalds (as in the recent Conservative mayoralty contest) and the ones that end with 'ough,' or 'agh' or 'och.'

And there are Polish names like Maciejewski and Wojciechowski, and you may be a Frenchman or a Spaniard but if you have an interest in people and their names then you can come close to spelling them correctly.

If not — and this is where many of us fall down — it is good manners to ask the other how he spells his name. But then sometimes this creates further confusion and the resulting inscription may be a sight to behold.

People need to get more "with it" as far as names are concerned. And as for those introductions we mentioned earlier, more attention should be paid to them also; too often the tendency at social gatherings, not to mention when a firm takes on new staff, is for people to be left to sort out each other's identity.

What A Waste

Perhaps one of the most depressing items of news in recent days was the announcement that King Hassan of Morocco has given about $100,000,000 to back the Arab struggle against Israel, and has also promised arms and equipment.

It might be argued that the action of Israel in having five gunboats smuggled into the country from France is just as bad — but that at least had a spirit of daring about it, not to mention justification in the face of the Arab world's revengeful attacks on Israel.

There is $100,000,000 —, of how many millions in oil and other assets belonging to one man — which could do so much for the Arabs had it only been donated for peaceful pursuits and for the improvement of living conditions in those underprivileged lands.

Probably never in history has so much been wasted by one man in pursuit of so little.

Fears 'World Conflagration'

Pope Blames World Leaders for Continuing Conflict

By DENNIS REDMONT

VATICAN CITY (AP) — If Pope Paul's New Year plea for peace is any indication, he is likely in 1970 to continue vigorous personal gestures to help end the world's wars.

One gesture may be a symbolic "peace trip" to Hiroshima, Japan, site of the atomic bomb explosion. On the pontiff may make new personal efforts to get Nigerians and Biafrans to the negotiating table.

In 1969, the Pope renewed his long-standing offers to help in achieving what he called "reconciliation" in Vietnam and the Middle East. His Vatican relief agency, Caritas, shipped and flew millions of dollars in medicine and supplies to the sick, the wounded and the homeless in those areas.

Pope Paul travelled for the first time to Africa, and in Uganda he met separately with Biafran and Nigerian delegates in an effort to get negotiations started again. He obtained only vague promises from both sides.

During the holiday season, Pope Paul expressed in several pessimistic speeches his frustration at not achieving results. World leaders — especially those of the major powers — bore the brunt of the blame.

These actions have led some observers to conclude that the Pope may be reverting to the role of a critical observer, rather than that of a participant in world affairs. Many, however, think he will not give up the personal diplomacy that has marked his 6½-year reign.

Peace "concerns leaders, especially those invested with international responsibility," he said again on New Year's Day, during a mass celebrated in a Rome church.

He ended his New Year's observations on peace with a prayer to God which took the form of a confession of humanity. "Lord," the prayer began, "our hands are still bloodstained from the last world wars, so that not all peoples have yet been able to take each other's hand in friendship."

He argued that "the terrible increasing danger of a world conflagration demanded the banishment of war from the earth."

He closed the prayer with visions of "women in tears, children dying, refugees and prisoners crushed by the weight of solitude and suffering."

There has been considerable speculation in the past year that Pope Paul will visit Hiroshima in 1970 to mark the 25th anniversary of the atomic bomb explosion, as another effort to translate his concern for peace. He has been invited to the world's fair at Osaka and to Hiroshima by its mayor.

"Mommy, tell me that nice fairy tale about 'Peace on earth, good will toward men' again!"

A City Prays for Miracles

Hamilton Spectator

Those of us who love Hamilton and who have good reason to boast about its magnificent natural endowments, should hope and even pray that the following miracles will occur during the 1970's, miracles that will help transform our home town from a rather haggy - eyed, sodden former beauty queen to a ravishing (as opposed to ravished) and much-envied metropolis.

First of all, the Civic Square — may it rise out of dirt and rubble with enough good taste and foresightedness to make all other city squares look square indeed.

Secondly, the Mountain — may enough developers take advantage of its great potential that it will be known everywhere for hotels and restaurants that provide a panoramic view second to none in Canada.

Thirdly, the Bay — may its shores be beautified, its waters cleansed, and its air purified, so that like San Francisco Bay, it will become a thing of grace instead of a disgrace.

Finally, our traffic arteries — may they (and this would be a miracle) become sleek and wide and well cared for, so that Hamiltonians of the future will never think of them except as something one puts on bread and pothole except as a coulee or a gulch way out on the distant prairies.

On second thought, let us indeed pray.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sir Ernest Shackleton, Antarctic explorer, died aboard ship 48 years ago today—in 1922—on an expedition. In 1908 he led a party towards the South Pole by way of Beardmore Glacier but had to turn back after 1,000 miles on foot, little more than 100 miles from the Pole. A few years later his ship was crushed by the Antarctic ice and he led an expedition to seek help by sailing 850 miles in an open 22-foot boat. Shackleton never reached the Pole but was one of the first great scientific explorers.

1663—Poet Francois Villon was banished from Paris for theft.

1916—First universal conscription bill in British history was introduced in Parliament.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the Germans' new offensive cut one of the United States 7th Army's main supply routes in northeast France and further east entered a town nine miles north of Strasbourg across the Rhine; British and Indian armored forces took the city of Akyab, third largest Burma port; Yugoslav partisan forces crossed Austrian border advancing toward Klagenfurt and Graz.

Toward Water Safety

Indoor Pool in City Would Benefit Many

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In a letter printed in The Intelligencer November 17, I outlined the need for an indoor municipal pool.

Although there was no response in the paper, I did talk to many people who had read the article and who agreed with me. In this letter I would like to state one reason which illustrates the need for such pool facilities, that would be available to all citizens regardless of economical status.

The most important reason is that of safety. The ability to swim, in itself, does not indicate a knowledge of or regard for safety. Many who drown are good swimmers. For instance, can you roll, in a doubled - over position, from your front onto your back while in deep water? Try it! It is not as easy as it sounds. If you cannot, then you have reason to fear severe abdominal cramps. People who drown from cramps, do so because of the inability to perform this skill while in pain. A series of lessons in water safety would enable them to learn this basic skill.

Did you realize that more people drown in the early winter months than in the middle of the winter? The main reason is a lack of basic safety knowledge which would lead to wise behavior on and around ice.

Are you aware that there is a correct way of entering water for the first time? That first plunge into the lake next summer could kill you! Did you know that the age group in which the most drownings occur is that group which is the most physically fit — 16 to 25 years of age? Drownings in this age group are due to ignorance of basic water safety knowledge and the inability to perform the most basic skills.

I could go on and on, but it should not be necessary. With the water available to us in Belleville — the lakes, rivers, streams and bays that surround us, it is a necessity to understand and know water safety rules whether we are swimming, boating, water skiing or skating.

Present programs in water safety do not reach all the populace. The summer program at the Kinsmen Pool is always full as is the winter program sponsored by Quinte Kiwanis at the Tops pool. An indoor municipal pool would allow more time to be available, hence more could benefit from such necessary instruction.

MURRAY WORKMAN.

Swedes Tackle Urban Growth

Kingston Whig-Standard

As Canada's urban population continues to increase all levels of government will have to give much more serious consideration to the idea of building whole new towns and cities. It is clear that if our urban civilization and our existing cities are to be saved, we must start now to plan and build new communities instead of allowing the metropolitan areas to straggle themselves in uncontrolled sprawl, in traffic, pollution and human misery.

In this regard Canada can learn a great deal from some positive examples of new towns in many different parts of the world. Greater Stockholm, for example, is meeting the housing needs of that city's population by designing such new communities as Vallingby, Farsta, and others in the metropolitan area, all are connected by new public transportation facilities. The new satellite towns are built on city - owned lands which is leased for 99 years. Many of the apartments are owned by tenant co-operatives, sending tax houses or apartments.

Greater Stockholm does not consider housing to be a commodity to be used for speculation, but believes that everyone is entitled to a decent place in which to live, in proportion to his income. It should be noted that as more people move into the new planned communities in the metropolitan areas of Stockholm, total renewal of the downtown areas is being carried out. Oslo, Helsinki and Copenhagen are solving their housing problems in similar ways. So are many of the northern European countries in Germany and the Netherlands. In England more new towns are being created all the time to take care of the growing population. Many of these towns are getting their own industries and jobs for their inhabitants.

Each day more people are moving into Canada's urban areas. The main attractions, of course, are better-paying jobs and a more stimulating way of life. Unfortunately, for many of the newcomers the cities no longer offer either attraction, but only a new kind of frustration and misery. It is obvious that planning and construction of new cities and satellite towns must be based on a more rational approach to the problem of an increasing number of people living closely together. Clearly, urban growth has become one of the major challenges facing Canada.

Dubcek Is Ambassador To Turkey

Ottawa Citizen

Alexander Dubcek's appointment as Czech ambassador to Turkey indicates that some moderation still survives in the Prague regime. The leader who tried to steer Czechoslovakia on a more humane course, to bring it a measure of freedom, is not to be stripped of all dignity after all.

A few years ago, a political loser in Czechoslovakia could expect only to be reviled, and likely to end his days in prison or on the gallows. Mr. Dubcek, who has refused to recant, is to be spared that brutality.

While Soviet tanks remain marshalled in Czechoslovakia, that is probably the best that can be expected.

Hospital Fires Woman Employee

Discrimination Through Compulsory Unionism

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The Christmas Eve dismissal of Miss Agnes Hamstra from Toronto's New Mount Sinai Hospital (because of the Building Service Employees' International Union's refusal to respect the Christian principles which prevent Miss Hamstra from supporting it, and the Union's unwillingness to allow Miss Hamstra to pay the equivalent or double the amount of BSEIU dues to a recognized charity) was a jarring reminder that Ontario has a long way to go before all workers enjoy legal equality of employment opportunity and the freedom to say no to unions of their own choosing.

Miss Hamstra is one of many people who have known raw discrimination during 1969 because of compulsory unionism. Let's hope that the Government will have the political courage to introduce legislation that will order an immediate cessation of once and for all! — of the widespread practice of coercing men into unions committed to social economic and political principles the very opposite of their own.

We have just entered the Seventies. Hopefully this will not be just another decade marred by discrimination and dictatorship but one marked by justice and liberty for all. Time will tell.

GERALD BANDEZANDE,
Executive Secretary,
The Committee for Justice and Liberty,
Rexdale, Ontario.

Christmas Goes to the Dump

Christmas is a fast-fading memory and signs of its waning lustre were to be seen today in Belleville. Public works crews this morning began the task of trucking Christmas trees to the city dump. The service, advertised well ahead, saw hundreds of householders pitch their trees on side-walks and front lawns ready for pick up by truck crews.

Canada Quits World Hockey

Initial plans for the Winnipeg-Montreal tournament.

Mr. Munro estimated losses at $150,000. Gordon Juckes, executive-director of the CAHA, said so far $400,000 has been spent in Canada on the tournament.

The Geneva meeting was called to discuss the professional issue. Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, asserted that any teams playing against professionals could be banned from the 1972 Winter Olympics.

The International Ice Hockey Federation, under president Bunny Ahearne, ruled in July that teams could use nine professionals in world championship play.

Canada pulled out Sunday after five members of the federation held an emergency meeting and decided professionals would not be allowed in the Winnipeg-Montreal tournament.

So ended international hockey for Canada and 14 years of battling with the Russians for the world title. International hockey jumped into prominence in 1955 when Penticton Vs regained the World Cup from Russia.

Trail Smoke Eaters in 1961 were the last Canadian team to win. The Russians, who have no professionals—just professional amateurs—have won it ever since.

Now Canadians begin a new battle. Mr. Dawson said his country will enter a team of amateurs in the 1972 Olympics, but in the intervening years "we intend to question the eligibility of every other team and make ineligible any and all teams which have professionals."

Voice of Women President Protests Defoliation Plans

HALIFAX (CP) — Mrs. Muriel H. Duckworth of Halifax, president of the Voice of Women, has asked the Canadian government to stop plans to defoliate a forested strip along the United States-Canadian border.

Mrs. Duckworth said in a letter today to External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp that it was an "incredibly short-sighted and risky program."

A member of the Vermont legislature said last week that the United States Boundary Commission plans to defoliate a 20-foot strip of forest along the border.

Mrs. Duckworth said the defoliation should be stopped until picloram, the chemical to be used, is fully investigated.

New York Murders Rise

NEW YORK (AP) — There were 7.7 per cent more murders reported in the city during the first 11 months of 1969 than the same period of 1968, police report. They said 945 murders were reported from January through November, 1969, compared with 886 in 1968.

U.S. Diplomat Joins Rhodesia In Denying Deal in Spy Case

SALISBURY (Reuters) — Paul O'Neill, U.S. consulate-general in Salisbury, today joined the Rhodesian government in denying reports of a secret deal aimed at bashing up American involvement in two recent spying cases here.

The Johannesburg Sunday Times said that two men recently jailed for betraying Rhodesian economic secrets to an unnamed foreign power were actually working for the U.S.

It was agreed to keep this quiet because the Americans threatened to withdraw their Salisbury mission if it were made known, the report alleged.

A Rhodesian government spokesman Sunday night said: "There was no such deal. We have no knowledge of it."

The Sunday Times alleged that one of the convicted men, financial journalist John Roger Nicholson, was working for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency and had the consulate's political officer, Ird Smith, as his contact.

It said the other man, lawyer Alfred Gallaher, worked for the U.S. state department and had O'Neill as his contact.

Gallaher, a former adviser to Premier Ian Smith's Rhodesia Front party, was sentenced to four years in prison Dec. 18 after pleading guilty to two charges under the Official Secrets Act and two others under the emergency powers regulations.

Nicholson, Scottish-born financial editor of the Rhodesian Herald, was sentenced to 18 months in jail on similar charges a week before.

O'Neill said in a statement that allegations about CIA or his own involvement in the case were pure fantasy. Smith denied that he even knew Nicholson and said "the report is absolutely untrue. . . . Somebody is whistling in the dark."

Earthquake Rocks City In Yunnan

HONG KONG (Reuters) — Part of the southern Chinese city of Kunming may have been levelled in a severe earthquake in Yunnan province early today, an unconfirmed report says.

Quoting "sketchy reports" reaching Hong Kong, the English-language newspaper Daily Mail says thousands were feared trapped beneath rubble in the provincial capital when a severe tremor of between 7.5 and 8.0 on the open-ended Richter scale shook the mountainous area near Burma.

The newspaper says part of the city was levelled. But there were no immediate reports from Peking of casualties or damage.

The Hong Kong bureau of Peking's official New China news agency said it had not received any reports of earthquake damage or casualties.

"Nothing has come through yet," an editor said.

Kunming was the site of a big U.S. air base during the Second World War. Yunnan province, which borders Burma, Laos and North Vietnam, has a population of about 20,000,000.

The quake, recorded by a number of meteorological agencies in Asia, was universally considered severe, since the strongest tremor ever registered on the Richter scale was 8.9.

Windsor Woman Plans To Aid Draft Dodgers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A 54-year-old Windsor woman, who has been aiding American draft resisters since Dec. 1, says she intends to open a job placement service in downtown Windsor this month.

Mrs. Jean Dearing, a past president of the United Auto Workers Local 444 Women's Auxiliary, says the centre will have a staff of three or four persons. Mrs. Dearing said the $50 a week paid to the workers in the centre will come from donations.

Mrs. Dearing, a divorcee and mother of two married sons, has opened her three-bedroom home to draft resisters, most of whom stay for a day or two and then move on to Toronto and other parts of Canada.

"If I can save the life of one American boy, I feel I have done something worthwhile," she says.

Mrs. Dearing says her actions do not encourage Americans to desert or dodge the draft.

"When they come to me, they've already considered all the options," says Mrs. Dearing.

Services provided by the Windsor woman include providing instructions on how to apply for landed immigrant status as well as providing food and shelter.

She says her $55-a-week alimony payments are insufficient to support her work but she says Windsor citizens have already pledged to make 100 beds available for draft dodgers.

Mrs. Etienne Meunier, a neighbor, said no cries for help were heard. Another neighbor said that "except for the crackling of the fire, it was quiet."

She said the victims must have died in their sleep.

A spokesman for the fire department said the alarm was rung in at 7:05 and the house "was crumbling" as he got there minutes later.

"No one knows how it started," he said.

All the bodies had been retrieved and identified by supper hour Sunday.

At Lac des Iles, police identified the dead as Dollard Gratton, 42, and five of his seven children, who had been placed in foster homes because of a family problem.

Police said the father, a sawmill worker, picked up the five, ranging in age from five to 14 years, to take them to supper Friday.

The foster parents reported the children missing when they did not return Friday night.

The QPP's homicide squad in Montreal is investigating.

Women Doctors Vital to Formerly Male-oriented Profession

TORONTO (CP) — "I think medicine is a very female profession," says Dr. Yvonne de Buda, a tall, blonde mother of three.

"Men who feel a bias about women doctors usually come around after dealing with them," says Dr. Anne Kenshole, a tall, blonde mother of two.

Both are typical of the devoted breed of women doctors who carry on their careers while raising a family.

And both are convinced that women doctors are vital to the formerly male-oriented medical profession.

"I think both male and female patients feel we're more sympathetic and will spend more time listening to them," said Dr Kenshole, a Toronto specialist in diabetes.

"If there are any disadvantages to women doctors, I think it's in themselves because women are inclined to become more emotionally involved with their patients."

Dr. de Buda, a general practitioner who works out of Women's College Hospital here, agrees, adding that women doctors are "not so business-like as men and we give more attention to our patients."

"As a GP," says Dr. de Buda, "I believe the trend is back to family medicine, giving attention to the problems of an entire family."

"Women are a natural in this role," she says.

About nine per cent of more than 20,000 doctors in Canada are women, the same as in the United States.

In The Netherlands, 20 per cent are women, and in Britain the ratio is 15 per cent. About 75 per cent of the doctors in Russia are women.

Until a few years ago, Canadian medical schools limited women students to 10 per cent of the class, chiefly because many of them gave up their profession after getting married and raising a family.

Today, estimates are that across Canada about 87 per cent of medical women are using their profession.

Because of this trend, medical schools now have opened their doors and select entrants for reasons of merit rather than sex.

This is one factor that has helped change the attitude towards women doctors.

"The older female unmarried doctors used to feel a woman couldn't devote all her time, love and effort to medicine and manage a family too," says Dr. de Buda. "They're coming around now."

But Canada is still behind Europe in its attitude, says Dr. Kenshole. "There's still a small die-hard core in the profession of older men who feel there is no place for women in medicine."

"But," adds Dr. Kenshole, "these ideas are no longer valid."

Special Home Provided For Retarded Adults

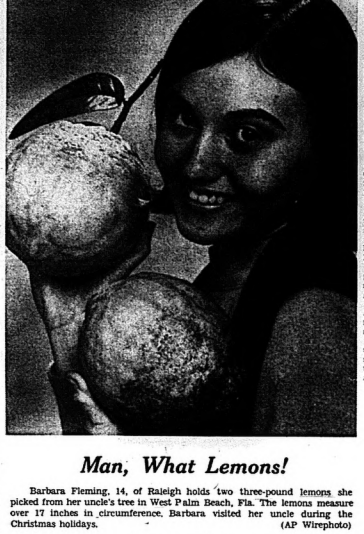
VICTORIA (CP) — A cozy glow fans out into the wintry mist from the living room window of the house in the middle of the 1500 block on Elford Street. Living inside are eight people who might otherwise be living in an institution.

The house, a group home for retarded adults, was opened recently by University of Victoria President Dr. Bruce Partridge. It is only the second such home in Canada.

The first was started two years ago in Portage La Prairie, Man.

In his opening speech Dr. Partridge touched on the "medieval ideas" which for years, have kept people silent on mental retardation. He spoke of the confusion of mental retardation and mental illness.

"For various reasons, each of us functions below his ultimate capacity," he said. "Each is happier if he comes closer to his capacity, and for the persons concerned, this group home will provide a new life in this light."



Facilities in the house include room for eight permanent residents and two temporary ones. It will also house a resident dent assistant house mother.

Cost of purchasing and outfitting the house was $30,000 —which was made up by a voluntary subscription from parents of retarded youngsters, and mortgage money from Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. The provincial government has agreed to contribute to operating expenses.

The home is on the same street and is close to the Winfred M. Clark Centre for the Handicapped—named for the executive director of the Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded, who retired recently.

Said Mrs. Clark, who instigated the project and was on hand at its opening:

"We hope this will be the first of many such homes—we could do with several."

Roslin Couple Wed for 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Chancey Sills of Roslin were "at home" to relatives, neighbors and friends on Dec. 30 on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary. During the afternoon and evening approximately 125 persons called to offer their congratulations and best wishes.

Mr. and Mrs. Sills were married at the Presbyterian Church Manse, Roslin on Dec. 30, 1919 by the late Rev. A. O. MacDonald.

Mrs. Sills is the former Carman Montgomery, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William John Montgomery, Roslin and Mr. Sills is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Sills, also of Roslin. They reside on the farm where Mr. Sills was born and where he has spent all his life.

The couple have three daughters, Mrs. Everett Geen (Margaret) of Roslin; Mrs. Gerald Morton (Evelyn) of Tweed and Mrs. Raymond Holmes (June) also of Tweed; nine grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

They received many gifts and cards from their family, and friends and neighbors in the community. A plaque from the Ontario government was presented by Clarke Rollins, MPP and congratulatory messages from Robert Stanfield MP and Lee Grills MP.

Presiding at the tea table during the afternoon were Mrs. Charles Bailey of Cannifton; Mrs. Andy Calden of Roslin; Mrs. Harold Morton of Thomasburg and Mrs. Harry Sills of Plainfield. In the evening presiding were Mrs. Freeman Howes of Roslin; Mrs. Russell Reid of Roslin; Mrs. William Gillespie of Roslin and Mrs. Joseph Coulter, sister of the bride, of Cannifton.

Sargeant – Bridge

Holloway St. United Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Patricia Ann Bridge, daughter of Mr and Mrs. Rex Bridge, Belleville and Vernon William Sargeant, son of Mrs. William J. Sargeant, Belleville and the late Mr. W. Sargeant. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. J. William Lamb.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attended by her sister, Miss Maureen Bridge and Mrs. Catherine Miller. The bridegroom was attended by William Hickson, and his brother Kenneth Sargeant.

Following the wedding, a reception was held at the Canadian Legion Hall.

Former Nurses' Home Open to Other Students

CALGARY (CP) — The nurses' residence at the Holy Cross Hospital school of nursing is no longer just a home for student nurses.

The residence opened its doors to other women students in the autumn after Grey Nuns who had been living there moved to another residence in the city.

About 70 girls from the University of Calgary, Mount Royal College, Alberta Nursing Aide School and the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology are living there now.

Though still in the experimental stage, the intermingling of students from different disciplines is successful, says Ed Donnachie, hospital comptroller.

Elizabeth Stileman, newly-appointed residence director, also says the nursing students are gaining from the experience.

"Living with other students is a valuable thing for them. They find they don't just think about nursing."

The residence is operated on the house system. Each of the six floors has a separate identity and is run by an adviser and an assistant.

These are students, too, but employed by the hospital to see that things run smoothly. They also have to be good listeners whenever anyone has a problem.

Miss Stileman says she rarely interferes with students and won't go to the living areas unless invited. She is available, however, when the advisers need help and to oversee the entire operation.

Both nursing and non-nursing students are treated exactly alike and have the same short list of rules and regulations, Miss Stileman says.

"The girls have to be mature enough to make decisions because there is no adult prying over their shoulders saying 'that's against the rules.'

"In group living they are responsible for themselves rather than leaning on an adult for guidance."

Dividing the residence into smaller groups seems to have been effective. Though the system has been in operation just over three months, one student nurse said she already feels she has more of an identity—that she is one of 40 rather than being one of a whole school.

Obscure Markings For Restrooms

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP)— At the new Performing Arts Centre, the restroom entrances have been cleverly worked into the curving walls of the promenade. Instead of having the usual "men" and "women" emblazoned on the proper doors, the labels are discreetly placed in unobtrusive bronze on the walls. But when the lights go on for intermission, the bronze becomes almost invisible in the color scheme.

Successful Living

No Royal Road to Queenly Grace

By DORIS CLARK

Cinderella became a princess when her fairy godmother waved a wand. But in real life there's no royal road to queenly grace. You have to work for it.

If you'd be a queen in your own right, take a look at what is required of women in the public eye, like models, airline hostesses, TV stars. Besides health and good grooming, a girl needs a quality of queenliness; which is expressed in poise, carriage, gracious manners.

Think of our queen . . . of her gracious bow; of how the wave of her hand symbolizes warmth and friendliness towards all. Small, gracious gestures can in the same way express charm for you.

If you'll work to make such graces yours, there'll be no special occasion that will find you wanting.

DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: On the controversial issue of dropping in on friends, I have this to say. First, I must tell you I'm the type of person who scours from walls down, when I know someone is coming. I almost fell asleep one evening, play ing cards with friends, from pure exhaustion. I would rather friends just pop in.

The past summer we visited with my in-laws. What a pleasure it was to see people come from near and far for an hour, a day, and some for as long as a week. No one called ahead to make an appointment, as my husband and I have to do with certain friends.

I have to make appointments to see a doctor or teachers, but it makes me sad to feel I have to make an appointment to see my friends. Disheartens.

Dear Disheartsen: Reminds me of my friend Bea, who says she doesn't call on her friends to look at the dust on their furniture, even if they do worry about it. She can look at her own dust at home. She comes to see them.

* * *

Dear Doris: I agree with your answer to Jealous Or What, but I can't help but tell her a little of my life in the hope that it will help her. I married a man like her steady. We have now been married for seven years, and he hasn't changed one bit, only now his flirting is so much worse.

If Jealous Or What keeps on with this steady of hers, she'll really know what hurt and suffering are. I feel humiliated to the extent that I can't ever forgive him for what he has made me go through, but now it's seven years too late.

So listen to one who really has been living a married life with a man who acts and feels single. It Still Hurts.

Dear Hurts: I'm sorry! Do hope Jealous Or What reads your story and drops her steady like a hot potato.

Preparation for Baked Stuffed Salmon

By MARY MOORE

A telegram from Vancouver was telephoned to me, "Salmon arriving Air Canada Flight No. 802 tonight." When the loudsland truck drove up to my door with a heavy straw-docking box containing a 15-lb. Red Spring salmon in dry ice, I stood with it in my arms and thought "Golly what do I do now?"

I was having the Canadian Women's Press Club Christmas party at my house so it did not take long to decide who was going to eat that gorgeous fish.

I was convinced I should tell you how to prepare it when I found that A and P supermarkets regularly stock frozen BC salmon which sells for 89 cents per pound in our inland area.

The salmon was cleaned but I wanted to stuff it with an oyster stuffing so I had to bone it. It covered one whole counter in my kitchen but I sharpened one of my best 10-c-g paring knives and went to work. For me I broke some kind of a record for I boned that huge fish in 10 min. and took the whole bone structure out in one piece. (Please pardon immodesty.)

BAKED STUFFED SALMON

NOTE: Salmon does not need to be scaled or skinned because skin comes away when you peel off foil.

Stuffing:

10 slices white bread crumbed

1 can (3 2-3 oz.) smoked oysters chopped including liquid in can

¼ cup butter

½ tsp. savory

1 tsp. chopped onion

1 tsp. grated lemon rind

1 tsp. salt

In large frypan melt butter and add savory, onion, lemon rind and salt and gently saute until soaked with butter. Add crumbs and oysters and gently mix to butter crumbs. Spread on one side of opened up salmon and cover with the other side of fish. Wrap fish lengthwise in heavy duty foil folding side edges together snugly. Carefully transfer to broiler pan. You will have to curve your salmon on the pan if it is as large as mine. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1¼ hrs. A smaller salmon would not require as long. You would have to examine a 5-lb. salmon after 45 min. to see if it is baked at center.

You will need a man's help to transfer a big fish to serving platter. After it is on the platter peel off foil with skin clinging to it. The foil and skin on bottom can be disregarded as they are not seen until you come to the last servings. Garnish top with lemon slices and stuffed olives. Pass Mayonnaise.

This salmon served 33 people, every one of whom raved about it.

In-laws Lavish Children with Gifts

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the mother who doesn't know what to say to her children because her in-laws never bring a gift when they come to visit — which is every Sunday afternoon.

ANN LANDERS

I would love to trade places with her. My in-laws have spoiled our children rotten. It is disgusting the way our kids have grown to expect a gift from every person who walks into the house. When the paper boy came to collect yesterday, our 4-year-old asked, "What did you bring me?"

Our children are so bored with their toys it makes me sick. They've seen every gadget and game on the market. My father-in-law is going on an African safari in March. The kids have asked for a baby elephant. I'm scared to death he'll bring them one.

Both my husband and I have pleaded with them to stop with the presents already but they say, "It's our pleasure. Don't deprive us."

I hope the mother who wrote to criticize her in-laws for coming empty handed will see this letter and feel better. — LONGVIEW, WASHINGTON.

DEAR LONG: So do I. Children who suffer from excesses are invariably more insecure and possess less self-esteem than the economically disadvantaged. Some of the most destructive and violent students come from affluent homes. Many were raised by permissive parents who smothered them with things, things and more things.

These unhappy kids feel cheated and bought-off and are registering their resentment by rejecting every symbol of authority.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was intrigued by the letter from the married man who wrote to say he had an illicit love affair — that his wife knew, but remained silent and bore up nobly until he got the "foolishness" out of his system. Lover boy concluded that everyone profited. He said he had learned a lot from it, appreciated his wife more than ever, and, he added, "No one was hurt." Well, that's his opinion. I was the other woman and here's how it looked to me.

I had just gone through a tragic emotional experience and this man entered my life as a friend, a confidant. He said he was separated from his wife and asked me to marry him as soon as his divorce was final. He introduced me to his "sister" with whom he was sharing an apartment. "Sis" turned out to be a sweetheart. It was she who wised me up, after several martinis. It seems my friend spent four night a week with his wife and family and three nights with "Sis." When I learned the truth I attempted suicide, and nearly succeeded.

I am now trying to recover from a complete breakdown and an acute case of self-hate. I am disgusted, ashamed and feel as though I will never again be able to trust a man. Would you agree that "no one was hurt!" — MISS FRUITCAKE OF 1969.

DEAR MISS: Thanks for writing. Your letter is "must reading" for all married men who think they are bringing joy into the life of an emotionally starved girl.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: In your column you sometimes use highly descriptive adjectives. The most recent was "raw" sex. How is raw sex different from cooked sex, or rare sex? When is sex well done?? Can it be over done?

I await your answer. — GOURMET IN COLORADO.

DEAR GOURMET: As any gourmet knows, tastes vary. What one connoisseur considers well done, might be termed over done by another. According to Webster's unabridged — raw means "crude, undressed, uncultivated." I can't improve on that.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Grandmother: "I brought Betty a book of nursery rhymes. You enjoyed them so much when you were little."

Mother: "How lovely. I'll put it away until she's a little older. She wouldn't understand it yet."

Nursery rhymes provide a tiny child with words she can say over and over. They make a game of speech and will help make learning to talk an enjoyable experience.

Read nursery rhymes regularly to small children. Even a 1-year-old will enjoy the rhythm and sound, though she may not understand the meaning of the ditties.

Moon Story To Be Told

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Theories may tumble and mysteries dissolve today as 142 scientists start revealing results of the first detailed analysis of rock and soil from the moon.

The scientists, from the United States, Canada and seven other countries, will report on 90 days of studying material brought to earth by Apollo 11.

About 18 pounds—about one-third of what astronauts Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin Aldrin came back with in July—were distributed to the scientists Sept. 12 after a 50-day preliminary examination at the Lunar Receiving Laboratory.

Results from the preliminary examination indicated that:

—The moon material had at one time been molten rock.

—The rocks had been lying quietly on the surface of the moon for up to 150,000,000 years, indicating that the moon may have turned cold after a fiery birth.

—The rocks crystallized about 4,000,000,000 years ago, as early as any rocks dated on earth and about the time many believe the universe was formed.

—There was no sign that life existed on the moon.

The preliminary tests, however, did little to settle the most hotly contested debate among scientists: where the moon came from and how it got its distinctive surface features.

The two most strongly supported theories on the moon's origin are that it formed from the explosion in space of a large body, or that it was a chunk of debris streaking through space which was captured by the earth's gravity.

Another theory, that the moon came from the earth and was blasted into orbit by an explosion millions of years ago, has been largely discounted.

Results of the tests will be disclosed in a series of papers presented during the next four days.

The samples were distributed to 106 principal investigators in the U.S. and 36 in Canada, Australia, Belgium, Britain, Finland, West Germany, Japan and Switzerland.

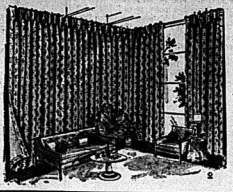
About 1,000 other scientists and government officials have been invited to attend the meeting, called by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration the most important in its 11-year history.

Kopechne Inquest Underway

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (Reuters) — An inquest which could decide the political future of Senator Edward M. Kennedy opens here today almost six months after his car plunged from nearby Chappaquiddick Bridge into a dark tidal lagoon, drowning pretty Mary Joe Kopechne.

Informed sources said the Massachusetts Democrat may testify as early as today after the closed-door hearing opens at 10 a.m. EST.

Although the press will be barred from the proceedings, an international gathering of reporters jammed the resort village for the inquest into circumstances surrounding the mid-night ride in the senator's car which ended in tragedy July 18.



Miss Kopechne, 28, and Kennedy had attended a party that day on Chappaquiddick, and around midnight Kennedy's car careered from the hump-backed bridge, killing the 29-year-old former staff worker for his brother, the late Robert F. Kennedy.

Her body was found the next morning. Kennedy then went to the Edgartown police headquarters, more than eight hours after the accident, and said he had been the driver of the car.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of leaving the scene of an accident and was given a three-month suspended sentence by District Court Judge James A. Boyle, who will conduct the inquest.

Besides the diminutive Miss Kopechne and Kennedy, five other female workers for Robert Kennedy attended the party at a lonely cottage on Chappaquiddick with five other married men. All are expected to testify.

After 15 Years of Catering, Canada Pulls Out

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Almost 15 years after Canada first became disillusioned with international hockey, Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, stood up at a meeting in Geneva Sunday and said: "We quit."

The pronouncement, before a special meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation, came eight years after Canada last won a world championship and seconds after she declined the use of professionals to bolster her entry in the 1970 tournament.

It meant that Canada will not be represented in the 1970 championships and that the tournament, originally scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg in March, will be switched to Stockholm.

The feeling that Canada should not compete in the world championship under existing rules started to grow after the Penticton Vs took the title in Dusseldorf, Germany, in 1955.

Many Canadian fans and players there felt the Europeans should declare a champion to challenge the best in North America.

Trail Smoke Eaters in 1961 were the last team to win the world championship for Canada and the CAHA began discussing the possibility of a national all-star team in 1963.

The national team was born in 1965 sponsored by the CAHA and taken over by Hockey Canada, a group of political, business and interested hockey men, late in 1968.

The national team was never able to seriously challenge the Russians, however. It was made up of a few reinstated amateurs and young players who preferred a university education to a career in professional hockey.

The Russians won the championship from 1963 to date.

Hockey Canada, under the leadership of president Charles Hay, began moving toward a stronger representation for Canada immediately after taking over the operation of the national team.

Last July the group applied to the IIHF for an open tournament in 1970 in hopes of entering a team of professionals. This proposal was defeated by IIHF delegates, who also defeated another proposal that would allow Canada the use of 12 professionals.

The IIHF finally agreed Canada could use nine professionals for the 1970 championship, providing they had played in the National Hockey League during the 1969-70 season.

The vote on this issue had been a 25-25 tie, however, with IIHF president J. F. (Bunny) Ahearne casting the deciding vote and the Russians, Czechoslovakians and Swedes openly opposed.

The Russians continued to complain against the IIHF ruling through the summer and refused to accept the schedule for the 1970 tournament until late in November.

Then Ahearne announced that he had been warned by the International Olympic Committee that anyone playing with or against professionals in the tournament would be declared ineligible for the 1972 Olympics.

At this point, Ahearne called an emergency meeting of the six countries involved—Canada, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland and East Germany.

When the other five countries announced, after a 24-hour huddle, that they could not allow the nine professionals for fear of losing their Olympic eligibility, Dawson made the Canadian withdrawal from international hockey official.

Mo-Hawks Kill 60-minute Penalty In Absorbing 10-3 Kingston Whipping

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

KINGSTON — It was just like killing one giant 60-minute penalty.

That's how Belleville Mo-Hawks' seven forwards and three defencemen felt after enduring a 10-3 loss to Kingston Aces.

The fast-skating Aces are tough enough for anyone to handle on their roomy home ice at the best of times.

But, for the Mo-Hawks, the best of times definitely does not involve being minus the services of Lou Kazowski and Wayne Brown — the club's two rushing defencemen, top point-getter George Godson, and capable rookie Ray Johnston.

Charlie Conway's four goals led the Kingston mauling of the fatigued Mo-Hawks. Bob Clayton (2), Hugh Harvey, Bob Dickson, Fred O'Donnell, and Bob Collins also scored for the Aces, who have now won their last three meetings with Belleville after losing the first three of the OHA Senior A schedule.

Scoring three of their ten goals on power-plays was a cinch for the Aces against the sparse Mo-Hawk lineup, which was reduced to nine players in addition to goalie Steve Rexe after an aggravated hip injury forced Ralph Plane to sit out the final 20 minutes.

The Mo-Hawks proved surprisingly effective themselves in man-advantage situations. Goals by Al Ferguson, Greg Marchen, and Davey Jones — one to a period — each came on Belleville power plays.

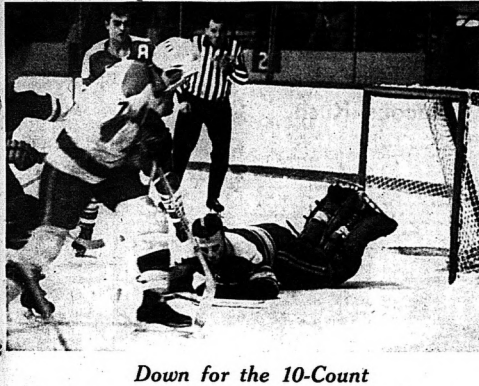
Jones, who earned assists on each of the other two Mo-Hawk goals to the torment of his former Kingston fans, was more concerned about the point he didn't get, a first-period goal nullified by an over-eager whistle by referee Jack Chaney.

"The puck wasn't underneath anyone — it was as pretty plain sight," Jones complained afterwards. He had batted in what would have been the game's first goal, after only four minutes of play.

"That goal could have made a lot of difference," echoed veteran Lionel Botly. To rub in the low-blow to Mo-Hawk morale, Kingston's first goal a few minutes later made scorer Bob Clayton look more like a soccer player than hockey participant.

"Yes, He kicked it in," confirmed Steve Rexe, who saw if Kingston shots come his way after enjoying his most relaxing senior hockey evening of the year in Friday's 9-3 shutout of Owen Sound.

"But we can't do much with Louie (Kazowski) missing on defence. He's a key man."



Kazowski stayed home in Peterborough with a pulled back muscle suffered in Friday night's win over Woodstock. Godson missed his first game of the season due to a pulled leg, and a bad knee for Ray Johnston on the sidelines for the second successive game.

Shiftwork cost the Mo-Hawks "Weiner" Brown's presence, and Ray Sumners, although he dressed for last night's game, didn't play after a bucking horse acted up during the pre-game warmup.

Billy Armour had to go back on defence with Botly and Marchen, with Jones taking George Godson's spot between Lorne O'Donnell and Al Ferguson.

Davey Dalliday, Ralph Plane, Wayne McConnell and John Baker took turns exhausting themselves on the only other line.

Now tied with Oakville in third place in the eight-team Senior A league, the Mo-Hawks have until Friday night's 9 p.m. Memorial Arena game with Barrie Flyers to get some of the kinks out.

Down for the 10-Count

Belleville Mo-Hawks' goalie Steve Rexe had a hectic night in Kingston Sunday as the shorthanded Belleville team dropped a 10-3 OHA Senior A hockey game to Kingston Aces. Here a beleaguered Rexe dives to beat Kingston forward Hugh Harvey to a loose puck.

Oshawa: 10-2

Junior B's Go Down Swinging

Conn Smythe's old adage that you have to beat 'em in the alley to beat 'em on the ice proved to be anything but true last night for Belleville's Ellis Juniors.

While the Oshawa Crushmen came out on the short end of several of the game's many brawls, they had little trouble handing Belleville a 10-2 defeat.

Five unanswered Oshawa goals in the final period placed the game out of reach for the fourth-place Belleville crew. Sloppy play by the Ellises in their own end and some good stops by Crushmen's goalie Brian Rose were mainly responsible for the margin of victory.

Oshawa scorers were paced by Gamble, Whiting and Noble with two apiece while Paradise, McAvoy, Gyles and Kirk completed their total.

For Belleville midget reserve Rick Meagher, who played an outstanding game at centre, cashed in his own rebound in the second period. Dennis "Toody" McCormick converted on Terry Meagher's passout for the other Belleville goal in his first lineup appearance in two weeks after a Florida holiday.

The loss cost the Juniors a chance to widen their slim one-point lead in fourth place over Cobourg and two points over Trenton in the Eastern Ontario "B" circuit.

Penalty box real estate was at a premium as a series of fights punctuated third-period play. The main combatants were McCormack, Terry Meagher and Greg Burkitt of Belleville and the Crushmen's Barker, Gyles and McAvoy. Earlier in the second period Dalton Lambert and Lynd were given game misconducts for a fracas behind the Belleville goal.

A total of 35 penalties was assessed against both clubs with the Crushmen drawing 21. Oshawa outshot the Juniors by a narrow 33-31 count.

Tuesday night the Juniors travel to Kingston for an 8:15 game with the league leaders. In their last meeting in Belleville, the Ellis crew won 3-2 playing their best game of the season. Space is available on a bus for Kingston leaving the arena at 6 o'clock.

Novices Know Who's Best

BROCKVILLE (Special) — Although failing to capture first place laurels in the Thousand Island Minor Hockey tournament, Belleville's Food City Novices at least gained the satisfaction of knowing that they outplayed the eventual champions.

The Novices lost a 5-2 decision to the Oshawa Jolly Buccaneers in the semi-finals Saturday.

The score was really no indication of the play, as Belleville outshot Oshawa by a wide margin and, according to team manager Glen Hamilton "really outplayed them. Seventy - five per cent of the play was in Oshawa's end."

The Buccaneers went on to hand Lindsay a 6-1 defeat in the finals of the tournament that saw 32 teams and over 400 players compete.

Mike Bennett and Bobby Crawford rounded out goals against Oshawa for the Food City team, who had beaten st. Vital 9-2 and Ottawa Westboro 4-1 in previous games.

Small Fry Split

The small fry of the Belleville hockey scene split week end all-star action.

Wilson's Concrete Tykes dropped a close 5-3 decision to Peterborough Sunday, while Mulroney's Sunoco Novice "B"s blanked Tweed 1-0.

Chris Valentine, Mark Crawford and Steve Mofina notched goals in a losing effort for the Tykes.

Pat Willman scored the only goal in the novice "B" game, while Brian Cook recorded the shutout.

Batawa Ski Club's new professional instructor Kaspar Zacher uses the perfect outdoors — for Saturday's initial chalkboard session with his Alpine skiing students. Under Zacher's direction, the Batawa club will stage Alpine instruction each Saturday throughout the winter.

Batawa Hills Alive With Sound of Skiing

TRENTON — The Batawa Ski Club, a comparatively young organization in area recreation, grew much taller in status during the weekend.

Considered a highlight in a decade of operation club president John Cormack announced following an executive meeting Saturday the decision to operate an Alpine Ski School.

President Cormack also made reference to the club's good fortune in securing the services of Kaspar Zacher to act as chief instructor for the Alpine school. "The fact the club has a professional ski instructor opens up new horizons. For the first time in this area it will be possible to obtain instruction in Alpine techniques."

Chief instructor Zacher has been affiliated with the Northumberland Ski Club at Cobourg for the last two years.

He learned the fundamentals of the sport in Europe and previous to coming to Canada 16 years ago taught skiing in Germany and toured with a team of ski acrobatic performers.

His qualifications include certification as an instructor with the Canadian Ski Alliance, the ruling body over ski instructors in Canada.

His assistant will be Peter Wellstein, well known to the Batawa community as their representative on Canada's national ski racing team last year until sidelined by an accident. Presently Peter is attending college in Guelph in the first year of a hotel and restaurant management course.

The Batawa Club's Alpine school will be in session on the weekends. The first workshop taken by chief instructor Zacher on Saturday was held for members of the club's ski patrol showing interest in becoming junior instructors at a future date.

Classes are by appointment from 9.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. Saturdays. Registrations are being taken by club secretary Jacob Wellstein and members of the membership committee.

New Orleans Has Apparent Monopoly as Super Bowl Site

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The cast of characters has been selected for Sunday's Super Bowl game, the first to be played in New Orleans, which will apparently have the U.S. pro football championship clash for at least two more years.

A knowledgeable source told The Associated Press today that the office of pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle has a three-year option on the 82,000-capacity Tulane Stadium, where Minnesota Vikings and Kansas City Chiefs meet Sunday in the fourth and final championship game between the National and American Football leagues.

"They must have a stadium that can bring in a big gate in order to meet the payoffs," said the source.

The Super Bowl was first played in Los Angeles, then shifted to the Orange Bowl in Miami for the last two years.

The first championship under the NFL-AFL merger format in 1971 would pit the American Conference and National Conference titlists.

Last year's Super Bowl, which saw Joe Namath lead New York Jets to a stunning 16-7 conquest of Baltimore Colts for the AFL's first victory in three championship clashes, had a paid crowd of 75,389.

Tickets for the 1969 game in Miami were scaled at $12, $8 and $6. All tickets for the 1970 game were priced by Rozelle's office at $15, the same for 50-yard line or end zone.

* * *

The expected $1,200,000 gate will be the largest ever in pro football. It will take practically all of it—and perhaps even some of the $3,000,000 in broadcasting rights—just to pay the competing players, $15,000 to each winning player, $7,500 to the losers.

Coaches and others on the teams also get all or portions of a player's share.

Minnesota downed Cleveland Browns 27-7 Sunday and earned the right to represent the NFL here.

Kansas City's 17-7 victory over Oakland Raiders sends the Chiefs here as the AFL representative.

Sign of Sixties

Vikings' Grant Cautious Despite Manhandling Browns

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Joe Kapp set the tone for Minnesota Vikings' approach to next Sunday's Super Bowl game after beating Cleveland Browns 27-7 Sunday for their first National Football League title.

"We've done it before," said the Vikings' blood-spattered quarterback. "Now we just have to do it one more time."

Kapp, former quarterback of British Columbia Lions in the Canadian Football League, referred to the Vikings' uphill battle to the league championship as a ninth-year expansion team by whipping Los Angeles Rams for the Western Conference crown and then manhandling Cleveland Browns before 47,900 frozen fans in eight-degree weather at Metropolitan Stadium.

Bud Grant, the steel-eyed coach of the Vikings, took the usual cautious outlook on next Sunday's Super Bowl game with Kansas City Chiefs, the American Football League champions, in New Orleans.

"I thought the best team won," said Grant, former coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, after watching the final stages of Kansas City's 17-7 victory over Oakland Raiders on television. "They impressed us with their aggressiveness and control of the game, at least the part we saw."

The Vikings and Chiefs have met only once, in a 1968 pre-season game won by Kansas City 13-10.

"They were immense," said Grant. "We have heard us with say that Minnesota and Kansas City are both physical teams. Maybe so, but not quite in the same sense. They are a much bigger team than we are. We don't have people to match the size of Buck Buchanan, Aaron Brown and Jerry Mays. Their offensive line is just as big. The physical matchup isn't the same in the sense that they're so darned big."

The Vikings scheduled a squad meeting today and plan to fly to New Orleans early Tuesday morning. Then they will really begin to start getting ready for the Chiefs.

"We didn't scout them," said Grant. "We will have to depend on the game films we execute."

The Vikings are lucky they still have a football team in one piece after the exuberant celebration by the fans in the final seconds of Sunday's game. Kapp was pummelled by well-wishers on his way to the locker room.

"It was even worse than the Cleveland rush," said Kapp, who scrambled seven yards for the first touchdown on a broken play, after fullback Bill Brown bumped into him.

"That was supposed to be an off-tackle shot by Brown," explained Kapp. "But Bill slipped on the ice and we ran together so I just tried to follow the blocking on in."

Two passes by Kapp to Gene Washington on which Cleveland defensive men slipped and fell, helped open up a 14-0 lead in the first quarter, and made the Browns try to play catch-up football.

Erich Barnes slipped and fell trying to cover Washington who took the ball from the 40 and raced in to complete a 75-yard play for the second touchdown.

"I had to bump a linebacker," said Washington, "and then run with patterns."

"Barnes and I somehow got our legs tangled up and he went down."

"I had him covered real good," said Barnes. "I don't know what happened, whether I slipped or we bumped but I went down. I think we must have collided."

The Vikings scored again on a 36-yard field goal by Fred Cox and a 39-yard run by Dave Osborn for a 24-0 halftime lead. Another field goal by Cox from the 32 in the third quarter ended the Minnesota scoring. Cleveland finally got on the board in the final quarter on a three-yard pass from Bill Nelsen to Gary Collins but the Vikings were at the two when the game ended with fans lining the field.

"The referee (Tommy Bell) told me we could try for the score and run out the clock," said Kapp. "I told him we were going for the score but we never got the play off."

Nelsen, the passing star of last week's 38-14 romp over Dallas Cowboys, suffered a numbness in his right arm after he was hit by defensive end Jim Marshall in the first quarter. He completed 17 of 33 for 181 yards but was intercepted twice, by Wally Hilgenberg and Paul Krause and was dumped by Roy Winston and Alan Page.

"I couldn't put anything on the ball but we just got beat. The arm didn't matter. We didn't move the ball. What I remember most was Wally Summer and Washington both falling down on the first touchdown drive but Washington catching the ball and Barnes slipping or something on the long pass to Washington.

The Vikings' Purple Gang, the front four, got Nelsen just twice but put the pressure on him all day. Hilgenberg, the right linebacker, was the defensive star with the first interception of his six-year pro career and a recovery of Leroy Kelly's fumble.

"This is a helluva feeling after nine years of trying," said Brown, one of the veteran Vikings. "I'm going to celebrate but then get ready for next week."

Chief Defenders Give Lamonica Raucous Rush

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The way coach Hank Stram feels about it, the Minnesota Vikings in Kansas City Chiefs will meet in Sunday's Super Bowl game may well be the Green Bay Packers in disguise.

Stram's memories of the Packers are colored by the passage of time and the reflections on the Green Bay team that whipped his Chiefs 35-10 three years ago in the first Super Bowl game. But Stram does remember, and he does find resemblances in the Vikings.

"In a lot of respects they are very much alike," Stram said after his Chiefs had gained entry to U.S. pro football's No. 1 event with a 17-7 victory over Oakland Raiders.

"Both teams . . . don't do a lot of things, but what they do, they do well."

As for his own Chiefs, Stram said frankly:

"I don't think there's any comparisons. Our team is much better than the 1966 team. We're much better defensively."

That improvement is reflected in the fact that only four defensive starters remain from those Super Bowl losers and it was reflected on the floor of Oakland Coliseum Sunday as the Chiefs' defence played the key role in bringing Kansas City the American Football League championship.

They put on a furiously fierce pass rush on Oakland quarterback Daryle Lamonica that forced him out of the game at one point with jammed fingers on his throwing hand and dumped him four times for losses, and so harassed him that he had three passes intercepted.

And, after the Chiefs had sputtered to a 17-7 lead, the defensive unit four times stopped the Raiders inside the Kansas City 40 in the fourth quarter when any successful offensive thrust by Lamonica might have changed the momentum of the teams and the result of the game.

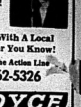
"Our great desire—our will to win—was expressed by our defensive line," said Stram in the Chief dressing room.

"We were a very tight offensive club at the beginning. The defence kept us in the game."

They did for the first 27 minutes, limiting Oakland to a 7-0 lead on Charley Smith's three-yard run following a 24-yard pass to Warren Wells, the fleet Raider receiver who played despite a shoulder separation suffered three weeks ago.

Then the Chiefs broke the first of two important offensive plays Stram singled out as the keys to the victory.

With the ball on the Oakland 42, quarterback Len Dawson sent Frank Pitts straight down the sidelines for a 41-yard pass that defender Nemiah Wilson could do little up. Wendell Hayes smashed the final yard on the next play and Jan Stenerud's conversion made it 7-7.



"The play to Pitts provided us with a great lift," said Stram.

"The pressure was there again, however, midway in the third quarter when Dawson went back to pass with a third-and-12 situation on his own two-yard line and was chased into the end zone by the Oakland defence, arching a pass down the sidelines to Otis Taylor just before he reached.

"Otis wasn't the primary receiver," Dawson explained. "I was looking for Robert Holmes across the middle but he got banged. I couldn't wait much longer so I threw it so it would have gone out of bounds if he didn't catch it."

Taylor caught it—and he caught it in bounds, making a brilliant over-the-head grab for 35 yards that took the Chiefs out of trouble and started a drive that didn't end until the goal line had been crossed by Holmes on a five-yard run.

Baby Habs Slap Down Petes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bobby Lalonde wasn't satisfied with the game-winning goal Sunday night so he scored two more just to make sure of the key victory for Montreal Junior Canadiens in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Lalonde's three goals in the third period gave the league-leading Canadiens a 6-3 win over Peterborough, leaving the Petes five points back in second place.

In other games, the third-place St. Catharines Black Hawks climbed to within two points of Peterborough with a 6-3 victory over Hamilton Red Wings while Toronto Marlboros stayed six points back of the Hawks with a 9-3 win over Niagara Falls Flyers. Ottawa 67s whipped Oshawa Generals 7-4 while Kitchener Rangers and London Knights played to a 2-2 tie.

Third-period goals by Denis Gloor and Jim Mahon gave the Petes a 3-3 tie in the game at Montreal but Lalonde took charge of the last half of the period. Paulin Bordeleau scored twice and Richard Lemieux collected the other Montreal goal. Ro nPlumb was the other Petes' scorer.

The Black Hawks extended their winning streak to six games as Doug Rombough paced St. Catharines on home ice with three goals. Brian McKenzie, with two, and Bob McMaster were the other Hawks scorers.

Buster Harvey, Tom Williams and Mike Boyle scored for the ninth-place Red Wings.

Terriers Terrorize Woodstock

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

While Canada's national hockey team was beating Czechoslovakia 2-1 Sunday night, a former member was having a night he'd like to forget.

Goaltender Steve Rexe, who played for the Canadians last year, was puck fodder for Kingston Aces Sunday in Ontario Hockey Association senior play.

The Aces blasted 48 shots at Rexe as they defeated Belleville Mo-Hawks 10-3 before a season record crowd of 2,375 in Kingston.

In other Sunday action, Oakville Oaks defeated Owen Sound Crescents 5-2 and Orillia Terriers bombed Woodstock A's 7-3.

Five players shared the Oakville scoring before a home-town crowd—Dick Smith, Charlie Cipolla, Pat Bester, Terry Holman and series scoring leader Jim O'Brien.

Bill Abbott and Dave McComb scored for the Crescents who were outshot 39-26.

Grant Moore was the big gun for Orillia with two goals while John Hall, George Vail, Da e Nicolishion, Edgar Doirion and Al Osborne got one each. Tom Black, Al Blair and Bob Ruthig scored for Woodstock.

Nats Disband in Blaze of Glory with 2-1 Win Over Czechs

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's decision to drop out of this year's world hockey tournament was defended with indignation and bravado in Ottawa's Civic Centre Sunday night.

The Canadian national team edged the Czechoslovakian nationals 2-1 in a dull game that will probably be Canada's last on the international scene until somebody compromises on the great "professional" dispute.

Following the game, several players said they would probably resign from the team—including Fran Huck, Billy Harris and Terry O'Malley.

The exhibition match was relegated to secondary importance by Sunday's announcement that Canada had withdrawn from the International Ice Hockey Federation tournament, which was to have been held in Winnipeg and Montreal.

Health Minister John Munro defended the Canadian position —he and delegates to the Geneva meeting had decided in advance that there could be no compromise on the federation's previous decision that Canada could use nine professionals, he said.

The tournament now is scheduled for Stockholm.

Buck Houle, general manager of Hockey Canada, the federal agency that runs the Canadian national team, predicted members' countries of the international hockey body would "come back on bended knee and they'll come back on our terms."

"They need us . . . We're their biggest drawing card and they want to learn from us. They want to beat the best."

National players interviewed after the game supported the Canadian stand, but expressed keen disappointment.

"We played lousy hockey tonight," said seven-year veteran O'Malley, "because all our objectives are lost."

The game featured close-checking but uninspired hockey from both teams.

Bill Heindl scored early in the final period to break a 1-1 tie created by Morris Mott's opening goal for Canada and Jan Hrbaty's equalizer for Czechoslovakia.

O'Malley said the team had built up a "tremendous rolling feeling" that kept getting bigger as the team started winning exhibition games against the Soviets and Czechoslovakians teams to whom they had been losing consistently in recent years.

Now that spirit had been shattered and he probably couldn't concentrate on his studies despite the fact Houle said the team would not be disbanded and would honor its commitments.

Harris, 14-year National Hockey League veteran who retired in September but came back to play one last year for the Nationals, said "it looks like I've played my last game."

He said he would work instead towards completing his liberal arts degree in preparation for a teaching career.

Huck, 24-year-old centre with the team for five years, said he "can't see hanging around."

He would concentrate on finishing his law degree for the next three or four months and then reconsider his hockey future.

"It seems like a lot of effort gone in vain," he said. "We've all disappointed . . . A lot of promise was nipped in the bud."

Coach Jackie McLeod said "you have to have something to work towards to keep a team together," but shunned pessimism before he heard more from a meeting this week between officials of the CAHA and Hockey Canada to decide the team's fate.

Hornets Lose to West Germans

GARMISCH (CP) — The West German national team scored two goals in the first period and went on to defeat Galt Hornets 4-1 in an exhibition game Sunday night.

Goals by Adlmaeir and Edi in the first period gave the German club a 2-0 lead after one period.

Funk increased the lead to 3-0 in the second period before Howie Dietrich scored for the Hornets, winners of the Allan Cup. Schloeder scored the only goal of the third period for West Germany.

Canada drew 11 of 20 penalties, including a high-sticking major. The West Germans outshot the Canadians, forcing Ron Boomer to make 31 saves. Galt had 29 shots at Josef Schramm.

Galt plays in Landshut Tuesday against the same team.

Attendance was 7,000.

'Did Everything I Could'

Ahearne Crying for Canada Again

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

GENEVA (CP) — Although the big Canadian powerplay fizzled in the face of overwhelming odds Sunday, the force of the impact left a bad taste in the mouth of Bunny Ahearne and tears in his eyes.

Ahearne, unchallenged czar of world hockey and president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said:

"I have done everything I could on behalf of Canada."

He made the remark after Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, pulled Canada out of international hockey competition and the 1976 world championship next March was switched to Stockholm from Winnipeg and Montreal.

Dawson, the cigar-chewing former Liberal member of the Manitoba legislature, was terse and to the point when he announced to Ahearne and delegates from the other five countries in the world tournament that there will be no international exchange of games between Canada and European countries until Canada is given the right to play her top players.

"We will not take part in any tournament until that time," Dawson said on behalf of the Canadian delegation, which included president Charles Hay of Hockey Canada.

"Canada will also enter a team of amateurs in the 1972 Olympic Games and we intend to question the eligibility of every other team and make ineligible any and all teams which have professionals."

Then, as Ahearne stared in shocked silence, Dawson unloaded a verbal barrage against his leadership of the federation.

"We are disappointed in your leadership, Mr. President. You had a chance to lead the fight against dictatorship by the Olympic Games and you did nothing."

Dawson's stand was known before Sunday, although there was little doubt that the five countries—Russia, Czechoslovakia, Sweden, Finland and East Germany—believed the Canadians were bluffing.

Dawson outlined Canada's position at Saturday's opening session of the emergency meeting, called after Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, ruled that anyone playing with or against professionals in the 1970 tournament would be declared ineligible for the 1972 Olympics.

Dawson cited a July ruling of the federation that granted Canada the use of nine professionals for the 1970 championship.

But the protest from Brundage, stating that the professionals would contaminate the amateurs, forced Ahearne to call the emergency meeting.

After Dawson's tirade, Ahearne said:

"He is fully within his rights in querying my leadership. However, from my point of view, he is a small boy. He has had no experience. I am quite happy to put myself in the hands of the other 23 nations in the IIHF.

"I am sorry to say that, in my opinion, the CAHA no longer controls hockey in Canada so far as the IIHF is concerned."

Gordon Juckes, executive-director of the CAHA, said after the meeting that so far $400,000 has been spent on the tournament in Canada and could not say how much of that could be recovered.

"In Winnipeg alone there will have to be ticket refunds totalling $300,000," Juckes said.

Ahearne, meanwhile, announced that the federation will invite the United States to move from Group B to replace Canada in Group A.

Tom Lockhart, president of the U.S. Amateur Hockey Association, said Sunday he would not know if the invitation will be accepted until he returns home today and submits it to the U.S. Olympic Ice Hockey Committee.

The general feeling of the Canadians was that the whole matter and especially the 1970 tournament had been sabotaged by Sweden and Russia.

Dawson said:

"Sweden led the sabotage so they could get the tournament and benefit to the tune of $500,000. The Russians sabotaged the Canadian tournament so they would not be in danger of losing the gold medal."

Wings' Weekend Wins Pull Them Nearer Habs

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Detroit Red Wings are snapping at the heels of the defending Stanley Cup champions, thanks to the efforts of a 22-year-old veteran who turned the tables on a rookie.

The veteran was Red Wings goalie Roy Edwards who recorded Detroit's first shutout of the National Hockey League season in a 4-0 win over Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night. In the losers' nets was 26-year-old rookie Tony Esposito, who leads the league with seven shutouts.

The win moved the Red Wings to within one point of third-place Montreal Canadiens in the East Division standings.

In other Sunday games, New York Rangers downed Oakland Seals 5-2, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Minnesota North Stars 3-1 and Toronto Maple Leafs earned a 4-4 tie with Pittsburgh Penguins.

Saturday, the Red Wings whipped Philadelphia 6-1, Toronto beat Chicago 6-2, Montreal downed Oakland 5-1, Boston Bruins defeated Los Angeles Kings 6-2, St. Louis Blues shut out Pittsburgh 6-0 and Minnesota gained a 3-3 tie with New York.

Garry Unger scored his 16th and 17th season goals Sunday to lead the Red Wings attack before 15,501 Detroit fans. Bruce MacGregor and Pete Stemkowski scored once each.

The Red Wings and Black Hawks each counted 33 shots on goal but Edwards was outstanding, especially on shots by Chicago's Pit Martin and Stan Mikita. Bobby Hull had six shots at Edwards and on numerous other opportunities the Hawk scoring ace shot wide.

Vic Hadfield scored twice in the second period to lead New York. The win put the Rangers four points ahead of the second-place Bruins in the East.

The 17,259 fans at New York saw the Rangers pelt Oakland goalie Gary Smith with 43 shots. Don Marshall, Bill Fairbairn and Dave Balon also connected for the Rangers.

Carol Vadnais and Gerry Ehman scored for the Seals who wrapped up their 22nd loss in 36 starts, worth fifth spot in the West Division.

New York goalie Ed Giacomin stopped 28 shots and was especially hard-pressed in the second period when two penalties against the Rangers gave the Seals a two-man advantage for almost 1½ minutes.

Reggie Fleming, Andre Lacroix and Lew Morrison scored for the Flyers, who moved back into a tie with Pittsburgh, two points behind second-place Minnesota in the West.

The North Stars remain 14 points back of the leading Blues.

Bill Goldsworthy collected his 20th season goal for the North Stars to put him in a tie with Montreal's Jacques Lemaire as the league's leading goal scorers.

The 11,731 fans at Philadelphia saw Minnesota goalie Fern Rivard face 41 shots while Doug Favell earned the victory by stopping 29 shots.

A goal by Bert Selby with 35 seconds remaining in the game at Pittsburgh earned the tie for the Leafs.

Norm Ullman, Murray Oliver and Floyd Smith also scored for Toronto, now one point behind the fifth-place Black Hawks.

Defenceman Bob Woytowich scored his fifth and sixth goals to open the scoring for Pittsburgh in the first period. Rookie Michel Briere and Ken Schinkel

Orr Sitting Pretty

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Walt Tkaczuk of New York Rangers collected two assists Sunday to strengthen his fourth-place spot in the National Hockey League scoring race.

The New York centre, with 16 goals and 25 assists, now is 15 points back of the leader, Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins, eight behind second-place Phil Goyette of St. Louis Blues and just one back of Phil Esposito of the Bruins, last season's scoring champion.

The leaders:

	G	A	Pts
Orr, Bos	11	45	56
Goyette, StL	17	22	39
Esposito, Bos	15	27	42
Tkaczuk, NY	16	25	41
Marseille, StL	15	24	39
McDonald, StL	19	19	38
Ratelle, NY	15	23	38
Balon, NY	13	25	38
Mikita, Chi	17	18	35
Mahovlich, Det	17	18	35

Lemaire scored twice to reach the 20-goal plateau and lead the Canadiens in the win before a home crowd of 16,631. Rookie Mnre Tardif, up from the Voyageurs of the American League, started the Montreal scoring with Yvan Cournoyer and Claude Provost adding second-period goals.

Vadnais, a former Canadiens player, scored Oakland's only goal.

Rookie goaltender Phil Myre stopped 22 Oakland shots while the Seals' Gary Smith made 30 saves.

Two goals by Bill McCreary and one each by Andre Boudrias, Ab McDonald and Larry Keenan gave the Blues a 5-0 lead in the first 14 minutes of the opening period at St. Louis.

Gary Sabourin added a third-period goal while Ernie Wakely stopped 26 Pittsburgh shots to earn the shutout. Les Binkley and Al Smith shared the Penguins goaltending, stopping 21 drives.

Hot Water Key to Life

Pair Survive 12 Days In Arctic Wilderness

ANCHORAGE (AP) — Brendan Kilmurray and Roland McNeil found that sheltering in an igloo and drinking lots of hot water was one way to survive after their helicopter came down in the Arctic wastes.

Chipper and saying few felt fine, the two were flown here Sunday from Umiat, a tiny Alaskan settlement 8 miles from the wooded spot along the Chandler River where McNeil had set down the helicopter 12 days earlier.

For eight days McNeil, 34, of Grandview, Wash., and Kilmurray, 29, of New York, stayed with the craft, which contained survival gear and food supplies. But New Year's Day they decided to hike out.

"We stumbled all over the place," said McNeil, "and I never fell so many times in my life."

The temperature hovered around the 40-below-zero mark and it was light for only about five hours each day. Three hours after they started, they were caught in a whiteout, when the snow in the air and on the ground combined to blot out the horizon.

"So, we dug an igloo in the snow, on the side of the river bank," said Kilmurray.

The two crawled in with a blanket and the canvas engine cover from the helicopter and holed up for two days.

"We slept," said McNeil, "but it was fitful sleep."

To help ward off freezing they built a fire and melted snow in tins to obtain hot water.

"Have a lot of hot water, drink it and it's great," was Kilmurray's advice.

When it cleared Saturday morning, the two used their map and a compass to chart a course for Umiat. It took them 13 hours and they were without food.

"You reach a level of hunger where it doesn't bother you any more," Kilmurray said.

U.S. Limits War Costs And Therefore Goals

The writers, both winners of the Pulitzer Prize, have been covering the Vietnam war for seven years.

By PETER ARNETT
And
HORST FAAS

SAIGON (AP) — The United States is putting a limit on its casualties and its costs, and thus seemingly on its goals, as the Vietnam war enters 1970.

From every available sign these limits, already exemplified by a cut of about one-third in battlefield deaths last year, compared with 1968, were imposed by pressures within the U.S.

De-escalation, and austerity in lives and money, have led to a whole new approach. For the first time in the war the Americans in Vietnam have been told to economize and yet produce results.

So far the enforced austerity has led to no setbacks. In fact, improved techniques, tactics and direction have enabled fewer men to do more.

This is evident in the provinces and at the borders where American troops are engaged in jobs ranging from highly professional surveillance to training home guardsmen. They are achieving better results at less cost in lives and money than at any time since American combat battalions landed here in 1965.

This new approach is seen by many observers as stabilizing an American military role that at one time threatened to get out of hand. It may also help the U.S. Army itself gain control over some of the ills that have befallen its ranks during the Vietnam period.

While the pressures from home brought realism to the once grandiose planning of Vietnam military operations, disillusion in American society seriously infected many Vietnam military units. Race conflict, war dissent and drug addiction infiltrated the draftee ranks of the U.S. Army in Vietnam. This led to leadership crises in some combat units.

It is already noticeable within combat outfits that fewer battles and lessening casualties have eased the problems.

The diminishing American role also is giving the war back to the Vietnamese.

The new approach to the war gives the American combat soldier a realistic goal.

Much of the military frustration in Vietnam in earlier years came from an inability to define what the practical objectives were. Once the war was defined in terms of vague ideological reasonings. To many men who went through the Vietnam experience these cliches were not enough to justify the bloodshed and the anguish.

The war became an endless chase through the jungles and villages to kill more and more of the enemy. The body count became the only measurement of success, the sure way to promotion.

Under the new approach the body count has been virtually abandoned as a measurement of success.

It is still important to kill enemy soldiers, "but the idea now is to fragment enemy units to manageable size, to erode them down to where they are beyond the point of no return—and then the Vietnamese can handle them," commented Lt.-Gen. Julian Ewell, commander of the four U.S. infantry division defending the routes to Saigon.

At any time American infantry battalions roamed the mountains and plains in search of a fight. They have a more permanent role today.

"Our purpose is not to pick fights any more in the boondocks, but to keep pacification intact," commented a senior infantry officer.

The emphasis is on high intensity, small-unit patrols. The big, multi-battalion operations that once characterized the war are gone.

Strict gildelines are imposed. Homes are no longer burned; in many areas helicopters fired upon from populated areas must fly away rather than return the fire.

Pacification for the first time has been put in terms that a soldier understands. It has been reduced-to one factor: Security.

"We must get in, the Viet Cong get out," said one U.S. official in explaining how pacification now applies to the hamlets. To bring this about Americans are rebuilding as well as securing many hamlets, putting together the remnants of a shattered society.

"The idea is to get the peasants on their feet and into the paddies," commented an officer from the 5th Mechanized Division whose tanks plowed fallow land south of the demilitarized zone, performing in a few hours work that would normally have taken six months.

The new role involving the U.S. soldier at the hamlet has Americans working at more levels of Vietnamese society than ever before.

Injunctions are fed constantly into the provinces for more realistic and less optimistic readings of the situation, more factual reporting.

Americans in the countryside are much less dogmatic than in the past about democratic processes and corruption.

What seems to count most to U.S. officials is grassroots democracy, with hoi'sand and village officials freely elected and not appointed.

On a higher level the quality of the official counts more than his being elected. There are still no elected province chiefs: all are appointed by Saigon and all are military officers. They have virtually dictatorial powers.

Tackling the illusive specter of corruption has become less important to Americans. In fact an official paper prepared for a senior American official warned that to destroy corruption could be to destroy the political system because it was so deeply ingrained.

Unrest within the United States was carried directly into the armed forces. College graduates brought with them their objections to the war and the draft. Some platoon and company commanders sometimes openly sided with reluctant draftees, and were hard to agree with some that the war was not worth dying for.

Late in 1969 you could hear some American officers speaking out openly against the war although they did the military job required of them. It was doubtful the military high command realized the extent of the problem. Commanding officers at the brigade and battalion levels were reluctant to press charges against any but the most serious offenders.

A battalion commander who told reporters that "acts which would have brought court-martial two years ago go unpublished today," was reprimanded by the defence department. Even his division commander expressed disbelief.

In the early days of the American troop buildup whites and blacks seemed to share a pride of accomplishment in rising above the racial problems beginning to afflict U.S. cities.

After the street fighting in Watts and in Detroit signs of racial disharmony became visible. By 1969 racial disturbances in American base areas were evident, with a polarization of the races.

The Black Panther symbol of the raised fist became a common, defiant salute, with thousands showing it in front of cameras following the Bob Hope Christmas show wherever it performed.

The problems within the U.S. Army in Vietnam seemed to mirror dissent, confusion or active opposition to the war within the United States, and the army seemed unable to solve them.

But there did seem to be a rise in morale in 1969 in direct relation to the decreased casualty lists and the promise of an eventual end to the war.

The presence of Vietnamese troops in the same foxholes and on the same night-ambush patrols tended to "humanize" American soldiers' awareness of Vietnam as a nation and the Vietnamese as a people.

Informed Vietnamese are apt to look upon de-Americanization of the war with mixed feelings, worry that political events in the United States will force an abandonment.

Critical observers say the danger still persists that the American withdrawal will be across the board, just as the original buildup was across the board. They worry that the withdrawal may not fit the times. This is coupled with a belief in many quarters that the American presence will be needed for a long time if the Vietnamese are to retain their pro-Western, anti-Communist stance.

STIFF PENALTY

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — When the court sentences are carried out, a stolen cow will have nine lives for six men. After the cow was stolen, five villagers lay in wait for the thieves and clubbed three of them to death. All five were sentenced to hang for the killing.

Marshals Watch Schools

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Public schools in Mississippi began post-holiday reopening today with many under U.S. Supreme Court orders for immediate and total desegregation under the watchful eyes of federal marshals.

More than 30 school districts with about 135,000 students were affected by the orders, but schools reopen on various days of the week.

State, civil and religious leaders appealed during the weekend for calm and reason as some 50 additional U.S. Marshals moved into the state to monitor compliance with the court mandate.

Gov. John Bell Williams asked for non-violence and patience in an address on television and radio.

Williams, however, told citizens it was still their decision whether to send their children to public or private schools, or keep them home.

JUST TO PLEASE THE EMPEROR!

Around 50 A.D., the Emperor Nero was served a delicious concoction of fruit juice and snow . . . the forerunner of our beloved ice cream. The Chinese added milk and Europeans brought the recipe to America where it's been a favorite since colonial times.

If the family prefers to buy their ice cream at the store instead of making it, turn that still-useful "ice" cream freezer into cool cash with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Call 962-4582 for details and ask for Classified.

Jet Aircraft, Computers, Even Satellites May Have to Be Classified as Farm Machines

OTTAWA (CP) — Future royal commissions studying farm machinery may have to include 70-millimetre cameras, jet aircraft, computers and even earth-orbiting satellites.

Use of small planes for crop dusting is old hat to the farmer. But high-altitude aerial photography to analyze crops and soils is coming.

The United States agriculture department, in conjunction with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, has extended experiments in aerial photographic crop and soil re[illegible]ation by-passed aircraft to include satellites.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, in his responsibility for forestry matters, is the latest government spokesman to urge that Canada speed up to $30,000,000 for a fact-gathering satellite aloft by 1975. It would benefit all resource industries including agriculture.

As expertise with aerial photography improves, computers are programmed to mill the pictures of every available piece of information. The principal result will be "billions of bits of information," says Dr. Robert Miller of the U.S. agriculture department.

The potential of satellites and computers working together to solve farm problems was discussed by Dr. Miller, liaison officer with the space administration, at a workshop for farm press reporters recently at Guelph, Ont.

He showed how color infrared, photographs, sensitive to heat as well as light, were used to spot diseased trees in between individual crops, soil types and moisture content. Infra-red sensors can pick up plant deterioration caused by disease before it is visible to the farmer on the ground.

Projecting the system, in theory at least, satellite photography could take photographs of mapping, land-use plotting, disease diagnosis and even crop measurement.

Computers could scan the pictures and tell how many were planted in wheat, how many in oats or any other crop, the U.S. agencies have already experimented with it but so far, Dr. Miller says, the definition of satellite-taken photographs is too poor for detailed analysis except in conjunction with photos taken by aircraft.

A more extensive study of satellite data for studying the earth will begin in 1972 when the U.S. launches ERTS -earth resources technology satellite. The satellite will be in a polar orbit and will move down over Canada about 18 times every day. Canadian scientists will be able to make use of the data collected, not only for agriculture, but for all resource-based industries.

By 1975 Canada hopes to have its own resources satellite in orbit. It could cost as much as $30,000,000 to build, $6,000,000 to launch and about $10,000,000 a year to read the data the satellite collects.

No one has tried to put a price tag on such sophisticated information gathering as a tool of farm management. Obviously the farmer struggling with a small operation cannot meet the cost of computers and satellites, no matter how valuable the information may be.

Nevertheless, the question of farmer exchange services is receiving more attention by the government in its desire to cut expenditures. It is one of the problems still being thrashed out by federal and provincial agriculture department officials in the joint federal-provincial computerized farm management service, Canfarm, which will be provided to Canadian farmers next year.

The University of Guelph computer keeps the livestock records for the Ontario government's Dairy Herd Improvement Association. The same computer will add crop cycle and the new Canfarm program. Once the system is operating, dairy herd records, livestock feeding programs and other aspects of farm management can be included with the financial records.

In the future, it will probably also include soil and crop information captured on film by a regularly orbiting satellite.

Consumers Complain Of Inferior Clothes

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario consumers complain about inferior material in clothes and a lack of information about materials, delegates at a conference of the Garment Salesmen Ontario Market Inc. were told today.

Eleanor Ordway, director of the consumer service and information branch of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs, told a breakfast meeting that misleading advertising is another major complaint.

Complaints received by her department relate to poor dyes, inferior thread and elastic, poor workmanship and material that stretches or shrinks.

Miss Ordway said consumers also feel the variety of textile fibres and trade names make intelligent purchasing difficult. They want more information about materials used in clothing so they will know how-to wash or dry clean them.

On misleading advertising, she said the old public attitude of permissiveness is fading and warned that her department believes the consumer is entitled to accurate, intelligible and honest advertising.

A text of Miss Ordway's remarks was released prior to delivery.

Ottawa Girl Found Strangled

PIEDMONT, Que. (CP) — Provincial police homicide detectives are investigating the strangulation death of a young Ottawa girl whose body was found near here Sunday.

Police said the body of Linda Silverman, 15, daughter of Dr. Mervin Silverman, was found early Sunday near Mont Belvedere by a woman walking her dog.

The girl had been missing from nearby St. Sauveur since 10 a.m. Saturday when she was skiing with a cousin who later left her to take ski lessons.

Ski patrol officials found the girl's ski near a crowded restaurant about 6:30 a.m. Saturday and mounted a search by 100 ski patrol members that was called off about 9 p.m.

Piedmont is about 35 miles northwest of Montreal.

Last Days of Churchill Described by Macmillan

LONDON (CP) — There was the great Winston Churchill lying in bed, talking about the massive power of the Bomb, a cigar in one hand, a whisky nearby and a little green budgerigar sitting on his head.

From time to time, says Harold Macmillan, the bird would say a few words in a husky voice like that of a well-known American actress of the time and would slip a little whisky.

It was "a bizarre but memorable scene."

Such intimate portraits of power are sprinkled throughout the former prime minister's third volume of memoirs, Tides of Fortune, which spans the first post-war decade when the Conservative party of Churchill, Anthony Eden and Macmillan was thrown out of power and then staged a comeback.

It was a period of political irritation and frustration. Eden, now Lord Avon, was anxious to take over the leadership. Churchill, mortified, was struggling to hold on, feverishly juggling cabinet posts to calm the unruly. Macmillan was one of those who urged Churchill to go.

When Churchill, deaf and enfeebled, finally did agree to retire, Macmillan's problems were not over. As prime minister, Eden agreed to appoint Macmillan as foreign secretary, though he said bluntly that he would have preferred another colleague.

Macmillan loved the foreign office. He plunged into work on the first East-West summit meeting that gave the West a close look at the new leaders of the Kremlin after the death of Stalin. Nikolai Bulganin was the premier then but Macmillan detected that Nikita Khrushchev was the real leader.

"Khrushchev is the mystery," he noted. "How can this fat, vulgar man with his pig eyes and ceaseless flow of talk really be the head—the supreme head—of the Tsars—of all these millions of people and this vast country?"

There are strong words for the urbane, tweeds-and-grouse Macmillan, but his analysis was shrewd. In the summit that resolved nothing, he detected also that the sabre-rattling Russians didn't really want war and they were not keen on their Chinese connections.

Their great hate and fear were the Germans. They would do everything to stop German reunification.

On this point Macmillan recently elaborated in a television interview where he said Churchill was obsessed by the fear of nuclear war.

Macmillan believes possession of nuclear weapons helped prevent world war.

"I think that the nuclear weapon is so horrible and so destructive that it has really prevented war."

As for the Russians, they "talk a great deal of stuff which they don't really believe . . . the really genuine thing was fear of Germany; fear and hatred of Germany."

This hatred sprang from the terrible treatment by Hitler's men in occupied Russia "and fear of a country which they believed to be fundamentally more intelligent, more developed and is the final analysis could be more powerful." That fear remains.

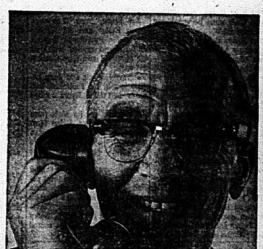
But while Macmillan loved the foreign office, Eden soon shifted him, making him chancellor of the exchequer. Macmillan didn't like it. He got his wife to type a letter to Eden putting up conditions, but he went. Macmillan was unhappy. He didn't know then that the Suez crisis of 1956 would topple Eden, tossing the big 10 Downing Street plum right in Macmillan's lap.

The book, published by Macmillan's own company, is filled with much political detail but critics noted a reticence on Macmillan's part to tell the full story. The full personality does not emerge; the full story of Macmillan's own life is half-told.

"Like his deliberately archaic oratorical mannerisms," says The Sunday Times, "or his Edwardian affectations in dress, they are part of one of the most elaborate exercises in self-concealment since Benjamin Disraeli abandoned his ringlets and settled down as the squire of Hughenden."

The Sunday Express agrees. While Macmillan is quick to tell the story of Churchill in bed in 1952 with the budgerigar on his head, there is a curious lack of self-disclosure.

"It emerges from his book," it says, as animated as the prize specimen in a taxidermist's window."



Macmillan, now 75, plans to produce two more volumes to complete his memoirs. Graham Lord, writing in The Sunday Express, suggests the final volume should be entitled, A Sigh of Relief.

Irate New Yorkers Challenge Thirty-cent Fares on Subway

NEW YORK (AP) — With court action and storming of the turnstiles, irate subway riders have promised to challenge the New York City's new 30-cent fare.

One commuters' group, Straphangers United, obtained a court order Sunday night order-ing Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and the Metropolitan Transportation administration to show cause why the fare should not be rolled back to 20 cents.

Justice Jawn A. Sandifer of the State Supreme Court signed the order, returnable Wednesday, in his home.

Two other groups, Better Transportation for New York and Survival of Subway Riders, urged riders to "storm" turnstiles, shucking under them or pushing through exit gates.

"Some members of the group are so outraged they are ready to call a strike," said Jefferson Chase, head of Survival for Subway Riders.

The fare rose to 30 cents from 20 cents at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. The Transit Authority said the revenue was needed to meet the costs of a $120,000,000 contract negotiated Thursday with 20,000 subway and bus employees.

Only Air and Spark Needed To Make Gasoline Explode

Second Of Two

By RAY STAPLEY

While most of us are sparred contact with the volatile side of gasoline's personality, the stories of its destructive nature are legion.

I remember during my Navy days in World War II how several Canadian torpedo boats were destroyed by fire at Ostend. A careless stoker had pumped a mixture of gasoline and oil out of the bilges of his boat. It floated on the surface of the water until some unexpected spark sent it skyward — together with millions of dollars worth of much needed naval equipment.

Even in the absence of an open flame or a carelessly handled cigarette, there is danger of fire from inflammables. Safety experts speak of the combustion "triangle" where only three things are needed to cause fire: fuel, air and ignition. Air is usually available in abundance and ignition even be provided by static electricity.

I have seen gasoline tanks being ripped open by mechanics who insisted it was perfectly safe because they were not smoking. I remember a time, and, besides, they put some carbon tetrachloride in the tank to be on the safe side."

People have been seriously burned or killed taking the chance.

Even when a gasoline tank has been drained and cleaned, there remains the danger of explosion. When I was 17, I dented the gas tank on my father's car. I was ordered to beat out the dents and, knowing the dangers of gasoline, I took it down to the laundry room, put it in the tub and ran hot water through it for more than an hour. Then I left it under a running cold tap overnight.

Next morning I put a torch to it to heat the metal. There was a blinding flash and the gasoline tank flew out of my hands. It turned out that I was doubly lucky - only my eyebrows were singed, and all the dents in the tank had been blown out.

Later it was explained to me that there must have been enough gasoline left in the pores of the metal to vaporize on heating and explode.

If your car must go into the garage for work on the tank, try to burn most of the gasoline first. This will at least minimize draining large quantities of fuel from the tank before removal.

Should you be in the garage when the tank is being removed, and the mechanic is working under the tank with a wrench in one hand and an extension light in the other, get out in a hurry. If you are really attached to your car, you might pause long enough to tell him he is courting disaster.

If the extension light drops to the floor, the bulb can shatter and ignite the fumes. Fuel spilling from the tank as it is removed is also dangerous if it splashes onto the bulb. A few years ago I saw the remains of a service station that burned down as a result of a raw gas dripping onto and cracking an extension light bulb.

When refueling your car, switch off your ignition and refrain from smoking. In Ontario this is the mandatory and the attendant will request it. A chance spark or backfire through the tailpipe could ignite the gasoline. Furthermore, the attendant doesn't appreciate the unpleasant exhaust fumes from the tailpipe.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

There are many threats to human survival. There has been much in the news lately about the dangers of pollution; water, food, drug, noise. Now comes another: the fear of world over-population may be a problem to meet head on. Naturally, individuals are involved and concerned.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: We have six healthy and wonderful children. Frankly, we don't want anymore. We want a safe-and-sure method of birth control. But the question is, what is it? I certainly don't want my ovaries or uterus removed. Neither do I want to take the Pill, which I understand has an element of danger for some women. As you know, all the other methods are uncertain. And we don't want to live in anxious doubt from month to month.

That leaves it up to the husband. Mine is willing to have a vasectomy. I'm holding back because I don't know enough about the operation.

Is it serious? Will he have to stay away from work for weeks? How will it affect him emotionally and physically? Sexually, I mean. Suppose we change our minds and want to have children after he has had the operation? I'll appreciate any information. Thank you. Mrs. C.

Comment: In direct reply: The operation isn't serious. He should only lose a few days' work. How it will affect him emotionally and physically (sexually) will depend upon his religious beliefs and upon his emotional makeup. As these are X-factors, I can't answer this question specifically.

If you change your mind after operation, can you have children again? It is unlikely—but possible with plastic surgery. Ideally, contraceptive control in the male will have to come in the form of some chemical taken in pill form. Vasectomy itself consists in removing a portion of the vas deferens (the tubes through which the sperm passes from the testicles to the point of ejaculation). All it does is prevent the passage of sperm so they cannot impregnate the woman.

I have received many letters from both men and women who say they have been very happy after the husband (and wife) consented to vasectomy. But better talk it over thoroughly before your husband consents to an operation. There have been some emotionally unstable males who become upset because they believe the operation has interfered with their masculinity.

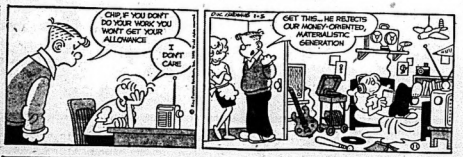
For Mrs. B.: I'm sorry, but I doubt that you can tell the difference between a cigarette cough and one caused by bronchitis, tuberculosis or cancer of the lung by the "sound" of the cough.

If you insist that you will not go to a doctor, at least try this test — if you have the gumption for it. Stop smoking for four to six weeks. If the cough completely disappears, then you may be right. Maybe!



* * *

For Mrs. D.: Usually I advise against snuffing salt water — or anything else — when you have a runny nose. It won't help, only harm. For there's the danger of spreading the infection (if there is one, and not an allergy) to the ears.

For Miss D.: Doctors do not recommend routine douching unless here is a medical indication for it. Therefore, better find out from a gynecologist if there is a medical reason for the odor you complain about. You may have a mild infection that can be easily overcome.

Governments Dislike Curbs

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Our text today is:

"All governments, democracies as well as autocracies, believe that those they seek to punish are guilty; the impediment of constitutional barriers are galling to all governments when they prevent the consummation of that just purpose.

"But these barriers were devised and are precious because they prevent that purpose and its pursuit from passing unchallenged by the accused, and inpurged by the alembic of public scrutiny and public criticism. A society which has come to view as such exposure of the methods by which it seeks to impose its will upon its members, has already lost the feel of freedom and is on the path toward absolutism."

These paragraphs were part of an opinion handed down some time ago by Learned Hand, one of the most eminent and respected American jurists of our century.

They deserve to be read, reread, digested, and absorbed by every citizen who may feel that the government is "handcuffed" by legal restrictions in securing 'the conviction of accused wrongdoers.

The constitutional rights of an accused person are the cornerstone of the American system of government. They may be abused, and often are, by gangsters, criminals, subversives, and assassins — but they are there for our protection, not for theirs.

What we must see, if we are not to drift into the absolutism that Judge Hand warned us of is that no worthy goal is justified by unworthy means; that only our vigilance in protecting the very worst elements of society from undue process can guarantee that we ourselves will receive the full measure of due process on which our nation was founded.

All governments want to prosecute. All governments want to convict. All governments want trouble-makers put away. But if we put them away by cutting corners on their constitutional rights, then the government can designate any "trouble-makers" it wants, and doesn't like and can put them away. This perennial threat of a police state is much greater than any threat of gangsters, tax-dodgers, subversives or assassins.

If we are seduced away from the democratic doctrine, it will not be because of any foreign ideology, but because we ourselves have become willing to betray our constitutional heritage: because our irrational fear and anger and frustration drive us to undermine the very bases of our own personal and civic freedom. The enemy is in us.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 6

Your birthday today: Your main concern in the months ahead will be to better organize your present resources. According to the effort you have made to improve your skills and efficiency, some recognition in your work is likely. If your present work lacks challenge, start to try for a bigger job, with good chances of getting one.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): After a morning of empty noise your day settles to real productivity. Make a bid for a higher position, organize your backers and references.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Work may encroach on your leisure time, or you may require extra rest after work. Suspend early judgment, then follow your intuition in the late hours

Property, real estate interests go well in the evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Discussion early in the day generates more confusion than it resolves, but thereafter everybody gets down to practical realities and things are worked out.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Some discrepancy or past error comes to light in the morning. Attend to corrections promptly. The later hours are excellent for interviewing important people. Emotional ties are rewarding.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Tackle some tedious chore that has been neglected and overdue. There is a good chance of advice, and perhaps assistance, from an older relative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Take news and incidents of the morning as temporary phases, with a reservation. The afternoon and evening are for business, travels, shopping, contacts with people who may promote your interests.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): A sense of humor is essential. Your friends and associates will go along with you to straighten things out if you can make it a joke. Newcomers in your neighborhood arouse interest.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Once the morning indecision is over, sales of property and merchandise turn out well, but not your personal purchasing efforts. Corporate buyers fare better.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Inside information is not to be trusted early in the day, but proves more reliable in the afternoon; rearrange your work and schemes accordingly. Clear up a family question.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Spend the morning in review; expect to revise figures and estimates. The rest of the day is advantageous for official visits, inspections, investment adjustments.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Early irresolutions settle into better directions as the day progresses. Serious business is better done in the evening over a good meal. Find time later to meditate, or do some earnest study.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): All sorts of friendly doings go on, with no special inference to be drawn from any of them. Take things as they come, at face value. Emphasis is on chiropodists, manicurists. Buy new shoes if you need them.

Two other groups, Better Transportation for New York and Survival of Subway Riders, urged riders to "storm" turnstiles, shucking under them or pushing through exit gates.

"Some members of the group are so outraged they are ready to call a strike," said Jefferson Chase, head of Survival for Subway Riders.

The fare rose to 30 cents from 20 cents at 12:01 a.m. Sunday. The Transit Authority said the revenue was needed to meet the costs of a $120,000,000 contract negotiated Thursday with 20,000 subway and bus employees.

Argentine Dam Gives Way Sweeping 38 to Their Death

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — A flood control dam gave way in the foothills of the Andes Sunday, sending a six-foot wall of mud and water raging through the city of Mendoza and killing at least 38 persons.

Radio reports to Buenos Aires, 750 miles east of the disaster area, indicated that the death toll could reach 70.

An additional 30 had been swolen the Mendoza River to overflowing, causing flooding in many areas outside the city of 700,000. Suddenly the dam burst at Godoy Cruz, a small village just outside the city.

The flood of mud and water drowned motorists in their cars as it swept the autos along the streets. It uprooted trees, smashed houses, swept pedestrians off their feet and raged through outdoor cafes.

At least 500 persons were left homeless or injured as the water and mud ripped into flimsy shacks on the edge of the city, police reported.

In 30 minutes, mud and water covered eight square miles of the gracious, tree-shaded city.

A woman survivor said she was knocked down by the rushing water and her two children were carried away to their death.

Another woman was drowned as the water carried her along San Martin Street, the city's main avenue.

A seven-year-old child running from a car was caught by the torrent and was drowned. Twenty persons in a funeral procession tried to escape into nearby trees, but one of them was drowned.

Government officials estimated that wind and rain in Neuquen and Rio Negro provinces, south of Mendoza, have destroyed at least half of this year's apple and pear crops, which were to have been harvested this month.

Telephone and cable communications with the city were cut off and electrical power was disrupted.

Gov. Eugenio Blanco reported that police, firemen, civil defence workers and soldiers had been organized into rescue teams. Their efforts were hindered by continuing heavy rain through the night.

Mendoza, the centre of Argentina's large wine industry, is one of the country's wealthiest cities, with tree-lined streets and prosperous shops and homes. The surrounding Andean foothills are largely parched desert except for areas irrigated with water from rivers originating in the mountains.

The rich vineyards of Mendoza province are watered by the Mendoza River, which flows east from the Andes. Other dams to the south water the orchards in Neuquen and Rio Negro provinces, and much of the fruit is exported to North America and Europe.

THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

British and Aussie Pilots Race Winners

SYDNEY, Australia (CP) — British and Australian pilots were declared provisional winners Sunday of the first six places in the 12,000-mile London-to-Sydney air race.

The overall winner was W. J. Bright of Britain, flying a Britten-Norman Islander. He won the Prime Minister's Trophy and the British Petroleum Australian prize of $28,000.

The race, run on handicap, came to a spectacular finish when 59 entrants landed within 15 minutes of each other at Bankstown airport.

Second for the Prime Minister's Trophy were Australians P. E. Cooper and D. P. Darbyshire in a Beach Baron B-55, air race control announced in tentative results.

Winner of the jet plane category, announced earlier, was a Hawker Siddeley 125 owned by Australia's Qantas Airlines. A Canadian Defence Forces fanjet Falcon was second.

One of those to triumphantly cross the finish line was lone British pilot Sheila Scott, who survived harrowing storms, technical troubles and a forced landing.

"I seem to have been going a long time," she said.

Swamped by autograph hunters when she stepped from her tiny Cessna plane, she said she felt "absolutely great."

Despite the string of incidents on her way, "the air race flying has been easy," she said.

The blonde flyer, who was left without long distance flying aids soon after she took off from London's Gatwick Airport, ran into severe storms over Indonesia and made a forced landing on a lonely island. Dysentery, and engine problems added to her troubles.

She told a reporter she now planned to write a book—entitled How to Survive.

Kidnapping Clues Still Few

LONDON (CP) — After nearly a week of non-stop inquiries, Scotland Yard detectives admitted Sunday night they are no nearer finding the wife of a British newspaper executive who disappeared from her home last Monday.

A police spokesman said they are still satisfied that Muriel McKay, 55-year-old wife of Alexander McKay, acting chairman of the News of the World, has been kidnapped.

The only clue has been a letter from Mrs. McKay to her family, in which she said she was blindfolded. Police now are certain this letter was written by her.

Mrs. McKay's family also are emphatic that she did not leave her suburban home of her own accord.

In bitterly cold weather, the special police hunt squad continued their search Sunday but found no clues.

There has still been no response to a dramatic appeal by McKay Saturday night to his wife's kidnappers.

"I ask whoever is holding Muriel to get in touch with me immediately and let me know exactly what they want," he said. "If it is money, then I must know how and where it can be exchanged for my wife."

McKay's statement stressed: "Do you realize, whoever you are, how dangerous will be the state of my wife's health if she does not quickly get the drugs she needs?"

Five Specialists Of Quebec Group To Visit Alberta

MONTREAL (CP) — A delegation of five specialists, representing French-speaking immigrants who want to move to Alberta, will leave for Edmonton within the next few days to seek meetings with officials of the Alberta agriculture department, spokesman Andre Spinoza said Saturday.

Mr. Spinoza, head of a group called the Association of French-speaking Immigrants, said in an interview the delegation hopes to meet the Alberta agriculture minister to study the possibility of setting up a farm-based co-operative community on a 1,000,000-acre tract of land.

Between 1,000 and 3,000 immigrant families want to move to Alberta, Mr. Spinoza estimated. An exact count had not been completed.

He said he is not yet in a position to disclose the names of the members of the delegation.

Although Alberta government officials in Edmonton have denied any knowledge of the scheme, Mr. Spinoza said the initial approach has been made through Alberta's representative in Montreal, Louis Roy.

Mr. Roy confirmed that he had been contacted by Mr. Spinoza and that he had told the group that land might be available for them in Alberta.

"I told them that they'd have to approach the manpower department in Ottawa about assistance in relocating and then, if the federal government were interested, the situation could be developed on the ministerial level," Mr. Roy said.

"The reason Alberta government officials have been denying any knowledge of the project is that all the people questioned really didn't know yet. The only person who would know at this point would be the minister of industry."

LONDON (CP) — The Times says the plan of a group of French-speaking immigrants in Quebec to settle in Alberta "will upset the separatist politicians, both moderate and extremist."

"It hardly suggests that Quebec is a land of economic opportunity," the newspaper says in an editorial.

"The riots and violence that have disfigured its cities and public life last year may add an extra motive to leave it."

Quebec's attractions would be "still fewer after a further round of separatist threats and violence." The Times continues.

"These have injured its ability to raise capital for development and may well have frightened away some useful citizens, particularly wealthy and enterprising English-speaking ones."

A Swinging Start

Psychedelic background of the stage at Trenton Community Gardens auditorium is the scene as Mayor Duncan McDonald takes off his chain of office. Both the mayor and the 1970 municipal administration got off to a "swinging start" at Monday morning inauguration ceremonies and waltzed through their initial 1970 council session last night. Hijack Bid Foiled

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A man attempting to hijack a Delta Air Lines DC-9 to Switzerland was thrown off balance by an intentional bumpy landing at Jacksonville International Airport today and overpowered by three passengers.

Authorities said the man, identified by the Duval County sheriff's office as Anton Funjek, 41, of Evansville, Ind., was held on an assault to murder charge.

Airline spokesman said there were 58 passengers and five crew members aboard the jet.

Robert Starrett, chief of investigations for the sheriff's department, said the would-be hijacker attempted to seize con-

U.S. Ready For Talks With China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is ready to resume full-scale talks with mainland China in Warsaw this month as soon as Peking and Washington can agree on a date.

Official sources said an announcement will be made at the same time in both the U.S. and Chinese capitals once the timing has been determined.

Bodies Found By Son

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Police said today they have no clues in the triple gunshot slaying of Joseph A. (Jock) Yablonski, United Mine Workers union insurgent, and his wife and daughter in their home.

Meanwhile, Yablonski supporters in his recent unsuccessful bid for the UMW presidency urged a country-wide coal mine work stoppage to honor his memory.

The blood-splattered, pyjama-clad bodies of Yablonski and the two women were found Monday in their colonial farmhouse on the outskirts of this small coal-mining town.

Dr. Ernst Abernathy, chief pathologist at Washington, Pa., Hospital, said the 59-year-old Yablonski, whose body was sprawled on the floor of an upstairs bedroom, had been shot five times.

Abernathy said .38-calibre slugs were recovered from Yablonski's right wrist, head, right breast and throat. The fifth slug was found on the floor.

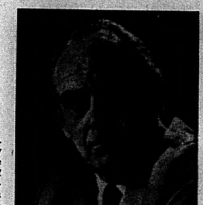
Yablonski's wife, Margaret, 57, was found on a bed in the same room. She had been shot twice in the body.

The daughter, Charlotte Joanne, 25, was found in an adjoining room. Abernathy said she had been shot twice in the head.

"I would say they were dead probably a minimum of three days but more likely four days," Abernathy said.

Asked whether he thought there was more than one killer, he replied:

"I would certainly believe there was more than one person. These three murders couldn't have been done by one man because then he would have had to stop and reload."



He noted that nine shots were fired while a .38-calibre pistol holds only six cartridges.

Police said telephone lines to the Yablonski house had been cut and tires on two family cars had been deflated. There was no sign of a struggle and police ruled out robbery as a motive.

The killings were discovered by Yablonski's son, Kenneth, a lawyer. He said police he went to the house after repeated calls were unanswered, but that this was not unusual because his father travelled extensively and was frequently out of town.

The slain union leader used to say that "Jock Yablonski can go anywhere in the coal fields," an area frequently torn by violence. After he was attacked and knocked unconscious at a campaign rally in Illinois, however, friends said he became worried about his safety.

Joseph Yablonski, another son, said Monday that "from the very date the campaign started" there were fears for his father's life.

Murdered

Joseph "Jock" Yablonski, unsuccessful candidate in the election race for the presidency of the United Mine-workers Union, was found murdered at Clarksville, Pa., state police said Monday. (AP Photo)

Moonman Grounded

Astronaut Is Forbidden To Fly His Jet to Work

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 12 astronaut Alan L. Bean, the fourth man to walk the surface of the moop, has been grounded and forbidden to fly airplanes.

A space agency spokesman said Monday the astronaut was grounded "for administrative reasons", He declined to elaborate but said a more specific reason may be released later.

Bean would not comment on the report.

Grounding of a flyer is usually for medical reasons, but the spokesman said that there was no medical ailment involved.

Bean, a U.S. Navy captain, is a former jet test pilot with thousands of hours in jet, propeller and helicopter aircraft.

He has flown 27 different aircraft during his aviation career.

Bean was the lunar module pilot on Apollo 12, the second moon landing mission. Flying with Charles Conrad, Bean landed on the moon last November. The two astronauts walked on the moon for about eight hours and then blasted off its surface to rendezvous in moon orbit with the third Apollo 12 astronaut, Richard Gordon.

The three were promoted to captain after the flight.

Bean and others in the astronaut corps use T-38 jets to commute from the Manned Spacecraft Centre to Cape Kennedy, Fla., and to other space centres.

The grounding, in effect, prevents Bean from flying his aircraft alone between the various centres.

Eight Drowned Off B.C. Coast

CAMPBELL RIVER, B.C. (CP) — The bodies of seven persons who died in a weekend boating mishap were recovered near here Monday and RCMP said there was no hope for an eight-year-old girl still missing.

Police said the cause of the accident would remain a mystery until the 22-foot cabin cruiser is found. They said it contained adequate flotation and should not sink even if holed. The bodies showed no signs of an explosion or a fire.

Just after noon Monday, the bodies of Harry Dirks, 43, his daughter Linda, 8, and Jimmy Falk, 14, were found by a search party.

All three were wearing lifejackets and were tied together. RCMP said it appeared they died from drowning or exposure.

The bodies of four other Dirks children were located about three miles north of here, about five hours later.

Davie, 16; Arthur, 17; Tim, 15, and Grace, 11, were also wearing lifejackets and their bodies were roped together.

Egyptians Raid Sinai Positions

From AP-Reuters

Egypt said today its forces killed many Israeli soldiers in a raid across the Suez canal against positions in the Sinai Desert.

And in Tel Aviv, an Israeli military spokesman said an abortive Egyptian attempt to land a commando unit on the east bank of the waterway was followed up today by two unsuccessful Egyptian air strikes.

The Israeli spokesman rejected the Egyptian statement that many Israelis were killed in the ground raid, saying no casualties or damage were inflicted.

The Tel Aviv spokesman said Israeli troops intercepted the Egyptian troops, killing at least nine of them at a point just north of Port Taufiq.

A Cairo spokesman told reporters the Egyptian forces returned safely to base with only minor casualties after a three-hour battle in which an Israeli tank and two other vehicles were destroyed. Nine Egyptian troops were wounded, he said.

Quebec Plans Spring Lottery

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec will have a provincial lottery offering a first prize of at least $200,000 by April at the latest, it was announced Monday.

Maurice Custeau, newly-designated head of the Quebec Corporation for Operating Lotteries and Races, said at his swearing-in ceremony he will have "some very good news" to announce in two or three weeks.

He said the corporation is empowered to organize all kinds of games of chance but a lottery will come first because it is the simplest to operate.

You Can Stay Sober On 18 Ounces a Day

VICTORIA (CP) — A moderate drinker can get drunk faster by drinking whisky than by drinking beer, the B.C. liquor inquiry commission was told Monday.

But it all depends on whether the drinker has food in his stomach.

Dr. Leon A. Greenberg, director of Rutgers University centre for studies in alcohol, said the absorption rate for distilled spirits is faster than that of beer.

"The whole phenomenon of drinking can't be taken separately from how people drink and why people drink," Dr. Greenberg said.

Dr. Greenberg said figures on absorption rates are based on research with subjects who had no food in their stomachs.

"As soon as you introduce food, all your figures on absorption rates go down the drain."

He said the drink whisky at a rate of three quarters of an ounce per hour and you can drink around the clock, you can drink ad nauseum, and at no time will you have anything but a slight trace of alcohol in the blood," he said.

Heart Transplants 'Investigational' But Worth Continuing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two years and more than 130 operations after the world's first heart transplant, a United States government-appointed commission reported today such surgery still is mostly "investigational" but worth continuing.

The report, made public by the National Heart and Lung Institute, said results from previous transplants warrant stepped-up efforts to overcome major problems besetting the operation.

The group, in another major recommendation, urged increased government efforts to perfect artificial heart devices —and said that even a completely robot heart, once considered an impossible dream, now is rated as "not at all far-fetched."

Asserting that the tendency of the body to reject the transplanted heart remains the No. 1 problem, the report said that "until the problem of immunologic rejection is solved, 100 transplantations per year is probably an upper limit."

The 11-member group, headed by Dr. James V. Warren of Ohio State University, was appointed by the Institute in November, 1968, to study "all aspects of the problems surrounding the replacement of hopelessly diseased or damaged human hearts."

Among major conclusions:

Heart transplant "appears to have prolonged life in individual patients."

That is, of 136 transplants performed on 124 patients as of July 1, 1969, two survived more than a year; 25 per cent had lived at least six months; and "some had returned to a useful life."

Moreover, the cumulative experience with human subjects "has provided information not obtainable from animal experiments."

Belleville, Townships in Toronto Friday

Water Supplies to Be Discussed at Queen's Park

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Council heads from the city of Belleville and Thurlow and Sidney townships will meet with provincial government officials on Friday to discuss the provision of sewer and water services for the area outside of Belleville.

Attending the meeting will be Mayor Russell Scott, Reeve Horace Casey of Thurlow and Reeve Jack Bush of Sidney.

The three municipal representatives will meet with Energy and Resources Minister Hon. George Kerr and Municipal Affairs Minister Dere McKeough. Local ruling members Dr. R. T. Potter and Clarke T. Rollins will also attend.

The decision to arrange the meetings with the provincial government officials was made in early December. It came at a joint meeting of Belleville and Thurlow councils called to discuss extension of the city's proposed Moira River trunk sewer up the river into Thurlow township.

The Ontario Water Resources Commission, under a new policy announced last fall, has proposed that it build the trunk sewer up the river and recover its costs with charges on a use basis to Belleville and Thurlow.

Under the new policy the cost of sewer service to the rural municipality would be limited to $180 per year for residential householders with additional costs being paid by the OWRC.

Thurlow township has agreed in principle to the proposal, but Belleville wants additional information before making a decision.

"We'll get the answers from Mr. Kerr and Mr. McKeough and report to our respective councils," said Mayor Scott of Friday's meeting.

Wider Citizen Involvement Predicted in Civic Affairs

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

The concept of citizens' committees to lighten city council's administrative load was again emphasized by Mayor Dr. Russell Scott when he and council members briefly summed up their expectations of the municipal scene in the seventies at Belleville Rotary Club yesterday.

"It is a terrific work load and we should have citizens' committees and mayor's committees," he said. "They have worked in the past and I hope a good group of you will make yourselves available to assist council.

"We have a great deal of work to do and the next three years are going to be vital in terms of how this area is going to go."

Mayor Scott told Rotarians Ald. Alderman Arthur Keegan alone attended 470 meetings last year and if he had gone by taxi he would have been out money.

He said the electorate had selected an excellent council group. Six had been re-elected and there were four new members. Blevills citizens, he said, were well - informed and the news media had contributed to this through extensive coverage of the local scene.

Ben Corke is a new councillor. A member of the local administration some years ago the one - time Fort William resident cited his experience of the area that is now the city of Thunder Bay (following amalgamation with Port Arthur).

It had been a long battle at the Lakehead; but as time went on he suggested the historic boundaries in this area also would have to disappear" and he hoped it would come about with as little ill-will as possible.

Another who sees changes in municipal government is Ald. Arnold Orr.

"With our neighboring municipalities we must look beyond the bounds of our present city . . . to plan for Quinte and the new larger Belleville."

Stressing Belleville's "wonderful potential," Ald. Orr said careful and judicial planning was essential in the seventies.

"We are going to have regional government of some sort and we must plan on a broad basis."

Ald. Robin Jeffrey noted the seventies had already been labelled a decade of tumult and change, but there had been difficult times in the past and from them had emerged a better world.

"That hope," he said, "must sustain us as leaders in the days ahead. The challenge to us is to prepare ourselves through reading, listening and thinking to do our best so we can make a worthwhile contribution to the community."

Ald. Gerald Joyce asked the Rotarians to play a part in creating and presenting a positive community attitude.

"It is terribly important that the entire community feel we have the greatest city in Ontario, and maybe Canada."

He suggested the establishment at city hall of an information bureau for citizens and visitors and urged everyone to be "boosters of Belleville."

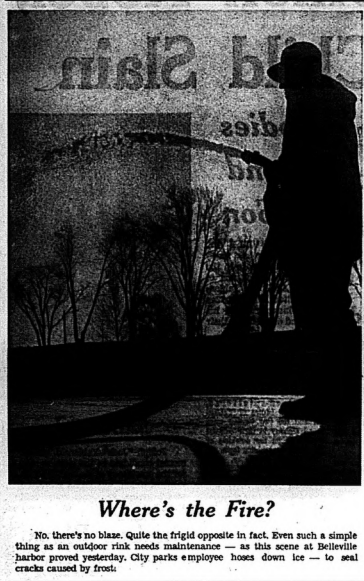
Ald. Keegan said council must adapt itself to changing times. The city faced a great many problems but Belleville had been moving ahead.

Ald. Jean Smith said she proposed to recognize at the municipal level such issues as pollution, the needs of youth, discrimination and poverty.

"These are not new, but they have gained tremendous priority."

Paul Russell said he had gone to city hall with an independent, individualistic policy embracing a basic support of the Mayor's policy while at the same time offering constructive criticism.

"I think I have done that in the last two years and will do so in the future."



Ald. Donald Soutter called for additional progressive programs in the sphere of recreation, for the period immediately ahead as well as on a long-term basis. It would be a program linked with the parks program and the community's educational facilities.

Mr. Soutter said that in 1969 the recreation and arena program used up only $33 of every $1,000 of city revenue, or $2.27 per capita. He believed this figure might be increased without sacrificing with the overall use of tax dollars by the city.

Veteran councillor Enos Dafoe brought humorous reaction with the briefest of messages.

"I am sure members will be glad to hear that as I am getting over flu I am not going to say anything."

Rotary president Bob Lansing told the council members they were welcome to come and address the club anytime. Participation, he said, was the theme of Rotary International President James F. Conway.

Where's the Fire?

No, there's no blaze. Quite the frigid opposite in fact. Even such a simple thing as an outdoor rink needs maintenance — as this scene at Belleville harbor proved yesterday. City parks employee hoses down ice — to seal cracks caused by frost.

Pollution A Theme

Belleville Farm Conference

The problem of pollution and whether it is being aggravated by agricultural practices, will be one of the main topics of discussion at the Quinte Farm Conference scheduled for Belleville next week.

The two-day session will be held at Club Canara on Wednesday, Jan. 14 and on Friday Jan. 16. On Jan. 13 and Jan. 15 the East Central Farm Conference will be held at the Ontario Government building at Lindsay.

At the Belleville conference Jan. 14, Dr. Murray Miller, department of soil science at Guelph University, will deal with the question: "Is agriculture causing pollution?"

This will be followed by other speakers pondering the theme of "pollutions and solutions."

During the afternoon session Everett M. Biggs, Ontario deputy minister of agriculture, will take a look at perspectives for the seventies, followed by a talk on air pollution by Lindsay agricultural engineer Howard Nodwell.

At the Friday session, discussions will be on "challenges in agriculture" speakers will deal with such topics as land ownership policies, custom-hiring of machinery, and new livestock enterprises.

Panel discussions will be held both days with George Atkins, CBC Toronto as moderator for the panel on pollution, and Phil Flagler of CJBQ as chairman of the panel on agricultural trends.

Pilot Maurice Kuenze slammed on his brakes unnecessarily hard when the aircraft touched down, throwing the knife-wielding man off balance, Starrett said.

Three passengers immediately jumped on him. Starrett said, and overpowered him. The officer identified the passengers as Charles D. Strimple, an off-duty policeman from Wingard, Ohio; Franklin Dale Hall of Orlando, a salesman; and W. J. Hillard of Green Bay, Wis.

Hall's shirt was slashed by the knife during the struggle. Starrett said he had an unconfirmed report Miss Beresford was cut slightly.

IN MEMORIAM

McCOMB — In fond and loving memory of our dear mother Ann McCOMB who passed away Jan. 6, 1964.

The years may wipe out many things,
But they'll wipe out never,
The memories of the happy days,
Which we have spent together.
— Always remembered by daughter Edna and son-in-law Don and family.

JOHNSON — In loving memory of our dear husband and grandfather Ida Mae Johnson who passed away Jan. 6, 1969.

We miss you so much in many ways,
We miss the things you used to say,
We miss the kindness you always gave,
It's hard to bear with deep sorrow,
But God knows best.
— Always remembered by son George, daughter-in-law Betty and grandchildren George, Judy and Ronnie.

SAGER — In loving memory of a wonderful husband and father Howard Sager who passed away January 6th, 1964.

Our hearts still ache with sadness,
And tears flow down our face,
We miss you more each day we bear,
No one will ever know,
How much we miss you yet,
And helps us to forget.
Sadly missed but only proved,
How much we miss you yet,
Lovingly remembered by wife Ethel and family.

We seem to hear you whisper,
We know you miss us so,
Each time we see your picture,
We miss you more and more,
Don't cry I'm only sleeping,
I'll meet you on the other shore.
— Lovingly remembered by your sister-in-law Kay and Mary, son-in-law Jack and family.

CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Livern Wright wish to express sincere thanks to relatives and friends for flowers, cards, and kindness shown during the illness and passing of a loved one, husband and father, also for the donations received to the Heart Fund. A very special thank you to Dr. Gibson and nursing staff at the Belleville General Hospital for their wonderful care and kindnesses. To the Thompson Funeral Home for services and many acts of kindness. To Rev. Roy Veasey for his comforting message at the time of our recent bereavement. To our wife, mother and grandmother Mrs. Gedder Bradshaw and family.

I wish to express my sincere thanks to friends, relatives, neighbors and clergy, also Dr. Gibson and the nursing staff at Belleville General Hospital who so kindly remembered me with cards, gifts and visits during my stay as a patient in Belleville hospital, and on my return home. Special thanks to nurses of the coronary unit for their kind attention.
— Pearl Lovekin

The family of the late Beatrice Revoy wish to express their sincere thanks to all for the many acts of kindness, cards, beautiful floral tributes received in the loss of their dear mother, also donation to the Heart Fund. And special thanks to the management and staff of Green Acres Nursing Home, to the Thompson Funeral Home and to Rev. H. Pacjkowski for his comforting message, at the time of their recent bereavement.

Rapid Expansion Seen For Trenton Area

TRENTON — Mayor Duncan McDonald predicted rapid expansion for this area in his inauguration speech Monday morning at Trenton Community Gardens.

At the same time he said that the problems facing the town and the area are numerous and will take "all the understanding and patience" that can be mustered.

Noting the change in the health, education and assessment systems which are now operated on a county-wide basis, the Mayor added:

"The next step appears to be some form of regional government. No one knows what the boundaries may be. No one knows when it will be, but it will likely come some time after 1975 unless we can devise an acceptable proposal among the local municipalities which satisfies the province."

"The town representatives have met with neighboring municipalities to discuss the problem. We will continue this. Everyone is exploring and probing because we are all looking for the proposal best suited to the individual units," the Mayor added.

"This is a good thing. It makes a better understanding among us and also gives us increased knowledge of the problems and will help us find a better answer. This is one of the advantages of strengthening our civic administration. We will be better equipped to deal with problems that are arising," the Mayor assessed.

Improved services within the town were cited by Mr. McDonald as an attraction to new industry then he called for a balance in the emphasis between industrial development and general community development.

In addition to Mayor-elect Duncan McDonald five other men were sworn into public office at Monday's inauguration ceremonies, held in the auditorium of Trenton Community Gardens.

They were councillors W. R. Patrick, Neil Robertson, George Greer and Ted Parker and Public Utilities Commission member Clifford Baker.

Mr. Baker has been named to a second consecutive term as PUC chairman following a motion by member Frank Barry and the seconding move of the new Mayor, Duncan McDonald.

The usual practice of alternating chairmen was waived by the motion of Frank Barry, the other elected representative off the three man commission.

No Extra Charge

TRENTON — Trenton council received official notice last night from Hastings County Council that the County's homes for the elderly were now open to Trenton residents at no extra charge.

The change in admission policy is brought about by the completion of Hastings Centennial Manor — a 110-bed home for the aged located in Bancroft.

In addition council also received notice that Hastings County Council recommended the extension of Ontario Hospital Services Commission coverage to all nursing homes in Ontario approved by the Commission.

Councillor Ted Parker gave notice of motion to enact a resolution changing the voting schedule so that all council and Public Utilities Commission members would seek election again this fall.

Purpose of this move was to bring about a joint election of council, PUC and Hastings County Board of Education members every two years, beginning in the fall of 1970.

This action was previously agreed upon by the 1969 council of which four members sit on the 1970 council. The present council will act on this resolution at the next regular session of council, January 19.

Trenton Meeting Tonight

McKeough Outlines Planning Choices

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Town council and the town's planning board will hold a joint meeting tonight to assess Department of Municipal Affairs proposals concerning the future design of Quinte - area planning bodies.

In a written submission presented at Trenton council's initial 1970 session Monday evening, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough outlined three possible courses of action.

Mr. McKeough stressed that the three proposals were only of skeleton design and that the real details would have to be worked out later, but he wanted to learn council's preference among the three choices.

Council agreed to advise the Minister that a formal reply would be forthcoming, but in the meantime council and the planning board would study the proposals in depth. Hence tonight's joint meeting.

Of the three proposals the Minister favored the final two, all but eliminating the initial proposal. The proposals he favored were:

(1) Replacement of existing planning boards with three — Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County — with, joint planning committees to try to effect the necessary co - ordination of planning bodies.

(2) Establishment of a joint planning area to embrace Belleville, Trenton and all of Hastings County, with existing planning areas being dissolved or remaining as subsidiary planning areas as may be decided. Belleville, Trenton and Hastings would provide the funds necessary to support a professional planning staff adequate to the task of conducting an effective planning program for the city, county and town.

The initial proposal which was downgraded by Darcy McKeough included: Continuation of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board with possible boundary adjustments (such as the inclusion of Thurlow Township). Revival of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board as a functioning joint planning board with possible boundary extension to include Frankford and part of Sidney Township. Establishment of a new joint planning area for Hastings County with the funds necessary to hire staff or consultants to provide service for the municipalities in this planning area.

Councillor Ted Parker noted that the overall grouping wasn't important to Trenton as long as the town itself had room to grow.

He said that the county boundaries are rapidly becoming obsolete, adding that Trenton was split between two counties and must look in both directions.

A second councillor, Paul Tripp, pointed out that Murray Township was not mentioned and that Trenton must consider it because the two municipalities have a common boundary.

Into the Seventies

Belleville Chamber of Commerce last night entered new decade and elected new executive. Harry Fast, president, is flanked by vice-presidents Frank Murray (left) and J. K. Bradford.

City Chamber of Commerce Names New Executive

With indications of increasing vocal participation in community affairs, Belleville Chamber of Commerce directors last night headed into 1970 with new executive leadership.

More active — and outspoken — interest in civic events was repeatedly emphasized as the group's three-hour meeting selected officers, organized a fresh committee structure, and discussed policy trends for a new decade.

Heading the Chamber for the year are three men with familiar community identities.

New president is Harry Fast CN Rideau area general manager, with a record of active participation in the city's United Appeal and the YMCA.

First vice-president is Frank Murray, Radio Station CJBQ general manager and a former city councillor. Second vice-president is J. K. Bradford, Loyalist College president.

Start of the new decade could bring a review of Chamber activity, the tone of last night's meeting indicated.

Warned Mr. Murray: "This Chamber has to take a long hard look at itself. It's more urgent today than it ever was in the Chamber's history, quite frankly."

Later, he added: "Again it's awfully important that this Chamber be taking an active part in all the decisions that are made affecting the life of our community. And we should not shy away from the political decisions that have to be made in doing it."

The new president agreed.

Mr. Fast said the Chamber represents all spheres of activity within the community.

"The Chamber to me does not represent anything unless it is concerned with civic affairs."

Added new director John Trafford: "You must be involved in the affairs of the city and you must be prepared to take a stand."

Stepped - up participation in provincial and national issues also was debated.

Fred Deacon, a veteran of the Chamber directorate, questioned whether the Chamber was providing adequate service to its membership. He pondered whether it should become more "member-oriented" in its activities.

Core of the Chamber's machinery for participation will be its committee system. Last night directors were appointed to head a series of committees, members of which will be provided from the Chamber's members at large.

Initial committees, and their chairmen, named last night, were: Finance, Frank Hunt; Membership, James Driscoll; Tourism, Jack Mosley; Consumer Affairs, Don Finkle; Special Projects, H. T. Turley; Civic Affairs, John Trafford; Property, Roly Belanger.

REAL ESTATE
KNOW YOUR MORTGAGE OBLIGATIONS

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

They are invariably more than just to make the monthly payments on time, for this particular document represents the lender's security for the money he advanced.

For instance, virtually all mortgages have provisions obligating you to carry adequate insurance so as to protect the leaner's equity in the event of a fire or other calamity.

....You must pay all taxes on the property and maintain the property in good condition. While these provisions are in the mortgage's interest as well, they may be neglected and could conceivably constitute a basis for cancellation of the mortgage.

If you plan a major alteration to the property, you may have to consult the mortgagee and if you create a new addition it usually must be added into the mortgagee's claim on your property.

If the government should pay you money for any part of your property, compensation of the mortgagee must be taken into consideration.

Mortgages require a skilled lawyer's help and his fees will be money well spent. He will explain your obligations beforehand and include any special provisions that may apply.

The Other View

It is not often you hear anything over CBC radio or television that defends Western democracy as distinct from the Communist slant on things.

Virtually always it is the Americans who are the aggressors in the eyes of the student dissenters. Perhaps they have forgotten, or are too young to have known that the United States was invited by the government of South Vietnam to aid it in the fight against Communism.

Perhaps they have never heard of Estonia, Latvia or Lithuania, countries which formerly were independent but have been under Soviet domination since the end of the last war. It is too much to expect the dissenters never to have heard of Czechoslovakia or Hungary, but they choose to ignore the fact that there too, freedom as we know it has been snuffed out.

The arch symbol of course of what Communism means is the Berlin Wall, erected by the East German government to halt the increasing tide of refugees moving to the West, and today a monument to Soviet totalitarianism.

Sunday night students of Queen's University were reminded of these sinister facts about Communism by Paul Fromm, founder of the Edmund Burke society, in the CBC program "Under Attack."

Too many of our young people are completely ignorant of the trappings of Communism, including presumably the young woman student with the red armband who admitted to Mr. Fromm she was a Marxist.

This student asked Mr. Fromm if he knew that everyone in Cuba today received adequate food, shelter and education. It is true indeed that Cuba, despite shortages, has made considerable strides in this direction but she failed to mention that the police state in Cuba is as rigidly Communist as any, that practically the entire population informs on everybody else and that the jails are bulging with political prisoners.

Meanwhile the kind of threat Cuba poses to the Western hemisphere in the propagation of Communist ideals in the Americas has spread to Africa. Tanzania for one has a leftist government .Now it has been joined by The Congo republic which on December 31 proclaimed itself a "popular republic" adopted a red flag with the hammer and sickle in the centre and made the Internationale its national anthem. It is another victory for international communism — another reason why Western democracy must look to its defences.

Chasing Those Blues

"Christmas blues" is a state of depression known to many. It hits hardest those who are away from home or have no family or friends during the holiday season, not to mention the rest of the year Everybody else is having a good time, and that accentuates the gloom of those who are not.

Suicide is not uncommon at such times, particularly in the big cities. In small centres like Belleville, however, few, happily, resort to suicide an extreme. In any event the Lifeline people in this city, which with Sudbury was the first in Canada to initiate this Australian concept of telephone counselling, report that the number of calls received during Christmas week decreased sharply compared with the the remainder of the year.

The conclusion of course is that people are so busy at such a time that worries tend to recede into the background. Perhaps even the "very lonely" ones who did call Lifeline can take heart. The busier you are the better life can be. Moreover, life is interesting in proportion to the interest you give it. It does help of course if you also have family and friends.

25-cent Coffee

Well it has happened — albeit quicker than we had anticipated — the price of coffee has been raised to 25 cents. No not in Belleville, but in some restaurants in downtown Toronto.

We mentioned recently that a supermarket here, possibly the last bastion of the 10-cent cup of coffee (and it was even a gimmicky nine cents for a while), had jacked its price up to 15 cents.

We warned also that maybe the time to start worrying about inflation was when a cup of coffee reached 25 cents. Now it has happened. in Toronto at least, and who knows where it will end?

A Case of Mutual Disenchantment

Stanfield And The Non-Liberal-NDP Silent Majority

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — If Official Opposition Leader Stanfield sometimes feels he has less than enthusiastic support from some of his back and even front benchers in the Commons — and he does he should realise the feeling is mutual.

Some conservatives (and spell it with the lower case "c") have felt that he was elected to speak for the non-Liberal-NDP silent majority both inside and out of Parliament.

But many of these same supporters — especially from the West and the Maritimes—have the uneasy feeling he has not been doing quite the job they expected.

And this, say these Atlantic and Prairie provinces parliamentarians, goes alike for them and many of their constituents.

Among the voices of conservative concern in the Commons that have been heard in public include those of Maritime MP Robert Coates and Western MPs Jack Horner. Richard Russell Southam, Walter Dinsdale, Steven Paproski, who have voted on opposite sides to Stanfield on a number of basic questions.

They are only a few of the Conservatives who have publicly parted company with Stanfield on some of the more burning issues: capital punishment, homosexuality, abortion, cost-of-living gains, guaranteed annual income.

(In the disillusionment of some of his followers, Stanfield is not exactly lonely—for Prime Minister Trudeau is disappointing many of his followers, more than keeps him company.)

What is this non-liberal-NDP majority in Parliament and across the country that Stanfield was supposed to rally and lead?

Call it the non-marching, the non-protesting majority.

It is silent only in the sense that it does not scream and tear its hair. But that does not mean it does not vote. And few in Parliament think about it.

In the main, it seems to prefer to sit quietly at home, read a best-seller or watch Bonanza or Hockey Night in Canada on the book-tube while nursing a six-pack of suds or a couple of hard stuff on the rocks.

It is sometimes called the crab-grass set.

It has had no place politically to go in these last five years or so, and it has seen what it thought were its rights eroded by permissive government and over-indulgent opposition who have done little or nothing but the march of the peaceniks, the anti-Americans, the hippies, the drug culture, the draft-dodgers, the pornographers and those who sit-in, teach-in, bomb-in, bum-in, and generally tear things up in the sacred cause of dissent and protest.

All the anti-marchers, non-demonstrators, non-bellraisers are expected to do is pay more and higher taxes to support the ever more elusive peace, order and good government and pacify those who work to activate the nation's destruct-mechanism. The non-barnburners are expected to look after themselves while the government and opposition worry about the others.

So obsessed wiut this liberal-mindedness Stanfield sometimes has seemed to have been that he can turn on his own supporters in Parliament in fear that they are not showing the proper approved attitude of easy tolerance.

Like the other day, just before Parliament recessed for Christmas, when he rushed out of the Commons to publicly dissociate himself and the party from the observations on immigration by Steven Paproski, Conservative MP for Edmonton Centre.

Mauppinn Minister of Atlantic MacEachen had told the House that immigration from Europe was falling and fresh Asia and the West Indies rising. And doing so with no great alarm.

Paproski said he did not like European immigration declining to a trickle and more than he liked it rising to a flood from Asia and the Caribbean.

He made a point of insisting that his worries were not of race and color, but lust of maintaining a "proper balance."

He was applauded by the Conservative benches.

Sure, he went on, there had been some compensating increase in immigration from the United States . . . but:

"Draft dodgers and deserters," some Conservative MPs chirped in.

Well, sir, you never saw such a panic.

There was apparently a tremor of Conservative fear there could be just a trace of suspicion that Steve Paproski was a "bigot," or a "rod-neck," even a "racist" or, worst of all, a "rightist," as the small "r" liberals like to call those who do not automatically agree with them.

Stanfield hurried out into the corridor of the Commons to tell press and radio that Steve Paproski was speaking neither for him nor the party.

He "welcomed" increased immigration from Asia and the West Indies. And he would oppose any "bar" against it, although none had been suggested by Steve Paproski.

But that is how politically urgent it seems to be that you must never let even the faintest shadow cross your small "r" liberal image.

Understandably, nobody said a word about that $2,000,000 arsand-torch rampage through Sir George Williams University by rioting West Indian students who, presumably, are also "welcome." Nor has there been a whisper about the "missionaries" the Black Panthers have been sending to Canada.

New Cars Should Be Mechanically Perfect

Peterborough Examiner

The 5,000 traffic deaths in Canada each year make it difficult to criticize any type of highway safety campaign.

Nevertheless suspicion attaches to safety propaganda which intimates, if it does not actually say, that all vehicle accidents are caused by reckless or negligent drivers.

Probably the majority are, in whole or part, so caused. But there are other causes: bad weather, poor roads, dangerous bridges, misleading signs and, very importantly — defects in vehicles themselves.

The "loose nut behind the wheel" theory of accident causes can be a cover-up for the real truth that the most careful driver can be ditched by a loose nut in his car.

The number of vehicles which manufacturers have been constrained to recall for safety adjustments in the recent past, is its own comment on the situation.

Costly vehicles, fresh from factories, should not be offered for sale in conditions which require independent inspection to protect their purchasers. Yet some provinces find it necessary to compel such inspection by law.

Feelings of buyers who discover defects, whether glaringly obvious or concealed in brakes or steering systems, are not mollified by the statement often heard from dealers: 'oh, you must expect a few little things wrong with a new car.'

You should expect nothing of the sort. New, expensive, precision machines should reach their purchasers in perfect mechanical condition. Nothing less should be expected or tolerated. Careless driving should not be allowed to form a shelter for careless manufacturing.

Dissenters Please Note

Road Toll Exceeds Vietnam's

Montreal Gazette

In the United States, widespread bad weather cut holiday driving a little, so the highway death toll was lighter than expected. It totalled something more than 600 killed.

In Canada, bad weather was evident, too, but it didn't cut down the death toll. Fifty Canadians were killed in traffic accidents, compared to the 35 to 45 predicted.

North Americans have become fatalistically resigned to such massacres. To see them in proper perspective, it might be wise to recall that American dead in Vietnam now number about 40 a week.

The number killed in Christmas traffic in the U.S. was 15 times that; and even the Canadian figures topped it by 10.

Perhaps it's time the protesters did something about highway safety.

A Poignant Story of Our Times

Wanted to Go It Alone—Youth Dies Violently

From the Hamilton Spectator

All his life Peter Dawson had been a rebel.

From his schooldays onward he resented authority and fought against it continually. There were inevitable brushes with the law and a spell in Guelph reformatory for possession of stolen car parts, but it all served to deepen his resentment.

The Hamilton youth fought his teachers, the police and his parents for the freedom to do what he wanted — live 24 hours of every day.

And by the time he reached 21 he made a pact with his widower father, 60-yearold printer Ernest Dawson of Bold Street, Hamilton.

In exchange for a promise that he would try to lead a more responsible life, Peter was given the freedom he wanted so badly and he left home "to find out what life is all about."

Five weeks later he crashed his battered '55 Chev. in an accident on Highway 6 and emerged, a human wreck.

For seven months he lay in a coma, hovering in a twilight world between life and death with irreparable brain damage, and on Christmas Eve he died . . . without finding out what life was really all about.

"Peter had his troubles" said Mr. Dawson. "He was a young fellow when he got in with the wrong crowd. His mother died in 1953 when he was still quite young and perhaps that sparked him from the home. There is no doubt about it, between us there was the generation gap. it was a very trying time for both of us."

"He was 21 on April 2 and I had this arrangement to go our own ways. We would live apart and Peter would find out what life was all about himself. It was what he wanted and I thought it would be good for him. I thought it would teach him responsibility, having to pay bills and things.

"But," said Mr. Dawson, "he was still wild. He wanted to live 24 hours of each day and he used to go without sleep.

"Then he had the crash. I don't know how it happened. He had a passion for cars and it kept getting him into trouble. He got in with a few guys who weren't too scrupulous and I think he was a sucker."

In the accident, early in the morning of May 17, Peter was the driver of the car with three other young men who were sleeping.

He had control taking a corner near the Airport Road, sideslid 192 feet before crashing through a roadside fence and leaping 50 feet into the air before it crashed.

The three passengers were thrown clear and escaped with injuries from which they all recovered. Peter, strapped inside the car by his seat belt was thrown around and his head battered.

"That was when he really died," said Mr. Dawson. "That wasn't really Peter all those months in hospital. I used to visit him all the time, nearly every day, but he never recognized me. He had his eyes open some of the time and would look around but it was more like a vacant stare. There was no expression on his features, no joy or anything.

"I used to sit and hold his hand and if I tried to move away he would grip stronger as if he wanted somebody to hold onto, but he was so far away. He never regained consciousness.

Peter was cremated. His father requested that instead of flowers, donations be made to the Alienated Youth of Canada, camp fund.

"It seemed the right thing to do," said Mr. Dawson. "There was a Baptist minister who knew Peter and he suggested it. That way maybe it might help prevent somebody else making the same mistakes as Peter."

Senator Kennedy at Inquest

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy walks past newsmen at airport on Martha's Vineyard Island Monday on his arrival from Hyannis Port. The senator testified at inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne who died in his car when it went off bridge on Chappaquiddick Island into a pond last July 18. (AP Photo)

Kopechne Inquest Opens

Kennedy Gets Tale on Record But Not Where All Can Read

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Senator Edward M. Kennedy apparently has achieved what he wanted at the closed inquest into the death of Mary Jos Kopechni: a chance to get all of his story into a public record.

This was apparent from Kennedy's own account of his testimony Monday on the opening day of the inquest and from ground rules laid down by Judge James Boyle.

Leaving the Dukes County courthouse after about two hours of testimony, Kennedy appeared as relaxed and affable as the solemnity of the inquiry permitted. He told reporters not only did he respond to all of the questions asked him, but did so in "the most complete way possible."

"At the end," Kennedy said, "there were a couple of points I thought it would be useful to add to help with the record." He did not elaborate.

Judge Boyle had forbidden witnesses to discuss testimony outside the court.

Kennedy, when asked whether his testimony had paralleled the televised version he offered one week after the July 19 accident on nearby Chappaquiddick Island, said:

"I'd rather not characterize the testimony but I would say yes, substantially."

The manner of the 37-year-old senator who emerged from the old courthouse Monday was in vivid contrast to the pale, haggard figure who came through the same double white doors the last day with a two-month suspended jail sentence for leaving the accident scene and with his political future thrown in doubt.

Kennedy was reported to be satisfied by the three-page rules of procedure announced at the outset by Judge Boyle and made available to the press by the judge lest it "publish that which is conjectural or distorted."

Kennedy's lawyers failed in their bid to be allowed to remain in court while other witnesses testified. They must leave, the judge said, when their witness leaves, and when present they must confine their assistance to advice on constitutional rights and may not cross-examine witnesses.

But the judge added:

"If circumstances arise where, in my opinion, the cause of justice will be served, I will relax this rule. If counsel has additional testimony which will be helpful and material, I will receive it."

This could mean that Kennedy will have the opportunity he privately says he wants most: to introduce the results of scientific testing which he contends will prove Miss Kopechne could have survived less than a minute in the overturned, submerged auto he drove off Dike Bridge into a swirling tidal pool.

John Farrar, who recovered the body of Miss Kopechne next morning, has said that if Kennedy had called for help immediately instead of going to the police nine hours later, the victim could have survived in an air pocket in the car long enough to be rescued.

The judge emphasized that the inquest is not a trial or a prosecution, that he will admit only evidence directly related to whether criminal conduct was involved, rejecting any improper testimony that would harm the reputation of innocent persons, and that the district attorney who requested the inquest, Edmund S. Dinis, was in court not as a prosecutor but to help the court bring out testimony.

Although the witness list has not been made public, it appeared Monday that testimony came from Kennedy, who led off, and two of the five other men who attended an ill-fated Chappaquiddick cookout the night of the accident. Charles Tretter and Raymond LaRosa.

The five surviving Robert F. Kennedy campaign girls who attended the party matched precisely between lines of reporters in the courthouse, but left without testifying.

There was no reliable estimate of how long the inquest would last, although Judge Boyle said in answering a question that he hoped it would end by Friday.

'Help Young Seek New Formulas' Urges Retired Police Boss

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean-Paul Gilbert, Montreal's former police director, has slipped off his badge after 29 years service, but not before handing out a bit of advice.

"The young want to remake society," he said in an interview, "so let's help them as they seek new formulas."

And he has another idea:

"The day has arrived when we must have two categories of policemen."

While police forces would always require men with high education, as in the case of crime investigators and others employed in specialized duties, "the man who patrols the city's streets in a car all day does not need as high a level of education—and need not be paid $8,500 to $9,500 a year."

The former director, whose duties were taken over Jan. 1 by Marcel St. Aubin, said he was not suggesting a second class citizen status for patrolmen in cars and on the beat.

"I am merely saying that another category of police officer could do these jobs—just like the medical profession has its doctors, nurses, nurses' aides and orderlies.

"They are all working toward the same aim, yet have varying degrees of education, responsibilities and salaries," he said.

During his four years as head of Canada's biggest municipal force, Mr. Gilbert has failed to convince authorities that men who wear eyeglasses should automatically be prevented from joining the force.

"We lose as much as 60 per cent of our prospective recruits only because they wear eyeglasses."

As a police officer who holds a master's degree in criminology, he feels a police director's duties consist of more than ensuring the protection of life and property and the enforcement of laws.

"While now neglecting his primary responsibilities," he said, "a police director also must think of the over-all problems of society."

His recommendations of special squads to handle specific problems were against the recommendations of two European police experts when the Drapeau-Saulnier administration had brought to Montreal at great expense in 1961 to "modernize" the force.

Following a rash of incidents involving motorcycle gangs in the Greater Montreal area, Director Gilbert formed a squad of police officers who keep in daily contact with motorcycle clubs in order to channel their energies.

Since the motorcycle squad was formed about a year ago, local battles between motorcycle gangs have become almost non-existent. In the corner of one police station, police have stored chains, clubs, and the like which they seized or which were turned in by motorcycle gangs.

Canada May Swap Old Voodoos for New

OTTAWA (CP) — A plan to swap Canada's CF-101B Voodoo interceptors for an improved version of the same United States-designed aircraft has been drawn up by the defence department. A cabinet decision on the proposal is expected within a month or so.

Informed sources say the plan would see virtually the entire fleet of Canada's approximately 56 continental defence interceptors.

They would be exchanged with the U.S. for a like number of the same family of aircraft, but with improved electronic and weapons systems.

Provision also has been made for the addition if possible of additional aircraft to bring the inventory up to around 66, the original number acquired from the U.S. in the early 1960s.

PM Skiing, Biafra Decision May Be Postponed

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will not be here for Wednesday's scheduled cabinet meeting at which aid for hungry Biafrans may be discussed.

Informants said Monday the prime minister is not expected back in the capital until the weekend.

He arrived in the French Alps Monday for a skiing holiday after a week of skin-diving on the British Honduras coast of the Gulf of Mexico.

Aides said Mr. Trudeau will be doing as much work as skiing.

Biafra Calls U Thant's Suggestion 'Meddlesome'

GENEVA (Reuters) — A spokesman for the secessionist Nigerian state of Biafra was quoted Monday as describing as "meddlesome and unconstructive" a solution to the Nigerian civil war suggested by United Nations Secretary-General U Thant on Sunday.

Thant had appealed to Biafran leader Odumegwu Ojukwu to conform to the Organization of African Unity resolution calling on the two sides in the civil war to recognize the integrity and sovereignty of a federal Nigeria.

Thant was speaking in Dakar, Senegal, during a tour of 10 West African countries.

Markpress, Biafra's Swiss-based public relations firm, quoted the Biafran spokesman as saying:

"As U Thant knows, this requires that we enter negotiations on the basis of again becoming part of so-called 'One Nigeria.'

"And as he also knows all too well, negotiations under this unrealistic condition are not really negotiations at all.

"What he said is tantamount to asking for our unconditional surrender, without any guarantee for security or safeguards which would prevent the federal Nigerians from resuming the massacres which led to our secession."

Force No Solution

VANCOUVER (CP) — Former CBC television newsman Stanley Burke says attempts to reach a military solution to the civil war in Biafra are as insane as trying to solve Canada's bicultural problems by force.

"Could we solve our problem by killing 12,000 French-Canadians?" He asked the morning congregation Sunday at Christ Church Cathedral.

Mr. Burke said at least 2,000,000 Biafrans have died in 2½ years of fighting.

He called on Canadians as individuals to express opposition to the war and to increase their donations to church agencies flying food and medical supplies into Biafra.

He was accompanied to Europe by Marc Lalonde, his principal secretary, and they plan to get through a lot of paper work before their return.

Informants said Mr. Trudeau may take a number of important decisions on planned government moves about inflation and on parliamentary business for the Commons session, which resumes next Monday.

The Commons took a long holiday from July 28 to Oct. 22 and adjourned again Dec. 19 for a three-week Christmas and New Year's holiday.

Mr. Trudeau took a Mediterranean holiday in September and a few days off in New York in November.

Priority has been given to cabinet discussion of the request by Canairelief for $400,000 a month for three months to help meet expenses of its night delivery flights into Biafra. External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp is acting prime minister.

The cabinet originally promised Canairelief a reply by Dec. 26, but on Christmas Eve told the organization the holidays should preclude an immediate decision.

There is no indication that the cabinet will reach a decision Wednesday. It has asked Canairelief for more details to support its request for $1,200,000.

Friendly Police Offering Free Tests of Breath

TORONTO (CP) — If you think you've had a few too many and you're afraid to drive home because of the compulsory breath analysis test, all you have to do in Toronto is drop in and ask your friendly neighborhood police station for a free test.

So advised a duty officer at Metro traffic division Monday. And, he added, if the test proved you were too drunk to drive, no charges would be laid against you.

"If a man walked into the station and said 'I've been drinking and I want to know if my driving is impaired,' he would be given a voluntary breathalyzer test," the officer said.

"If a guy has enough sense to do that, we're not going to prosecute him. He'd probably be told to go around the corner and get a cab."

Only a few lawyers and doctors have asked to take the test, he said, but they had been driven to the station by someone else.

Sun's History May Be Written in Moon Rocks

HOUSTON (AP) — A history of the sun may be permanently recorded in the rocks of the moon, say two scientists attending a lunar science conference.

Dr. Robert M. Walker of Washington University, St. Louis, and Dr. J. R. Arnold of the University of California at San Diego said Monday radiation streaming from the sun leaves minute traces in the rocks.

Walker and Arnold made separate reports on studies they conducted on Apollo 11 moon samples. They are among a group of 142 scientists who have examined the rocks and soil brought back from the moon by Apollo 11.

Walker's study of the rock under mag... ation after treating it with acid etch shows tracks created by the impact of solar radiation. The atmosphere prevents this from occurring in earth rocks.

"We have never been able to do this before," said Walker, "and it's unique to the moon and it opens a new area of scientific research."

Policeman Apologizes for Influence Charge

TORONTO (CP) — An inquiry into allegations that senior police officers helped influential persons avoid impaired driving charges opened Monday with two civilian witnesses denying they sought or received such favors.

The Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission opened the inquiry in the absence of former police constable Peter Lott, whose allegations sparked the investigation.

Commission Chairman C. O. Bick ordered that "the necessary steps be taken to enforce the attendance of Mr. Lott," who was believed to be in the United States.

One of the civilian witnesses, George Mace, chief corporation counsel in the Metro Toronto legal department, denied using his influence to avoid an impaired driving charge in 1963.

During a break in the hearing, he received a public apology from Constable Ian Samuel, who earlier testified he had made an error in accusing Mr. Mace of "threatening his way successfully" out of the charge.

Constable Samuel told the hearing he had based his accusation on what others had told him. He said he did not know until Monday that Mr. Mace had been detained in a police station cell overnight and then held at the Don jail until 2 p.m. the following day.

Mr. Mace, whose testimony was supported by five policemen, said he took "great pains" to avoid Dec. 22, 1963, not to say what his position was.

"I wanted to get exactly the same treatment as anyone else," he said.

Mr. Mace added the impaired driving charge against him was withdrawn because of a conflict in evidence in the Crown's case.

Testimony at the hearing showed that Mr. Mace, on the day in question, had been stopped twice by different police officers—the first time for driving through a red light and for a second time for impaired driving.

When the case came to court, the officers involved disagreed on whether Mr. Mace had been impaired. And Magistrate Hugh D. R. Heather requested that the charge be withdrawn, Mr. Mace said.

Asked whether he thought police procedure at the time of his arrest had been correct and he had been properly processed, Mr. Mace replied:

"I certainly was. And if I was trying to influence anybody, I certainly wasn't successful."

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and piles. It relieves pain, itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds the healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very satisfying improvement." Pain was promptly and greatly relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief was reported in cases of long standing, and i ost important of all, results were so thorough that this im- provement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Hemorrhoidal Ointment or Preparation H Suppositories (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

MacDonald Is Facing New Challenge

OTTAWA (CP) — Another challenge is brewing within the Ontario New Democratic Party against the leadership of Donald MacDonald, who beat back James Renwick in 1968, informed sources say.

The dissident feeling that led to the Renwick challenge persists. It means that Mr. MacDonald, 56, may have to fight for his job at the party's fall biennial convention.

It is not yet clear who the challenger will be or if there will be more than one. It is doubtful whether Mr. Renwick, once defeated, will try again—although as the party's deputy leader he has a strong jump-off point.

To those who seek youth as well as a change, Mr. Renwick carries the disadvantage of being in the MacDonald generation. As a result, the challenge could come from a young Renwick friend on the same wavelength, Stephen Lewis, 32, the MLA for Scarborough West.

One complication in a Lewis candidacy is the political future of his father, David Lewis, the NDP's national deputy leader, the elder Lewis is pondering whether to seek the national leadership when T. C. Douglas steps down next year.

The elder's decision could conceivably have some effect on the decision of the son, or vice-versa. Two Lewises running for key party posts might or might not be acceptable to the rank and file.

Walter Pitman, MLA for Peterborough, is also in the right political age and is seen as another possible contender. Beyond him there are a number of other less likely possibilities including Morton Shulman, the millionaire MLA for High Park.

It is not clear yet whether the NDP would be anxious to mix a leadership contest with an election campaign, a possibility if Premier John Robarts decided to test his Conservative administration at the polls this fall.

MR. AND MRS. ROBERT WILKINS

Wilkins — Vincent

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Lillian Georgina Beatrice Vincent, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Morton, Belleville and Robert Torrance Wilkins, Fort William, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Robert Wilkins, Hendrix Lake, B.C. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. A. L. Sutherland. Organist was F. K. Martin and soloist Mrs. Robert Hough, sister of the bride.

The bride, given in marriage by her step-father Loone A. Morton, wore an off-white, full length embossed polyester gown with lilac cot bodice extending to a high neckline, long sleeves and a chapel train. The cathedral length veil featured a crystal and pearl tiara and the veil was edged with white maribu feathers. Her flowers were two orchids surrounded by stephanotis and ivy.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Gordon Crake, eldest sister of the bride. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Robert Schrieder, Mrs. Robert Hough and Mrs. Roger Cote, sisters of the bride, and Miss Jennifer Wilkins, sister of the bridegroom.

The matron of honor and bridesmaids were dressed alike in wide flowing pants of bordered Pucci print of colorful xmel jersey. The blouse had long, full cuffed sleeves and a high collar and the cummerbund was in solid colors. Completing the outfit were silver shoes and ribbons wound through the hair. A spray of three white 'mums was carried on the arm.

Best man was Stephen Wilkins, brother of the bridegroom. Ushers were Chris Eoli, cousin of the bridegroom, Stephen Crake, nephew of the bride, H. Allen Taylor and Frank Schaefer.

For the reception held at Tops Motor Hotel the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a fitted mauve tunic suit, a white felt hat, black shoes and bag and an orchid corsage.

The bridegroom's mother wore a coat and dress ensemble of forest green design outlined in black, black velvet hat, black patent purse and shoes and an orchid corsage.

For the wedding trip, the bride wore a green and black English tweed fitted tunic suit, black patent shoes and bag and a wide-brimmed green felt hat trimmed with a citrus green silk complementing the blouse. An orchid corsage completed the outfit.

Sr. Citizens Organize Glee Club

CAMPBELLFORD — The Campbellford Senior Citizens' Club has organized and promoted from the members a Glee Club. This Glee Club takes an active part in the community in concerts and various programs, visiting the nursing home, singing Christmas Carols and offering their services in many ways. Horn Player with Symphany Orchestra Began Present Career Almost by Accident

EDMONTON (CP) — Gloria Johnson's profession is playing the French horn—an unlikely profession for a woman.

She's the principal horn player for the Edmonton Symphony Orchestra, believed to be the only woman in Canada with that kind of job.

Mrs. Johnson, 25, says it is getting easier for women to be accepted as professional musicians, especially in the United States, where the military draft has affected the availability of young male talent. But tradition is against them, she adds.

"And they are not generally accepted because they act like women," she says. "You must first be a musician-neuter.

"When the rehearsal is over you can be as feminine as you like."

She says it isn't true that you have to be twice as good as a man to succeed—but there must be no question about your ability.

She became a horn player almost by accident.

"My parents were involved in music, and naturally they had me playing the piano since I was four. Just as inevitably, when I was a teen-ager I rebelled against the whole business.

"When I was in high school I decided to take it easy, so I enrolled in a music course. They gave me a trombone, but I saw something I liked better. Being a female of 16, and attracted to the opposite sex, I found one who played the French horn. So I contrived to switch instruments so I could get to sit beside him. And I never did get a date.

"But it all worked out for the best anyway."

It did. Now she is rated one of the best musicians of her type in the country. And she eventually fell in love for real—with a violin player she met while playing with the Winnipeg Symphony. The Johnsons joined the Edmonton Symphony last August.

Prior to her trip to Winnipeg, she had spent four years with the National Youth Orchestra.

This is a spectacular career for one who started so late.

"Of course, with the piano, I had already been involved with music for years so there was no reading problem. Pretty well after my first year of playing I became serious about it, and for three years after that I had to keep proving to my teacher that I wasn't just a silly girl fooling around. I had really to work at it to prove it to other people."

Over the years she has won scholarships to the Toronto Conservatory, graduated with First-Class honors from the University of Toronto, picked up three Music Foundation awards and two Ford Centennial scholarships.

In 1968 she won the CBC Talent Festival and was second the year before. She's a frequent guest artist and soloist for the CBC.

Woman Bus Driver Logs About 700 Miles A Week

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — Grace Kostric is a school bus driver, a job she likens to running a restaurant crossed with a carnival.

Mrs. Kostric logs about 700 miles a week. She totes about 40 students back and forth the 26 miles between Brantford and Hamilton, with stops between. She also drives when they go on field trips.

Her passengers range in age from three up through the teens. They are students at Hillfield-Strathallen Colleges in Hamilton.

Mrs. Kostric and her husband, Edward, live in Hamilton. Her run starts in Brantford at 7:30 a.m. and ends there at 4 p.m. She says it is "a bit spooky" driving the empty bus back to Hamilton at night, but it is lively enough otherwise.

Her passengers distribute cake and candy and hot tea among themselves.

A nine-year-old likes to appear wearing his coat over his head to scare the little kids. Others swing on the poles at the door until she puts a stop to it.

A couple of older boys hooked up a stereo tape recorder in the bus, but Mrs. Kostric had them unhook it. The gigging, swarming, chit-chatting uproar is enough.

"Music-to-bus-by was going a little too far," she says.

Apart from the inventive passengers, Mrs. Kostric says school bus drivers have other drivers to worry about. She says she is astonished at how many people fail to stop when the bus lights are flashing. Once, recently, a truck that couldn't pass the halted bus on the left passed on the right. The children had presence of mind enough to jump into a ditch, but Mrs. Kostic says the truck didn't even slow down, let alone stop.

Men Like Women To Wear Hats

NEW YORK (AP) — "Men like women in hats even more than women do," says the fashion co-ordinator for the Millinery Institute of America's Shape of the Seventies fashion show.

Women have finally escaped from the hat fashions of the 1940s movies, says Helen Gallagher, the show co-ordinator, and today's hats are good-looking, practical and much a part of the total look in fashion.

The show, part of the New York Couture Business Council's National Press Week at the Americana Hotel, presented Sunday five looks for spring, matching hats to outfits.

The millinery show offered hats by Adolfo, Mr. John, Frank Olive, Yves Saint Laurent and Jack McConnell. Dress designers offered complementary outfits.

The "rich hippie" look presented wide-brimmed cowboy hats, padres, panamas and gypsy bands. Frank Olive designed a series of Stetsons from Patti Cappalli's clothes, a shiny, dark blue straw Stetson topping blue velvet pants, gray chiffon shirt and panne jacket combo.

Floppy brimmed straws or turbans were shown with "mobile" look clothes, full of movement from fringe, scarves and floating drapes.

"The turban is good for anyone if she isn't afraid of hiding her hair," Miss Gallagher said.

The "long and lean" look offered wide, soapsy straw hats, small cloches and caps. They were matched with pants and midi-length coats. Jumpsuits and straight-line chemise dresses with hemline interest. "Long and lean" designer Victor Joris said a hat is essential with his clothes.

Tricolor and knit looks were matched by felts and straws.

Two extravagant hats were Adolfo's bridal headdress with "spaghetti" streamers and blossoms and a wide straw with orange blossoms by Mr. John.

Churches Hold Week of Prayer

The first of the Week of Prayer services was held last evening (Sunday) in the Wesleyan Methodist Church with 178 people present. The pastor, Rev. E. LeRoy, led the service and Miss Judy Thompson sang, a selection.

Rev. Laurie Sutherland, president of the Ministerial Association, read two disturbing prayers from a book of prayers by Michael Quoist. One emphasized eating too much, while a third of the world is hungry. Yet Jesus referring to the final judgment, said, "I was hungry, and ye gave Me no meat . . . Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to Me."

The other prayer gave a vivid picture of the shocking housing conditions in areas of our cities: a family of 13 in one room; a drunken father vomiting on the floor. Yet so many praying people are doing so little about it.

The Rev. H. G. Hedley - Smith, Command Chaplain of the Air Transport command at Trenton Air Base, was the speaker. In his message, specially geared to youth, he presented four choices.

The first is the duck's eye view, where one's main concern is getting food. The youth trains to simply make a living and gain prestige.

The second is the approach to life of the young radical — the cat's eye view. Though going to see the Queen, all the cat saw was a little mouse under the chair. The radical fixes on something as his prey and misses so much of the good and beautiful.

The third approach is that of the hippy who rejects society. He feels that some one has rejected him for something such as the color of his skin. So he despises the respectable. "his is the worm's eye view. It is like looking up a chimney. If a cloud passes over the small opening, he feels that the whole sky is dark.

The fourth and best choice is the way of Jesus Christ. With Him, life is full of joy. Here is fulness of life.

Rev. Stephen Tilley of the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church spoke Monday at Emmanuel Baptist Church, at 8 p.m. On Tuesday, Rev. A. Sheil of Victoria Ave. Baptist speaks at the Free, Methodist: Wednesday, Rev. P. Teti of St. Thomas' Anglican at the Christian Reformed Church: Thursday, Rev. Dr. Harry Davis of Bridge St. United at St. Andrew's Presbyterian.

* * *

At Monday night's Week of Prayer service in Emmanuel Baptist Church, the priority which Jesus gave to prayer in His personal life, was emphasized in the message given by the Rev. Stephen Tilley, speaking from Matthew 14:22. "And when He had sent the multitudes away, He went up into a mountain to pray; and when the evening was come, He was there alone."

"Many people were clamoring for the attention of Jesus. He desired to minister to their varied needs. But He needed for Himself, the strength that comes through prayer. So He sent the people away. For us all, it is better to leave good work undone, than to fail to pray.

Then Jesus went apart to pray. This wasn't easy for Jesus, with so many people seeking Him.

Jesus was alone. Not even His disciples were with Him. They had set out across the lake. As one reads the record of subsequent events, it is evident that this time spent alone with the Father, was profitable. Prayer is the greatest of all ministries. Yet, how sadly neglected today."

The pastor, Rev. Charles Savage, led the service and the choir rendered a number in song.

Tuesday's service is being held in the Free Methodist Church with the Rev. Arthur Sheil as speaker.

Reader Shares Letter Written 22 Years Ago

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently my mother passed away. I was going through her belongings and found a letter she had written to me 22 years ago. She never gave me the letter. Why, I will never know. I would like to share it with you. Perhaps you may wish to share it with your readers. Sign me — A FAITHFUL READER FROM MONTREAL.

Dear Daughter: It may seem strange for a mother to write a letter to a four-year-old child asleep in the next room. This letter won't mean anything to you now, but perhaps it will mean something later when you have a child of your own.

ANN LANDERS

When you were an infant and the newness wore off, I couldn't wait until you grew up. At first I found myself wishing, "If only she'd start walking — and then — "If only she'd start talking . . ." One day I realized you were out of diapers. You were walking and talking, and pretty soon you'd be going off to school.

I remember the morning your father and I brought your baby sister home from the hospital. You and I had been apart six days. When the door opened I saw you standing there, with your angel smile. You seemed so big compared to the baby I was holding in my arms. It was hard to imagine that you were once that small. I suddenly realized how much of your babyhood I had wished away. It made me ashamed. My heart almost broke.

I cannot relive those first four years, but I have been trying to make them up to you, and to myself. I hope and pray that when your first child is born you will be more mature than I was. I hope you will enjoy every phase of your child's growing up and not wish they would hurry and pass.

You and I will have our share of headed words and angry battles in the years to come. There will be days when we just can't please each other. I will wish we were through with high school so I could send you to college and be rid of you. And then I will think back to that dear little face in the doorway and my anger will melt. I will realize you never again will be as young as you are at this particular moment.

Life rushes by too rapidly, my darling daughter, especially the lovely days and the beautiful times. Be wiser than I. Don't let a single moment skip away unsavored or unappreciated. All my love — Mother.

DEAR MONTREAL READER: What a treasure! Thank you for sharing. I saw myself in your mother's letter and I shall phone my daughter today to make sure she reads it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Although you have never come right out and blasted May - December marriages, you've never endorsed them.

Don't you realize age means nothing anymore? It's virtually impossible today to tell if a woman is 20 or 33. The same goes for men, now that hair tinting, toupes and face lifting are so popular.

One of the most exciting May - December romances in history was the Peaches and Daddy Browning marriage. Why don't you tell your readers about it? It should give all men hope. — BOCA RATON, FLA.

DEAR BO: Hope for what? A trip to the poor house?

Edward Browning was 51 when he met Frances "Peaches" Heenan at a sorority dance. She was 15. They were married on her 16th birthday. The marriage lasted less than a year during which time she spent approximately $1,000 a day in New York department stores.

Successful Living

Many Readers Supply Lines for Poem

By DORIS CLARE

Readers — in great numbers — have identified "I took a day to search for God", for us. And here are some of the comments:

Bliss Carman's "Vestigia", which contained this line, is one of my favorite poems. I have often used it in sermons and I think it was good of you to draw people's attention to it. Rev. G. H. H.

—I have this poem in an old book (probably out of print now) "Living Creatively", by Kirby Page. It is a greatly cherished anthology of readings from many authors and many ages in history.

I often clip bits from your column. A Constant Reader.

—I hope you will pardon my mistakes in copying "Vestigia", as I'm an old lady of 78 and rushing around on the eve of a party. West is visiting my only child for Christmas. F. A. B.

—If you or your correspondent is a lover of nature and nature's poems, get Bliss Carman's books. O. L. H.

—I heard Bliss Carman recite his own poems in one of our U Theatres on Broadway a long time ago now. E. C.

Dear Rev. G. H. H., Constant Reader, F. A. B., O. L. H., E. C.: and others:

Your many copies gratefully received. Now I can pass them out where they are asked for — and to any others writing in, enclosing 19 cents and a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Dear Doris: I would like those recipes that came out of the Depression era. I was fortunate enough to have never had to live through the Dirty Thirties, but being a history student as well as an amateur cook, I have a definite interest in this, and for that matter, anything else pertaining to life during that time.

I for one am certainly glad that you have your column in our local paper. It must give you considerable joy and satisfaction to be able to help so many people. A Winnipeg Reader.

Dear Reader: Then you will have enjoyed the letters recently published from persons who did live through those trying times and came out on top. We'd like to hear from more of them, and when we do, we'll pass along copies to you — especially any recipes that an amateur cook would enjoy.

Do you have any specialties you would like to share?

Confidential to Jan Wonderful: Naturally your bust measurement would decrease along with the rest of you. Bring it a little slower with the dieting and use that part of the 25 cent leaflet "Be Figure Perfect" which suggests routines "For Improving Up Front". But I can't send it to you without a name or address.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Quick Frypan Supper

By MARY MOORE

When I have a surefire recipe such as I have today for you, I hardly think this will strengthen our bond of friendship and decide that we must make a heavy run of the original release.

It is a frypan supper, preferably electric, that requires a full 25 min. to cook but only about 5 min. to combine.

I made it in front of a Parents Without Partners meeting and they were gracious enough to lap it up. They bought little tickets for 3 for 25 cents to draw for the finished contents. The aroma of the cooking pervaded the hall. The door average two-parent families will enjoy this too.

CHICKEN PILAF

NOTES: 1) This may be made in advance. 2) This method of giving you the recipe is copied verbatim from my guide notes as I made the dish from the platform.

1) Turn on electric frypan to high and melt ½ cup butter (or margarine)

2) Add 2 cups cooked chicken cut in pieces and 2 thsps. bottled onion flakes. Saute to soak onions with butter. Do not burn.

3) Add 2 tsps. salt; ¼ tsp. pepper; ½ tsp. oregano; 1 cup raw long grain rice. Stir well with Sportle (a wooden Japanese stirring paddle, recommended if your frypan is Teflon coated).

4) Add 2¼ cups chicken stock (from boiling chicken); 1 cup canned tomatoes. Stir. Cover and reduce heat and cook 20 min. Do not stir.

5) Add ½ cup nuts — cashews, blanched almonds, etc. and heat through. Serve.

Dinner Menu

Beef Croquettes with Spanish Sauce; Pan Fried Potatoes; Spinach; Shredded Romaine Lettuce with Roquefort Dressing; Peach Shortcake with Whipped Cream; Coffee.

Mother: "If you would get at your homework as soon as you come home from school, you wouldn't have to stay up and do it when it's time to go to bed."

Son: "They give us too much homework."

Your child may need help in planning a homework schedule. If he seems to be bogged down constantly, suggest that he break his work schedule into smaller sections. However, it may be unreasonable to expect him to get right in and start studying immediately after a long day in school.

The New Winter Sport

PICTON — The pass word is "no go" for snowmobiles in two Prince Edward county provincial parks.

A lands and forests spokesman said this morning that signs prohibiting snowmobiles now are posted at the Sandbanks Park and North Beach Park. The reason for the ban in these areas relates to reforestation projects being carried out in both parks.

At Outlet Beach provincial park, snowmobiles are welcome if they follow park rules. Snowmobiles may travel park roadways but are not permitted in camping areas or on the beach. Winter sportsmen planning a party at Outlet Beach are asked to contact the park office first.

Snowmobilers leave their names with park employees and in this way, if the rules are broken, the offender can easily be traced.

A spokesman at Outlet Beach Park commented this morning that organized snowmobile parties seldom cause trouble. They usually request use of the park in advance, specifying the number of snowmobilers coming in for a spin, he said.

The "strays", according to the spokesman, are the ones most likely to break the rules. These snowmobilers trickle in, one or two at a time, playing tag through the park, heedless of regulations. This, suggested the park employees, is the sort of conduct that could eventually ban all snowmobiles from Outlet Beach Park.

'My World' Can Please Or It Can Be Horrible

NEW YORK (AP) — Whimsy is a dangerous commodity to fool around with. When it is good, it is irresistible. But when it is not working, it chills the viewer in his easy chair.

There are some nights when My World and Welcome to It, one of the season's braver efforts, is full of rich, wry humor and oblique comment on the human condition. Then there are nights, like Monday, when the comedy curdles into bad slapstick.

The principal characters and the general format of the NBC series are always the same — perhaps writers, or directors or a change in climate do something to the show. A week ago Monday it was a tenderly amusing story about two little boys fighting over the little Monroe girl, the one with the braces. And William Windom, in his Thurberesque role of male parent, was perfect.

This week it was a crazy and markedly unfunny flashback to Monroe pere's childhood, his nightmares and his somewhat kooky family. It just didn't work at any point, including the old aunt who thought she was being chloroformed by night by prowlers or the other one who tossed shoes. And the appearance of producer Sheldon Leonard as the ghost of a gangster didn't add anything, either.

After languishing somewhere in the middle of the Nielsen ratings list through most of this season, the Ed Sullivan premiere show with his star-studded cast jumped up to second place in the report for the week ending Dec. 21. Bob Hope's special was first, and The Dean Martin Show third.

Glen Campbell's hour in its new Sunday time period was in fourth place. Hee Haw, CBS's mid-season entry, wound up No. 15 in the popularity poll. NBC won in the average ratings, garnering 20.9 to CBS's 19.9 and ABC's 13.7.

What better way of starting the new business of the club than to attend the general meeting on Thursday, Jan. 8 and help elect the candidates of your choice. Dominion President, J. C. Lundberg will conduct the election and the installation of the 1970 executive body. After the ceremonies are completed the meeting will be adjourned to the lower lounge where a social get together will be held with entertainment and refreshments doubles two very popular events and shuffleboard tournaments are well in hand. The Friday evening socials, another popular feature, also get off to a good start. Plans are being formulated for a St. Valentine's Ball in February to kick off the early spring festivities. Tickets will be limited.

The year ended with a note of sadness when it was learned, Cdr. R. Mondeville had passed away. The Unit extends its sincere sympathies to his bereaved family. The following members are on the sick list. In the Belleville General Hospital, J. Fisher, 715 and J. Clarke, 511. Get well at home are cdes. S. Smith, J. Batchelor, R. Mallory, Scouty Wilson, A. Brown and S. Feather.

The chairmen will be looking for comrades to serve on their committees so if you possible can help, it is hoped that you will accept, as it looks like a busy year.

The second half of the activity events are again in full swing. Saturday men's duckets and the darts mixed doubles, now making plans to assist the winter carnival, slated for the first weekend in February.

The Ladies were particularly active during the Christmas season. The firemen received $75 toward providing treats for public school children and their younger brothers and sisters when Santa Claus visited the school in a firetruck instead of a sleigh. Usually they send a personal gift to each former Deseronto resident now in Hastings Manor. This year each received the same type of remembrance, a crysanthemum plant.

Christmas hampers went to nine homes and fruit went to all four nursing homes, or homes where pensioners are the boarders.

Three special causes were assisted this year. A Deseronto secondary school student was awarded a scholarship of $75; $100 was contributed to the Deseronto Biafra Relief fund; and, at a cost of $250, a resuscitator was purchased for the police department, to be kept in the police cruiser.

Deseronto Lions Club Projects

DESERONTO — The Deseronto Lions Club is continually being good with the funds it raises at its weekly bingos But for a club of only 28 members it has accomplished wonders in the past six months.

Its never - ending project is to assist those with poor eyesight. Cases in which it would be a hardship for the parents to furnish a child with glasses, are reported to the Lions Club by the school nurse, and these are provided. There have been ten such cases this year. Also, one child was provided with a hearing aid.

The recreation committee has received a great deal of assistance. The ball park at the old high school was fitted for use, and was a busy place all summer. They paid for fill, grading and equipment worth $500 and also furnished 15 sweaters for the Little League baseball team. Minor hockey was given $200. So far they have made no cash donation toward the community centre open - air rink, but are

The Lions Club owns and maintains a hall which it uses only one evening a week. Thursday night it is the scene of the bingo game. Even that night it is helping the Girl Guides. The club purchases the soft drinks, and the Guides sell these and keep the proceeds. This club sponsors the guides, brownies, the cubs and the sea scouts.

The hall is in use every evening during the week, and also many afternoons for church bazaars or teas, or for activities of other organizations. The Salvation Army has no other meeting place. This summer a new front was built on the hall, and paint for the exterior was purchased and will be applied next summer.

Officers elected last June are: president, George Lyons, vice-president, Marlene Kimmell; secretary, Eric Gustafson; treasurer, Harry Rands; tail twister, Bob McCarthy; and lion tamer, Arthur Smith Chairman of the welfare committee responsible for the Christmas projects is Gerald Lott.

Post Office To Close

TWEED — The post office at nearby Actinolite, will close officially on January 12, 1970, and beginning Tuesday, January 13 the mail will be dispatched from Tweed post office by way of RR 3, Tweed.

This will give them a six day week service, and will replace the 3-day a week service originating from the post office in Actinolite.

The Village of Actinolite will be serviced by group boxes. The volume of mail received and dispatched from the Tweed post office during the pre-Christmas season was up considerably over past years. From December 8 to 24 inclusive, the Tweed post office handled a large selection of mail.

J. W. Lye, the Postmaster at Tweed, stated he was pleased with the co-operation and assistance received from the citizens of Tweed and district, who mailed their cards and packages early.

About 80 per cent of the mail posted had been received at the Tweed post office by December 17. He also expressed thanks for the way the mail had been separated using the local and out-of-town labels, as had been suggested and requested early in December. This had been a great help in the prompt dispatch of the mail the pest master stated.

The UIC in Belleville

A Mammoth Federal Filing Chore Is Local Economic Boon

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's economy has been given a stimulating shot in the arm to start the new year.

Filing is the name of the game — a monumental job awaiting 200 temporary employees now being sought by the regional office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission here.

Because of the nature of the vast government insurance operation, the work load peaks seasonally — usually in January and February, at the beginning of the government fiscal year in April, and again during the summer. These are the times UIC sends out a call for what amounts to a small army of casual employees to help with the paper work.

Through Canada Manpower, UIC is currently seeking about 30 people to work from 4:30 to 11, five nights a week, from the middle of January through February. Already, some 70 people have been hired for the day shift during the same period.

"We expect to receive 3,000-400 bulk payment forms from employers during the month," says Ben Katzman, regional contributions officer, who is in charge of filing the record of unemployment insurance payments for every worker in Ontario.

"If the records are not put into the files accurately and quickly, the payment of claims could be jeopardized," he explained.

Hence the need for 200 people to file the contribution forms — at the rate of 100,000 a day.

Handling of unemployment insurance records for some 10,000,000 Ontario workers must still be done by hand. According to Mr. Katzman, no existing computer can process the records with the speed now required for quick service on claims.

The casual employees hired for day - time work will sort the incoming record forms and the night - time employees will file them in proper sequence in the rows of cases lined up in the UIC office.

Russ Garmise, personnel officer with UIC hopes to fill the 120 night staff vacancies with high school students.

"But working every night from 4:30 to 11 is quite an imposition on a student with homework to complete each night as well," he remarked.

UIC officials sounded out area educators and a sampling of parents before beginning to recruit students, and found them in agreement with the short term employment project.

"Since we came to Belleville we have been pleasantly surprised at the quality of people available to us," Mr. Garmise said.

UIC's policy of hiring 10 per cent more casual staff than needed for a temporary job as a cushion against absenteeism, those who fail to show up for work, may go by the board in Belleville. Reliability of workers here is making the 10 per cent cushion obsolete.

"One of four reasons for coming into this area was the feeling we could get good staff," noted UIC's regional director, J. Lester Stevens.

So far, the evidence has borne out the assumption. Eventually, UIC officials hope to build up a pool of trained workers who will be on call for temporary work at peak seasons.

Already, Mr. Katzman is looking beyond the present filing load to April when he expects a further 1,000,000 records to file. This summer he expects to employ more than the 65 casual workers, mainly students, that he hired last summer.

Welcome Wagon Wheels In Warmth of A Community

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

They have tried to do a thorough job of boosting Belleville for the past 25 years — and are still hard at it.

With a warm smile and a hand extended in greeting, the Welcome Wagon Hostess — a familiar figure to newcomers all over the North American continent — makes another family feel at home.

And just about every family in Canada has had to move to a new city once, and in the process have been made to feel more at home by a Welcome Wagon Hostess.

Senior hostess of Welcome Wagon for the Belleville area Mrs. Laura Hagerman, will tell you that between herself and her two assistants, Mrs. Jane Dean and Mrs. Anne Acton, they have greeted 400 new families during the past year.

Mrs. Hagerman, who has worked as a Welcome Wagon hostess for the past 21 years, is a veteran of thousands of friendly greetings to newcomers in the city.

When she goes calling, she extends personalized greetings on behalf of the business, civic, religious, cultural and social service organizations in Belleville.

The organization was conceived as a modern expression of the hospitality that was an integral part of the life of the early settlers in the city.

"It is this spirit of helpfulness and warmth of heart that embodies the ideals of Welcome Wagon," explained Mrs. Hagerman.

"Essentially the basic principals and foundation of this organization are contained in a well-organized program of co-operation with church, civic, social and welfare interests within the community."

In welcoming newcomers to the city, each hostess brings with her the symbol of good wishes, the Welcome Wagon basket — full of gifts and personalized greetings from the business houses in the community.

"We have about 35 sponsors from the business community at the present time, and I try to tell the newcomer a little about each. Simple things like the nearest drug store e a n cause confusion when you do not know anyone, or your way around in a new city. In this way we try to make the way a little smoother," said Mrs. Hagerman.

Hostesses are often queried by recipients as to how they secure names of community newcomers.

"We have various sources," said Mrs. Hagerman. "Usually our sponsor firms are the largest and can usually give us three or four names at one time. Sometimes it is simply a case of seeing a moving van in front of a house, and stopping to see if the family is coming in or going out."

However, a Welcome Wagon Hostess must be qualified before she can even begin to extend friendly greetings.

Mrs. Hagerman took part in training classes, and received her diploma certifying her as a Welcome Wagon Hostess.

She described the qualities necessary to be a hostess, emphasizing that, above all else, "you have to like people".

"Of course you need to have lived in the particular area, and know it reasonably well. The hostess must find people interesting, as well as having some business background, too."

"In other words, it is an asset to know a little bit about everything. It helps to be a walking encyclopedia," she added.

"And, of course, keeping your eyes and ears open for newcomers — at all times."

Local Clerks To Meet

WOOLER — Angus Gunter, clerk - treasurer of Murray township, will attend the Jan. 15 Zone 5 Association of Municipal Clerks and Treasurers of Ontario meeting in Belleville.

Representatives from seven counties — Haliburton, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Prince Edward, Northumberland - Durham, Peterborough and Victoria — and the district of Muskoka are expected to attend the meeting which will commence at Hastings County Court House.

A forum will be the means of discussing problems and the program will emphasize: Provincial assessment, its changes and effects, and advantages and disadvantages of interim tax billing.

The two area assessment directors Robert Craig and Carl Madgett, will discuss their program with relationship to each municipality.

A representative from the Department of Municipal Affairs Assessment branch will explain equalization factors.

Paul Spears, Department of Municipal Affairs, Peterborough office, will moderate a panel of local treasurers discussing interim tax billing.

This will relate to new amendments to education legislation whereby municipalities must pay educational levies on a quarterly basis.

City's Santa Parade Is Reorganized

A revitalized Santa Claus parade committee could be the result of a meeting last night at the Quinte Emergency Measures Organization meeting.

Approximately 40 people were present at the meeting which saw a complete turnabout in operating style for the coming year.

As a result there will be an annual meeting in two weeks time, again at the EMO building, to elect officers and start work on the 1970 parade.

In the past, the annual meeting was held in November which enabled only three to four weeks to plan and organize the annual December event.

With plans underway this early in the year the committee will have 10 months to spend in securing funds, planning and organizing the parade.

Following the annual meeting, slated for Jan. 19, the committee will meet once a month to keep tabs on operation.

The committee also presented Don Foster — the man who rescued the 1969 Santa Claus parade from a last - minute cancellation — with $500 to defray his expenses.

Mr. Foster revived enthusiasm for the event, organizing a parade in less than a week.

A Warm Welcome

Welcome Wagon Hostess Mrs. Laura Hagerman extends the mayor's card to Mrs. R. Scully, a newcomer to the Quinte area. Mrs. Hagerman, who has been a hostess for the past 21 years, and her two assistants, have greeted 400 families during the past year — making them feel welcome, and more at home, in the city.

Wooler Inaugurates New Council

WOOLER — Murray township council wasted no time in getting down to business following inauguration ceremonies at the township municipal offices yesterday.

A regular council session — the first of 1970 — followed inauguration ceremonies. Council appointed a community centre board for control, management and maintenance of the township community centre, modernization of which is now nearing completion.

Councillors Stanley Down and Clifford Wannamaker, former reeve Gerald Ross, Doug McKeed and a representative of the Wooler Women's Institute will sit on the five-member Community Centre Board.

The board will report to council and make recommendations on hiring of a caretaker and establishing a system of payment and rentals.

Wooler Women's Institute has agreed to donate 100 stacking chairs, 25 stacking tables, a stove, refrigerator and piano — costing $1,100 — to furnish the revamped facilities.

Estimated cost of the addition and structural alterations and improvements is $22,528.50, of which $12,000 will be raised by the sale of debentures payable from the general rate over a period not exceeding four years.

A planned surplus over the past few years will cover the amount, slightly over $10,500, not included in the debenture. However- council expects to receive a provincial grant amounting to 20 percent of the total cost.

Council re-appointed chairman Doug McMaster to a three year term on the Murray Township Planning Board after considering a second candidate, construction contractor John Wiggers.

Stanley Down and newcomer William Ellis were named as council appointees to the seven-member planning board. They will serve one - year terms.

Control and sale of township lands, which has been subject to criticism by council members, will be reviewed and a new policy adopted by council.

William Ellis will report to council with a tentative policy of township-owned lands. Council will act on this report and also compile a list of township-owned lands. It will also check with the Lower Trent Valley Conservation Authority to see if it is interested in purchasing any land currently owned by Murray Township.

Jan. 14 has tentatively been set as the date for a joint meeting of council and the planning board with representatives of a consulting firm — Municipal Planning Consultants.

The firm has been hired by Durham - Northumberland County to re-organize the county's municipalities into larger units. The firm has proposed that Brighton village, Brighton township and Murray township be amalgamated into one municipality.

Friday, Jan. 23, has been set as the date for the next regular council meeting, but a special session will be held this Friday to hire an auditor, consider the waste demands of township employees, discuss road clearances and sign various authorization forms.

Youtheatre Gets Ready For Busy, Busy Weekend

By BARRY GRILLS

The Belleville Theatre Guild, in conjunction with the Eastern Ontario Drama League, has now readied a full weekend of activity for a conference on youtheatre to be held on Jan. 23, 24 and 25.

The conference is expected to bring approximately 150 adults and young people together in Belleville from all parts of Eastern Ontario.

It is expected that 50 young people and 50 adults will be in attendance for Saturd y's activities and an additional 50 youths for Sunday.

The adult section of the conference on Jan. 24 will cover all aspects of youtheatre from organization to program, plus practical panel discussion on problems of youtheatre in the community.

Th eyouth section will include classes in characterization, concentration and rehearsal techniques. Practical mini-lectures on technical and backstage areas will be given by students connected with youtheatre.

Guest lectures for the event will be Candice O'Connor, Roy Higgins, Gilles Provost and Coralee Elliott.

Registration will begin on Friday at the Hotel Quinte and following that two events are optional for the delegates.

At the Belleville Armories, the Belleville Theatre Guild's Moira River Bottom Blues Festival will begin at eight p.m. featuring Whiskey Howl, Two Minute Hate, Milkwood and Bill the Lizard.

Also on tap that evening will be the current Belleville Theatre Guild production at the Pinnacle Playhouse, Wait Until Dark.

A Saturday night feature will be the Youtheatre Conference Cabaret at the Hotel Quinte's Pinnacle Room. The cabaret will offer conversation and music.

It will allow delegates an opportunity to bring their musical instruments and present entertainment routines.

A youtheatre art exhibition at the Corby Public Library will also be on slate. The project, the first of its kind, will feature set and costume designs, clippings and pictures.

Call For Boosters

PICTON — Down with pettiness, up with progress was Mayor H. J. McFarland's theme in his opening remarks at town council's first session of the new year.

Remarked the mayor, "I've said it so many times I'm almost sick of saying it, but we've got to stop our petty jealousies and work together. Let's all boost Prince Edward county."

The mayor spoke enthusiastically of the county's future industrial growth, referring to Fiascetti Aircraft's location here last year. He predicted that other industries will follow in its footsteps. He again referred to continuing negotiations between the provincial and federal governments concerning the future of the remainder of the former Camp Picton property.

The mayor "bridged the years" of the coming decade, suggesting a bridge to link Prince Edward county, Amherst Island, Wolfe Island and New York State.

"It may only be a dream right now", he observed, "but dreams do come true."

He emphasized the value of such a bridge in relation to the economy of this area.

Mayor McFarland urged cooperation between town and county residents, stressing the "boom" that younger residents will witness here in years to come.

Sportsmen Protest Snowmobile Ban

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — United we ride, divided we walk, represented the thought motivating a delegation of winter sportsmen to town council last night, protesting a bylaw banning snowmobiles on town streets.

The delegation succeeded, following a short debate, in persuading council to withhold action on the proposed bylaw. Spokesman for the delegation J. F. Hepburn, urged council to consider reasonable controls such as speed limits, operators' age limits, and a curfew before banning snowmobiles on Picton streets.

He and fellow snowmobile enthusiasts hope to meet with a committee of council to draft a less drastic bylaw.

"We recognize one is needed," remarked Mr. Hepburn.

The initial bylaw was requested in a letter to council written by Picton Police Chief George Pitt.

The chief said snowmobiles seem to lack brake power and mentioned a lack of full steering control on packed snow and icy roads.

Chief Pitt also observed that few motorists were alert to snowmobilers on the streets and indicated that a bylaw banning them was possibly the only way to avert possible serious injury to some person.

Town solicitor R. E. Nourse said council could prohibit the vehicles as Chief Pitt requested, but under the exist could do little else.

"You have no authority to control all traffic them," he said. "If you don't want to prohibit them you might as well forget it."

After hearing the delegation of snowmobile fans Mayor McFarland appointed a three-man committee to study the situation, draft a bylaw to ban the vehicles from town streets was not given third reading.

Isn't that just Canada's luck.

We find one game that we're good at and everybody else in the world tells us how to play it.

We don't tell the Russians how to make spoutniks, the Poles how to make sausages, or the Swedes how to make love, but they all tell us how to play hockey.

When Earl Dawson picked up Canada's puck Sunday and brought it home from Geneva, he was, in the opinion of most of us, taking the proper course of action.

The only thing wrong with his telling the International Ice Hockey Federation to take their world tournament to Tanganyika, for all he cared, was that the telling came a decade or so late.

Canadians were competing for the Stanley Cup when Europeans thought "puck" was the good fatty, and yet we acquiesced in playing the game by the "international" format in an era when we thought nobody east of Glace Bay could play better than a good intermediate 'Z' brand of shinny.

This worked out all right, so long as we were beating the foreigners, which we did with the regularity of Ripcurl salts, to the tune of four of the first 19 world tournaments.

Somewhere along the line, we even agreed to eliminate half of hockey's body contact to give our hapless opponents better odds against being beaten so badly.

Had the Soviets not happened to hit upon the secret for developing good hockey players — money — Canada probably would soon - or or later probably have agreed to outlaw raising the puck.

In addition to being the world's pornography capital, Stockholm has the distinction of being the scene of Russia's hockey breakthrough.

When the Soviets proved to themselves they could win a so-called "world championship" in 1954 after only taking up the game a decade or so before, the furtherance of socialist shinny became as important as vodka to any red-blooded Bolshevik.

The Russians made no bones about their assault on hockey — they carefully skimmed the cream of the Soviet crop. And as a state Canadian observed this week, they paid their top hockey players more than their doctors.

That strategy has won them the last seven world titles.

Meanwhile, Canada kept sending her NHL has-beens and not-yets overseas while our best hockey players tickled the fancies of the respected citizens of two Canadian and four United States communities.

The closest we came to being on our knees came when, under pressure of European resentment of the "professional" nature of Canadian entries, we decided to form a National Team, as such.

When we did that, we conceded that Canadians being paid to play hockey were professionals, while Europeans being paid to play hockey were amateurs, a conclusion worthy of Mortimer Snerd.

(Ed. Note — The College Edition of Webster's New World Dictionary gives as a meaning of "amateur" - "a person who does something more or less unskillfully."

Hopefully we will all live to see the day when the only official difference between "amateur" and "professional" is in their spellings.

Until then, we needn't beg anyone to let us play our game with them on their terms.

Something could do a lot right now to clear the international hockey air, and, simultaneously sink the Brundage-Ahearne ice Fables right into oblivion.

That would be an open challenge to the hockey world by a team of OUR choosing to play a number of games to be determined by US in OUR country.

Or, to abandon euphemism, we should be telling Europe's hockey peddlars to put up or shut up.

Strong Case For The Prosecution

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Following is a symposium of comment by Canadian sports columnists and editorial writers on Canada's withdrawal from the world hockey championship:

Ottawa Journal: Canada played along with the hypocritical double standard of international hockey long enough . . . If the international hockey organization wants to perpetuate a situation whereby Canada can't use "pros" but Europe can use paid players, then it will have to hold its little tournament without Canada.

Ottawa Citizen: Canada's withdrawal from this year's world hockey tournament will help bring to a head the whole issue of amateurism. The hypocrisy and evasion practised by many countries have long been scandalous. . . Canada has played patsy to Europe's professional hockey teams for long enough.

Calgary Herald: It is about time. The decision means that the 1970 world hockey series will not be held in Montreal and Winnipeg. It will mean scrapping costly preparations already made. But, above all, it will mean that Canadian hockey is at last standing up for its long-ignored rights. It will mean that sport in this country no longer will grovel at the feet of Mr. Brundage, or at the feet of John Ahearne, president of the IIHF. It will mean Europe no longer can boast about beating Canadian national teams which fall far short of the best Canada can put on ice.

Winnipeg Tribune: In other parts of Canada there is rejoicing because our hockey team had the audacity to stand up and be counted in a confrontation with their European tormentors. . . . Here in Winnipeg, though, there is a feeling that the CAHA turned on us the way European hockey-goers had turned on them. . . . Don't worry about the money the tournament planning had cost so far, because Ottawa seems to have an endless supply. . . . But how can they pay Winnipeggers for five years of hoping, dreaming and perspiring as they planned the best world tournament anybody ever saw? *

Toronto Globe and Mail: Hockey Canada was right to disentangle itself from the world hockey tournament. It would have made a mockery of the tournament for Canada to have entered with less than the best available . . . The Brundage decree seems to have been invented on the spot. We should have thought amateurism is determined not by assertion but by refusal to accept payment for performance.

Marcel DesJardins, Montreal La Presse: If the International Ice Hockey Federation objected to the presence of nine professional players on Canada's national team, it had the privilege to reject this request at a meeting with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association last summer in Europe. . . . The CAHA was right in believing that if it retreated on this point now, nothing would prevent the IIHF from presenting other requests within the next few weeks. . . . It is difficult at this time to foresee the effects on international hockey of Canada's decision to withdraw its invitation to host the world tournament in March. It seems to have created a situation which could perhaps lead to the establishment of a European professional hockey league, or perhaps it will force the IIHF and the CAHA to better understand their mutual problems. . . .

London Free Press: Canada's delegation . . . served Canada hockey well by standing up to Brundage-Ahearne combine. Canada's position as an international pawn in the game of sport will take so much pride has existed too long. It illustrates the stubbornness of Ahearne and Brundage whose dictatorial reigns have kindled many burning international issues in the past. And it shows the fear that the other competing nations . . . have of losing their precious amateur (or is it shamateur?) standing.

Accused Claims Candy Apple Lost

LONDON (CP) — John F. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, today accused Canada of cry-baby behavior over her decision to quit international competition.

"They're like a little boy who's lost his toffee apple," he said. "The whole thing is utterly childish."

Ahearne was commenting on Canada's withdrawal at Geneva Sunday from this year's world hockey tournament and subsequent criticism of the IIHF president. Canada was to have played host to the tournament at Montreal and Winnipeg but pulled out when it discovered at Geneva that the Canadian team would not be able to use some professionals, in line with a tentative decision of last July.

The tournament now goes to Stockholm, Sweden.

Ahearne, generally regarded as the string-pulling genius behind the IIHF, shrugged off suggestions he was responsible for the Canadian debacle and that he should quit the presidency.

Demands for his resignation had come from David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League and from Swedish newspapers which claimed that the withdrawal of the crowd-drawing Canadians would cost Sweden about $200,000 at the gate.

"Im afraid to laugh," said Bunny, "because I'm just getting over a bout of bronchitis and it might start me coughing."

Ahearne disclaimed any responsibility for the fall-through of the tentative July resolution at last weekend's Geneva meeting.

Last July, he said, there was a deadlock among countries in the tournament over the question of allowing some professionals of each team, as desired by Canada. He said he cast the tie-breaking vote in favor.

In the latest meeting at Geneva, he said, there was no vote. The five European hockey federations which with Canada were in the championship fight — Sweden, Czechoslovakia, Russia, Finland and East Germany — had stated they would not go to Canada if professionals were allowed.

"After the July meeting I was hailed as the savior of hockey," he lamented. "Now overnight I'm a bum, though the decision wasn't mine."

"Anyhow," he added, "it's the same old story with the Canadians.

"When they lose on the ice they're crying. Now that they lose in committee room they're crying again."

Ahearne said he wouldn't quite agree with Harold Martin, chairman of the Winnipeg committee for the tournament, who called the Canadian pull-out "stupid."

"I'd just call it unwise or stubborn," the federation president said.

Nor did he agree with Canadian Health Minister John Munro, who said that without Canada the world event would "wither as a second-class tournament."

"If that's the case, why are they so upset?" he asked.

He estimated Canada would lose perhaps $1,000,000 at the gate and he added he did not see how the Swedes could lose $200,000 through the withdrawal.

Federal Agent Joins Posse To Bring Ahearne to Justice

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister John Munro told a news conference today that he is fed up "with phoney restrictions" on what players can play in international hockey competitions.

He repeated his full support for the Canadian withdrawal from international play until Canada can dress its best players and added that he believes the decisions will back the Canadian stand.

Munro, whose portfolio includes responsibility for sport, appeared at the news conference along with Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and Charles Hay, head of Hockey Canada.

Dawson and Hay, with the blessing of the federal government, left Canada to attend team international competition at a meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation in Geneva Sunday. The action came after delegates refused to allow Canada to use nine professionals in the 1970 games.

Dawson said there is no chance of Canada playing in the 1970 tournament, originally scheduled for Winnipeg and Montreal in March and now to be held in Stockholm.

JOHN MUNRO
On Ahearne's Trail

He predicted a financial loss for the Stockholm games because of the Canadian withdrawal and added that a similar prospect for the 1971 games in Czechoslovakia could lead to a change in international regulations regarding amateur status.

Munro said "the day is coming when the imaginary distinction between an amateur and a professional will no longer be valid."

Dawson said Canada will insist that all teams in the 1972 Olympic Games prove that all of their players are true amateurs.

Hay said plans now are afoot to keep the national team together for the rest of the season. Part of the planning was directed towards a tournament in Winnipeg.

In an interview, CAHA executive director Gordon Juckes said the plans are for an all-Canada tournament to replace the international games scheduled for Winnipeg.

Possible entries for the new tournament would be Quebec Aces and Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, Vancouver Canucks of the Western League and the Nationals.

Munro told the news conference he did not think Canada's stand on world hockey would affect a bid by Garibaldi, B.C. for the 1976 Winter Olympic Games.

He also said the federal government would pick up any losses sustained by the CAHA and Hockey Canada because of the decision to pull out of the 1970 games. The loss is estimated at $150,000.

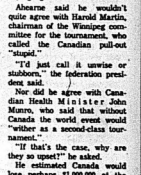
Victim Unsure of Future After Losing All His Boys

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canada's national hockey team will take today off as usual and practise Wednesday at the Winnipeg Arena.

"After that, I don't know," said coach Jack McLeod Monday at Winnipeg International Airport after the team returned from Ottawa where they ended their exhibition international hockey series with a 2-1 win over Czechoslovakia Sunday night.

McLeod said he thought Canada's representatives at the International Ice Hockey Federation meeting in Geneva could have reached a compromise "so we could have had a tournament."

"What the hell have these kids been working for anyway?" he said.



Canada withdrew from the 1970 world hockey tournament Sunday over an IIHF decision not to allow nine professionals, to play for the national team during the tournament, scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg.

McLeod said a proposed tournament in Winnipeg featuring Canada's three minor professional teams and the Nationals would not compensate for the loss of the world tournament.

"What would we be playing for?" he asked.

Goldsworthy, Lemaire Only NHL-ers at 20-goal Plateau

MONTREAL (CP) — Only two of the more than 200 National Hockey League players have scored 20 goals this season, but their output still is not good enough to head today's scoring list.

Bill Goldsworthy of Minnesota North Stars and Jacques Lemaire of Montreal Canadiens reached the 20-goal level last weekend, but statistics issued by the NHL today show both are still 22 points off the pace set by leader Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins.

Orr has led the scoring parade for the last six weeks. With 56 points, including a league-leading 45 assists, Orr has a seven-point lead over centre Phil Goyette of St. Louis Blues.

Goldsworthy and Lemaire each has a share of 11th place with an equal 20 goals and 14 assists.

Projected over the entire season, Orr's pace could see him finish with 118 points. He needs only six more assists to eclipse the record for assists in a single season for a defenceman. Pat Stapleton of Chicago Black Hawks set the mark of 50 last season.

Defending scoring champion Phil Esposito of Boston currently is in third spot with 42 points, along with centre Walt Tkaczuk of New York Rangers. Esposito set an all-time high last season with 126 points.

Centre Frank St. Marseille of St. Louis and Dave Balon of New York are tied with 39 points each, while Ab McDonald of the Blues and Jean Ratelle of the Rangers follow with 38.

Rounding out the top 10 are Frank Mahovlich of Detroit Red Wings and Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks. Both have 35 points.

Mahovlich picked up six points last week in Detroit's three wins.

Mikita is a four-time NHL scoring champion.

There was a considerable shuffle for the lead in goaltending, with New York Rangers taking over the team leadership from Chicago.

Rangers' Ed Giacomin and Terry Sawchuk now have a combined goals-against average of 2.30. The Blues have a combined total of 2.31, while the Chicago combination of Tony Esposito and Denis DeJordy dropped from first place to third at 2.40.

Esposito leads in shutouts with seven, while Giacomin has three and Jacques Plante of St. Louis four. Glenn Hall and Ernie Wakely, both of St. Louis, have one and two shutouts respectively, bringing the Blues total to seven.

Carol Vadnais, the defenceman-turned-winger with Oakland Seals, continues as the individual penalty leader with 149 minutes. Philadelphia Flyers lead the team totals with 624 minutes.

Vikings Migrate from North For Balmy Super Bowl Climes

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Vikings from the frozen north prepared for a voyage south today in search of professional football's biggest prize.

The champions of the National Football League were scheduled to fly to balmy New Orleans where they have a date in the Super Bowl Sunday with Kansas City Chiefs of the American Football League.

The invasion will be joined by some 2,500 jubilant Vikings' fans, who purchased Super Bowl tickets immediately after Minnesota's 27-7 destruction of Cleveland Browns in the NFL final last Sunday.

To watch a Viking victory in the warm glow of the southern sun would be the ultimate satisfaction for these hardy, rugged fans, who have struggled through nine seasons of hard-fought games in bitterly-cold winters to watch the Vikings become the first expansion team to win the NFL title.

The Vikings held a players' meeting Monday while the coaches went over game films.

Head coach Bud Grant characterized Kansas as a tough defensively with a strong running game and an ability to control the football.

Grant, a former coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Canadian Football League, said he thought Kansas City would have an advantage in preparing for the game because Minnesota's offence is basic and the Chiefs' is more varied.

"We run very standard stuff," Grant said. "We're very basic, doing things that do not involve recognition."

Grant said the styles of the Chiefs and Dallas Cowboys of the NFL are similar.

"Kansas City moves the ball around out of the I formation with shifts," he said.

"They do even more than Dallas. They like to run a lot of wide plays and also shoot Mike Garrett up the middle. They are a quick-hitting type with finesse. I think they have as fine personnel as there is in football today."

The Vikings lost to Kansas City in a 1968 exhibition game in which Grant said he was impressed by the size of the team. He said Garrett played a great game against his club. Minnesota met three AFL opponents last summer, beating Miami and Denver and losing to the New York Jets.

Grant left no doubt that he was taking seriously his responsibility as coach of the NFL entry in the last pure Super Bowl match between league champions. Next year the leagues merge and the final will be a game between the winners of the two divisions.

"As the last strictly NFL team to be involved, we feel a tremendous responsibility to the league," said Grant. "I thought Baltimore had an outstanding season last year, but they lost it all because they lost to the Jets. We feel our biggest one is still to come."

Chiefs' Stram Has Injury Worry

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Coach Hank Stram expressed more concern about injuries to two defensive backs than any injuries to the club's pride inflicted by the oddsmakers as he prepared to send his Kansas City Chiefs through their first Super Bowl workout today.

Stram and the Chiefs flew into New Orleans late Monday afternoon to find the oddsmakers making Minnesota Vikings, who arrive today, anywhere from 11-to-13-points favorites for Sunday's clash between the American and National football league champions.

But Stram showed no emotion over the odds which make his AFL champions decided underdogs, just as the AFL's New York Jets were last year.

"I have no feeling about it whatsoever," said Stram. "I never concern myself with things I can't control. I never give odds much thought."

Stram, however, was spending time thinking about two major weapons on the defensive unit that was the key to the 17-7 victory over Oakland Raiders in the AFL championship game last Sunday—veteran safety Johnny Robinson and rookie cornerback James Marsalis.

Robinson, an AFL original who has spanned the entire decade of the league, suffered what appears to be a cartilage tear in his rib cage while Marsalis, the Chiefs' No. 1 draft choice, has a bruised kidney.

Of the two, Robinson appeared to be the most seriously injured and was scheduled to undergo further tests here today.

"Right now Marsalis is a probable," Stram guessed, "but I'd have to say Robinson is doubtful."

Hotelmen Take First Place

Belvedere Hotel moved into sole possession of first place in the Quinte Hockey League last night thanks to cellar dwelling Stinson Construction.

The league leaders dropped Aluminum Stars 3-1, while Stinsons were upsetting Central Taxi, who had been tied for the lead 6-2. The win moved Stinsons into a third-place tie with Aluminum Star.

MONTREAL (CP) — Nancy Greene Raine, Canada's former ski queen, gave birth Monday night to twin boys.

Husband Al Raine, head coach of Canada's alpine ski team, said both the former World Cup champion and babies are in excellent condition.

Raine said the twins were born at 11:45 p.m. Each weighed six pounds two ounces. No names have been chosen yet.

Cobourg Timekeeper Resents Belleville Claim

The Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ontario.

Dear Sir:

I have been a minor game official at Cobourg OHA hockey games since 1951 and in all that time, I have never been accused of dishonesty. Until December 29, that is.

Accusations hurled in my direction by Belleville junior B manager Jim (Swipe) Matthews following that game and by coach Floyd Crawford and Mr. Matthews in the Belleville Intelligencer's write - up of the game the following day must not go unchallenged.

As the penalty timekeeper in that game, I strongly reject and resent implications of collusion made by the Belleville team management. Despite what they might have thought, referee Ralph Fowler served 4 2½-minute penalty and no Cobourg player served less than his proper time.

As much as I like to see Cobourg Cougars win, they have never and will never receive any assistance or special considerations from either the Cobourg timekeeper or the Cobourg penalty timekeeper in order to do so.

I pride myself on being fair, I am so cheat.

Sincerely,
Layton Dodge,
Sports Editor,
Cobourg Sentinel-Star and Eastern Ontario Senior
B Statistician.

P.S. - The next time Belleville hirers appear in Cobourg, I suggest that they place a man at the penalty bench (as the other) to satisfy themselves that everything is on the up and up.

Gas House League's Rich Get Richer

The rich get richer and the poor get poorer seems to hold true for the Gas House Hockey League. League leading Downtown Merchants and second - place Mustangs gained points at the expense of third-place Marysville and last - place Mulroney's in Monday's action.

The Merchants were on the long end of a 7-4 count over Marysville, while the Mustangs beat Mulroney's 4-2, to stay four points out of first place.

Carl Boomhower's hat trick paced the Merchants' scoring. Bill Hopkins was good for a goal and three assists, with Jim Woodcock, Ted Schwager and Brian Smith each counting once. No lineup was available for the Marysville scorers.

* * *

GASHOUSE LEAGUE	GP	W	L	T	GA	Pts

Mustangs	10	5	2	3	29	17
Marysville	10	2	5	3	23	10

The Mustangs scoring was evenly divided, in a game that was protested because of the alleged use of ineligible players. Jack O'Neill, Gord Green, G. Jones and Don Irwin were the Mustang scorers. Kevin Allen and David Emerson replied for Mulroney's.

Faces Road Test

Kings' Wilson Under Gun

John Wilson today faces a major hurdle in his tenure as new coach of Los Angeles Kings, last in the National Hockey League's Western Division.

Wilson and the Kings are in Montreal tonight facing the Canadiens in the first of an eight-game road trip that winds up Jan. 18 in Detroit, two days before the all-star game in St. Louis.

The last time the Kings undertook an extended road trip they returned home with only one victory and a tie out of nine games. Just 12 days after they returned to Los Angeles, Dec. 3, Hal Laycoe was fired as coach and Wilson was brought in from the Kings' American Hockey League farm team.

Los Angeles owner Jack Kent Cooke also hired veteran defenceman Doug Harvey as an assistant coach responsible for the Kings' defence.

Since taking over four weeks ago, Wilson and Harvey have coaxed the team through one win, four ties and four losses. Three of the ties were with the Minnesota North Stars, whom this road trip, the Kings meet again during

Minors Win Some Lose Some

Belleville's Kinsmen Bantam club skated to an easy 8-1 victory over Picton's all-star team squad last night. The win closes out regular season play for the Kinsmen squad.

Mark Coates paced the scorers with three goals and an assist, while Andy Ricketts counted a goal and two assists. Belleville Belleville defencemen were Steve Kirby with two goals and Dave Flesch and Dave England with one apiece.

On the other side of the coin, Rollins Construction Pee Wees were handed an 8-3 setback by Kingston. Mark Crawford scored twice and Mike Rebeau added the other goal for Belleville.

Barriages Belted

In Quinte Ladies' Hockey League play Saturday, Norwood whitewashed the Belleville Barriages entry 5-0. Pat Bronson led the Norwood scorers with a hat trick and P. Millar added two goals to complete the scoring.

Canada's Next Nancy?

Teen-ager Chases Ski Leader

GRINDELWALD, Switzerland (CP) — Canada's Betsy Clifford made a strong challenge for top honors in the special slalom race of the women's international ski series here today and finished second behind the provisional leader, Michele Jacot of France; the World Cup leader.

Miss Jacot flashed down a steep slope at the foot of the Eiger Mountain for a combined time of one minute 37.49 seconds for two legs. She clocked 49.31 in the first leg and 48.18 on the second.

Miss Clifford, Canada's best woman skier with the retirement of Olympic champion Nancy Greene Raine, was second with a total time of 1:36.67. Her leg times were 49.15 and 48.52. Miss Clifford, 16, is from Ottawa. Her father, a former Alpine skier, runs a ski lift concession at Camp Fortune, near Ottawa.

In third place was Marilyn Cochran of the United States with times of 47.82 and 49.93 for a total of 1:37.75.

JUST TO PLEASE THE EMPEROR!

Around 80 A.D., the Emperor Nero was served a delicious concoction of fruit juice and snow . . . the forerunner of our beloved ice cream. The Chinese added milk and European cooks brought the recipe to America where it's been a favorite since colonial times.

If the family prefers to buy their ice cream at the store instead of making it, turn that still-useful ice cream freezer into cool cash . . . with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Call 962-3111 for details and ask for Classified.

Trenton Borrowing Authorized

The head of Trenton town council and the treasurer were authorized Monday evening to borrow from time to time a sum not exceeding $1,000,000.

This action was taken to provide funds to conduct the business of the town until such time as the tax money comes in and is a common practice.

Also in the financial field, councillors Ted Parker and Stan Ketcheson were named as alternate signing officers in the event that the Mayor was sick or unavoidably away.

• • •

A further investigation will be carried out by town council on the Hastings County Board of Education's request for transfer of ownership of a portion of Joseph Street.

The surveyor's plan of the Dufferin School site shows Joseph Street from McLellan to Dufferin Avenue as not open, but does not suggest that the street has been closed the Board of Education after states.

The street has long been used as a school play area and is in a position of dividing the school lands into almost equal parts, the letter continues.

Councillors agreed that the street definitely can't be opened but referred the matter for further study because councillor Paul Tripp suggested that the land be given to the Parks Board who could let the School Board use it. Tripp's suggestion would allow the town to retain ownership of the land.

• • •

Mayor-elect Duncan McDonald will discuss with Police Chief R. J. Rutherford the possibility of a cross-over and cross walk education plan in the town's schools. At the same time the town will move to adopt jaywalking legislation at a next session to curtail abuse of the cross-over and cross walk system.

Picton UEL Will Meet

PICTON — Members of the Bay of Quinte Branch of the United Empire Loyalist Association will meet Wednesday evening in the County Room of Picton's Royal Hotel.

Featured speaker will be Mark Trumpour, Kingston, who will trace the history of the Trumpour family. Musical entertainment will be provided on the piano by Mrs. David Taylor. The meeting is also open to visitors wishing to attend.

Truck Rolls, Then Piles Up

MARMORA — Marmora fuel dealer Victor Provost will be temporarily without the use of his oil delivery tank truck as the result of a freak accident here last week.

Mr. Provost had left his truck parked on a hill while he made a purchase at a store. When he returned he found the vehicle had rolled down the incline.

The truck smashed into a hydro pole resulting in destruction of the standard and about $500 damage to the vehicle, police said.

Plans for Marketing Milk Outlined at Board Meeting

CAMPBELLFORD — The Ontario Milk Marketing Board held a meeting recently in Campbellford to outline the Board's plans for marketing industrial milk. Chairman for the evening was Everett Parr of Hoard's Station.

The plans were outlined by Wally Cavanah, OMMB official field man with Allan Ketcheson OMMB's director to answer pertinent questions.

The Milk Commission of Ontario is the overall provincial authority and regulatory body for the dairy industry in Ontario. The Commission has delegated marketing powers to the Ontario Marketing Board.

The main objectives outlined at the meeting were to return the highest possible average net price to producers; to provide stability in price; to reduce transportation costs; to provide same basic price for fan milk as for bulk milk; to obtain for producers a fair share of federal subsidy.

These objectives said Mr. Cavanah should produce a stronger producer position in the market place.

The conversion period from the existing to the new marketing methods is from December 1, 1969 to March 31, 1970. During this period the following will occur — Board payments on behalf of plants— Same money to producers — Once a month payment—Some advance payments for two months — Price pooling will not start until April 1st 1970.

In brief the Canadian Dairy Commission administers this national dairy policy by making direct subsidy payments to producers, setting product price support levels, disposing of dairy products that are surplus to domestic requirements and influencing the import and export of dairy products, in short the C.D.C. administers the subsidy quota program in an effort to achieve a balance between milk supplies and demand Also as a means of assuring federal subsidy funds in a fair and equitable manner. The funds to support the CDC operations are set by the Federal Government and voted on by Parliament annually. They amounted to 125 million in 1969-70 dairy year. There are 13 fieldmen, the main milk producing areas in the province. The fieldmen try to help a producer with any problems which arise and Board's policies and activities.

Picton Discusses Fire Protection

PICTON — Town council last night discussed a proposed agreement for fire protection services between Picton and the townships of Sophiasburg Marysburgh, South Marysburgh and Athol.

It was agreed to forward the fire and emergency committee's proposal to the municipal councils for their approval in principal. The agreement contained more than 15 conditions. Among them are:

The four municipalities together shall purchase a "combination pumper and tanker fire truck" complete with 800 gallon capacity tank, fire hose, ladders and equipment, all subject to the recommendations of Picton's fire chief. This fire truck and its equipment would be housed at the Picton Fire Hall without charge to the municipalities.

The four municipalities together should pay to the town of Picton an annual sum equal to the averaged annual salary and allowances of three full time firemen. In addition, a proportionate cost of administrative expenditures of the Picton Fire Department should be negotiated each year.

In addition to this the four municipalities shall pay an hourly rate to be set annually by the town of Picton to each volunteer fire fighter from the Picton Fire Department attending fires in the municipalities.

The four municipalities must provide all necessary insurance, gasoline, oil, grease, repairs and maintenance required to serve the proper operation of their equipment.

Picton agrees to pay the sum of $3,000 towards the purchase of the new fire truck and its equipment with the provision that the equipment is compatible with the means of fighting fires in Picton.

The four municipalities will together, subject to the above, be the sole owners of any fire fighting apparatus purchase.

Picton agrees to provide storage of all fire fighting equipment owned by the municipalities in Picton fire hall, without charge.

The agreement shall be in effect for a three-year period from the day of signature and may be terminated or renewed by any party on 60 days notice prior to the expiration date.

Details Of Charges Sought

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Defence lawyers for Lieut. William L. Calley Jr. requested Monday that the U.S. Army be required to furnish full details in each of the 110 slayings of which Calley is accused.

They also asked that all duplicating specifications against Calley be dropped.

The motions were filed by Calley's civilian lawyer, George Latimer, in a letter to Lt. Col. Reid W. Kennedy, the trial judge.

A date for a hearing on the motions was not set immediately.

Calley, 26, a native of Miami, faces a general court-martial on charges of slaying 109 civilians at the Vietnamese village of My Lai on March 16, 1968. He also is accused of slaying "one adult male" civilian about six weeks before the My Lai action.

In one of his latest motions, Latimer noted that the prosecution be required specifically to give names, times, places, dates and locations involved in each of the accusations. He also asked that the government spell out whether it will try to prove a single intent to kill all of the alleged victims or a specific intent with respect to each specification.

No Metre Maid, Man Is Hired

PICTON — The term metre-maid was hastily amended when town council awarded the job to Allan Spicer last night.

Appointment of a metre-maid was recommended in the report from the Ontario Police Commission received here last October.

However, council hired a man for the job at a salary of $3,400 a year.

Twelve of the 17 industrial components were lower led by material stocks. Five rose slightly paced by oil refiners.

Consumers Glass dropped 1 to 33 and Dominion Bridge ¼ to 14. Texaco picked up ¼ to 23¾ and Gulf ¼ to 17¼.

Combined Engineered Products gained 35 cents to $2.55 on three-month earnings of 13 cents a share compared with four cents in the similar period a year ago.

Parking Shows Courtesy Is Two-way Street

TRENTON — Town council started the new year off on a warm, humorous note Monday evening.

First on its agenda was a letter under the letterhead of the Town of Napanee. It said:

"Dear Sir:

"I recently received a courtesy ticket while doing business with a merchant in the town of Trenton on December 11, 1969.

"I feel that I was guilty because I neglected to make sufficient payment for my parking privileges. Your courtesy ticket has left a favorable impression with me and I will endeavor to make sufficient payment in future for my parking privileges with your municipality."

The letter was signed by Dene Gettas, Napanee recreation director.

Winter Zeroes In

TWEED (Special)—Don't tell anyone around here that this hasn't been a cold winter.

Temperatures plummeted to as low as 20 degrees below zero around Christmas holiday time and frigid weather has continued since the New Year.

Last night the mercury dropped to 11 below. Residents say that the night temperature in the village hasn't been above the zero mark since the first of January.

Newspaper route management: Headstart for your boy

YOUR HOPES for your boy's success in life can start taking shape today. Right now.

With a business of his own.

A business in which he gains a sense of responsibility and dependability, learns to sell and to get along with people, learns the basics of business and the value of money (like any well-run business, his will show a good profit).

The business we are suggesting is a newspaper route.

Applies his school lessons

Newspaper route management is the best way we know of in which a boy can apply in a practical way the lessons he learns in the classroom. This helps him to be a better student. It also gives him a headstart in the business of life.

A successful man we know told us the other day: "Surprising as it may seem, the elementary training I got as a newspaper carrier-boy has helped me more than any other single thing I can name in understanding the conduct of business."

Learns basics of business

And he added, "This is why if my boy is able to qualify I want him to have a newspaper route."

The people in our circulation department will be pleased to tell you how your son can qualify—and they will help him get a route of his own in your neighborhood. They also will give him a big start toward success in life. Ask today—

Benson Says Major Changes To Be Made in Tax Proposals

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Benson said Monday there will be major changes in his white paper on tax reform before it becomes a legislative bill.

"Some things in it simply won't work," he told 600 businessmen at the Canadian Club of Toronto's annual luncheon with the federal finance ministry.

At a news conference later he refused to specify the unworkable proposals. He said he will spell them out "soon" to the parliamentary committee on tax reform.

But in his talk, which consisted largely of answering written questions from his audience, he pinpinted those proposals which are receiving criticism from Canadian taxpayers.

They are:

...—The five-year revaluation of share holdings in public Canadian companies for capital gains tax. Some say shares may have to be sold to pay the tax; this could change company control in some cases.

—The valuation of houses, businesses, and holdings in closely-held corporations for gains tax. The $1,000-a-year exemption for houses may not be high enough.

—The elimination of all business entertainment expenses as tax deductions.

—The requirement that American subsidiaries in Canada pay gains tax on their holdings in Canadian companies when they need not do this under U.S. law.

"This may mean re-negotiating the Canada-U.S. tax treaty," Mr. Benson said.

He urged anyone with ideas on how capital gains tax on shareholdership could be computed, or gains tax on residence sales eliminated, to give them to the parliamentary committee.

"The government is prepared to make significant changes in the proposals," he said, "but we intend to have tax reform."

A single corporation tax rate, and some relation between personal and corporate rates are essential for any fair tax system, Mr. Benson said.

"Otherwise some people will quickly figure out ways to avoid tax by converting one rate to another."

Ranging beyond the white paper, Mr. Benson said Canada will have a larger-than-forecast budget surplus this year. All of it will go to lending agencies such as Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. and the farm loan board, to eliminate the need to go to the market for any new financing in the present fiscal year. Mr. Benson did not give the estimated surplus during his speech but said in an interview later the amount would be more than $275,000,000 and probably close to $400,000,000.

* * *

He also noted that:

—He is not "attached forever" to balanced budgets. "If economic conditions needed spurring the first thing I would do would be to cut taxes."

—The next several months are crucial in the government's fight against inflation. But provincial-federal shared-cost programs, such as hospital insurance and aid to post-secondary education, rather than straight federal spending, are contributing most to rising costs.

—To be effective, wage and price controls would need to be national, have the consent of all provinces, and have a "tremendous" administrative staff.

Togham Voices Criticism

TORONTO (CP) — Ron W. Todgham, president of Chrysler Canada Ltd., said Monday the federal government's proposed changes in corporate income taxes could "virtually eliminate the growth of small business from the Canadian economic scene."

Speaking to the Toronto Board of Trade Club, Mr. Todgham said he does not think that "this particular subject, and I must confess that if I took everything I read or hear at face value, and balanced the negatives off against the positives, the negatives would win hands down."

The white paper was "something of a trial balloon," he said.

A text of his speech was released in advance of delivery.

Enzymes Blamed As Workers Ill

NEW YORK (AP) — At first, British doctors treating the workers of the detergent plant diagnosed the illnesses as bronchitis, influenza, asthma.

But it soon became clear that the cause of the mysterious outbreak of illness among the detergent workers was the highly concentrated enzymes the men were working with.

Now the federal government in the United States is taking a close look at possible health hazards from detergents containing enzymes.

U.S. health officials agree with the detergent industry that there is no evidence to date of any health hazard to the housewife, or other family members in the homes where the detergents are used.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"
By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 53 years old and weigh 220 pounds, 24 of which I put on last summer. A year and a half ago I was in the hospital for three weeks. Two months ago I was rushed into the hospital, this time with a coronary attack. I was told it is imperative that I lose weight.

I don't drink or smoke, but my compulsion for eating is tremendous. If I continue the course I'm following, would you state my chances for survival? If I decide to change and start dieting could I live a normal life? Or is it already too late? I feel my days are numbered. — Mrs. M.

Comment: As the saying goes, it's never too late to mend. Your chances for survival will be greater because you know it's necessary to start dieting, and because you really start. It's one thing to make a resolve and another to get right down to it.

I know it won't be easy, but with the help of your doctor, those extra pounds which put so much of a strain on your circulation will gradually come off.

Excess fat is an ally of coronary disease, hypertension, diabetes, arthritis and many other chronic conditions. Lose weight and add numbers to your days.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For years I had fungus infection of my finger nails. They were a mess: so bad I wore gloves. My family doctor prescribed griseofulvin about three years ago. In a year the results were dramatic. I had healthy nails. I am now glad I have been off the medicine for the past two years, the infection is gradually returning to my nails. Hence my question: Shall I begin taking it on my own again, or should I see my doctor? — Mrs. P.

Comment: Unlike taking an occasional aspirin tablet or some bicarb on your own I believe a doctor should prescribe and oversee this drug because it usually has to be taken for many months.

As proved in your case, it can often work wonders in chronic stubborn infections. Nevertheless it's better to have your doctor prescribe the dosage and check on your reactions.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have puffiness around the eyes. I am 55 years old and feel well otherwise. What could cause such trouble? — Mrs. I.

Comment: Assuming you get sufficient sleep, I suggest the puffiness may be due to your diet. Have your doctor check your thyroid gland. Now the federal government in the United States is taking a close look at possible health hazards from detergents containing enzymes.

U.S. health officials agree with the detergent industry that there is no evidence to date of any health hazard to the housewife, or other family members in the homes where the detergents are used.

Air Belongs to All

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

In his recent book "With All Its Faults," which he subtitles, "a candid account of 40 years in advertising," Fairfax Cone, head of one of the largest ad agencies in the world, devotes a rousing final chapter to the sins of broadcasting—especially television.

"The air," he reminds us, "belongs neither to the broadcasters nor to the politicians. It belongs to the people, and it belongs to all the people."

Stations and channels are licensed "in the public interest, convenience and necessity." But they are run almost wholly for private gain, competitive advantage, and popularity ratings. The huge TV networks themselves, in my opinion, are a criminal betrayal of the public interest and the whole concept of "responsibility" in communication.

Last month, the first Alfred I. duPont-Columbia University survey of American broadcast journalism castigated "cynical proprietorship" of television and radio stations that "do as little for their audience as they can legally get away with." You can't say it much plainer than that.

This study, echoing Mr. Cone's book, pointed out that of the 30 television spenders, representing advertising budgets of $1.3 billion, none chose to sponsor a network news documentary in the past season. An unassisted look at space - launching will spur hours of news-time, but regular programming is "dulled by broadcasting's persistent pursuit of profit."

As Cone makes clear, "there has never been another medium even remotely like television, and it requires a new set of rules for all of the participants." The privileges of sponsors, of ad agencies, of the networks and the channels, must be subordinated to the rights of the people to be fully, accurately, honestly informed.

It is neither necessary nor desirable to take the profit motive out of broadcasting; but it is essential to force the profit-fat networks and channels to plough a larger share of their earnings back into operations that perform a public service. This could easily be done on a rotating basis, when each network would give up one or two nights of prime-time a week if it wanted to keep its license.

The large advertisers will not voluntarily penalize themselves by sponsoring programs that attract a smaller audience, but the broadcasting industry itself should rotate the advertisers' messages through a full spectrum of programs, or give up the air it is polluting.

BRINGING UP FATHER

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 7

Your birthday today: The past is finished, the future now breaks into your patterns and habits. Almost none of your activities, nor your reasons for doing them, can be the same in the coming months. Your personal values shift rapidly. Intriguing new friendships evolve. Today's natives are practical, work willingly in whatever field is most needed in their youth, and develop high skills as they mature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Today you are ready for a fresh start, perhaps a stirring of emotional impulse. Whatever talent you may have for showmanship comes out.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Get out early and plan for an excursion today, if you can manage it. Put your best foot forward; express yourself vigorously.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): A potentially profitable business deal is possible. Make a point of being seen in the right places, doing things that fit the mood of the times in your community. Buy furnishings for your home where needed.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): There is glamour about everything you do today, with more than a hint of sudden luck. Put forth good-humored effort. Include a lunch break appointment with interesting conversation.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Now is your chance to persuade doubters to come over to your way of seeing things. Children provide some cheerful incidents. Cash is easier to obtain: make the most of it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your recent consideration of others now becomes more reward. Bring newly developing skills to bear on your career affairs; see them begin to pay off at once.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Come first today. Make the most of a passing high tide of co-operation; have the courage to express your feelings fully. The evening is for social gatherings, sports, games.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Watch financial commitments very closely; make no more at the moment. Keep a logical point of view about changes in your home. Social activity should offer much satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Stay with tested formulae and well-established conservative habits. Money matters go rather well, perhaps faster than you had expected.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You find your ambitions are the stars in your program for today. With more help and enthusiasm than is usual, take full advantage of good aspects to ask for what you want.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Somebody near you develops limitations which cause some difference in your own program. Make whatever changes you must to work around the hindrance, and proceed the best you can without recrimination.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Persistence brings results beyond expectations. Quick action may make it feasible for you to help somebody else as well. Seek new agents, employes, or even a change of job.

A Belleville First
Weightlifting Trials Here

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

It has taken one of her most overlooked sports to land Belleville the biggest athletic coup in city history.

Apollo Barbell Club coach Ken Carr-Braint last night set into motion plans to stage the British Commonwealth Games weightlifting trials at Centennial Secondary School in early May.

The trials for July's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland, also double as the Canadian Weightlifting Championships, marking the first time any sporting event of national stature has had a Belleville backdrop.

"We're joining some pretty elite company," Mr. Carr-Braint added, officially assuming duties as chairman of the Games Trials Committee at a Recreation Centre meeting last night.

"In 1968 Calgary really put on a big splash for the dominion championship competitors. The year before, Quebec City did the same."

For Story On Local Entrants See Page 19

Mr. Carr-Braint, with previous coaching experience in Commonwealth and Pan-American Game competition with the national weightlifting team, said Belleville is undoubtedly the smallest centre ever selected as a Canadian weightlifting title site.

There was quite a lobby from Toronto to attract the event, but we kicked up quite a row. We've got a number of good weightlifters here, but there aren't too many from Toronto."

The current Apollo Club membership includes Price Morris — five-time Canadian heavyweight champion, and Canadian teen-age champion Art Walt.

The May 8-10 program includes plans for a railway station civic welcome for arriving competitors, a reception and banquet following the one-day competition Saturday, May 10.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: As another winter storm moves northward along the eastern coast of the United States the extreme frigid weather extends just north of the lower Great Lakes in the form of a cloud shield and some light snow. The main effect of this storm on the Ontario weather will be to increase the cold northerly circulation over the Great Lakes. As a result snow-flurry activity will also increase over most of the province. Temperatures will remain well below seasonal normal for the next few days at least.

Milk Board Head Glum

TORONTO (CP) — A gloomy future for the dairy producer in the next few years was predicted today by G. R. McLaughlin, chairman of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board.

Export markets for butter are virtually non-existent and world prices for powdered milk are "disastrously low," he told the board's annual meeting.

"The industry is geared to produce more butter than the domestic market will absorb—not much more as yet, but consumption is declining while production is relatively stable.

"It appears that we will have about 30,000,000 more pounds of butter on hand at the end of this dairy year than a year earlier. Powder production is expected to exceed domestic demand by about 220,000,000 pounds."

He said one of the major reasons "for the chaotic world situation in dairy products arises from the fact that the six countries in the European Economic Community have in storage over 1,000,000,000 pounds of butter and almost as large a quantity of skim milk powder."

"These are being exported to the world market at substan-

Nixon Wants Tax Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon may seek increases in several federal excise taxes, including a possible steep increase in the cigarette levy, to help keep his promise of a balanced budget.

But the value-added tax that has long intrigued Nixon — in effect a sales tax imposed on the value added to a product at each stage of its manufacture — apparently has been ruled out.

Critics of the tax contend it fosters price increases instead of dampening inflation.

Shell-less Eggs And Nude Turkeys May Save Farmers

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — To stay in business Canadian farmers will have to discard pre-conceived notions and consider producing unconventional products like shell-less chicken eggs, turkeys without feathers and crops of cattle, an agriculture specialist said Tuesday.

Dr. Grant Farmaat, information director for the federal agriculture department, told members of the United co-operatives of Ontario, "the knowledge has been available to us but we don't use it because we don't have to" at present.

Cheese Surplus Feared

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

"We're in the same game as the Canadian hockey team; we haven't found a way to resolve our countries' problems on an international level," said Douglas Tipper, Hastings county agricultural representative this morning, commenting on the statement of chairman of the Milk Marketing Board, that the "long-range view is gloomy" for milk producers.

"By taking advantage of technology, milk producers have pushed their productive capacity up but markets haven't expanded to match," Mr. Tipper said.

Surplus milk is usually processed into powder, "because that's the most economical way to store it." the agriculturalist said.

Israeli Bombs Hit Nile Towns

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israeli warplanes struck at Egyptian military targets near Cairo today and crossed west of the Nile River in their deepest air assault since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the Israeli military command announced.

One of the objectives was Dahashur, eight miles south of Helwan, a Nile River city where a guided missile centre is being built with Soviet aid.

Dahashur and at least one of the other centres of the Nile Delta reported hit in the attack are 17 miles from the Egyptian capital.

Israel claims often to have sent planes over Cairo on reconnaissance, but there has been no record of air attack so near the capital since the six-day war ended.

All Israeli planes returned safely, a spokesman said. There was no mention of what damage was inflicted or how long the raid lasted.

Assassination Plot Is Foiled

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A plot to assassinate Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan came to light today with the disclosure of the arrest of six Arabs, official sources reported.

The Arabs were accused of planning to park a bomb-laden car outside Dayan's favorite Tel Aviv cafe.

The unnamed defendants are three Gaza Arabs and three Israeli Arabs, including a Tel Aviv bus driver and a former employee of the cafe Dayan often frequents.

The date of their arrest was not immediately known, but officials said their trial was to open Feb. 2.

Red Troops From North In Battles

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese forces intercepted North Vietnamese troops in three regions ranging from the Cambodian border to the demilitarized zone and killed nearly 300 guerrillas, military spokesmen reported today.

The U.S. command said the North Vietnamese shot down five American helicopters, raising to 6,295 the number of U.S. aircraft reported lost in Vietnam war during nearly a decade of fighting.

Comsat Rocket Insured

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The first U.S. space rocket ever insured against failure—at a premium of $872,000—attempts to hurl a commercial communications satellite into orbit today.

The Communications Satellite Corp. negotiated the policy with International underwriters who will pay Comsat $4,570,000 if the Delta rocket fails to place the spacecraft in a desired orbit.

That's 75 per cent of comsat's $6,100,000 investment in the launching, which is scheduled for 6:10 p.m. EST.

Comsat is the U.S. representative on the 70-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium—Intelsat—and is paying 53 per cent of the $11,500,000 cost of the satellite, rocket and launch. The other members did not insure their 47 per cent share of the price tag.

The satellite is the sixth in the Intelsat III series, three of which are in stationary orbits 22,300 miles above the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian Oceans, forming a global network. The newest satellite is to hover above the Atlantic.

Two other Intelsat III satellites failed to reach orbit in September, 1968 and July, 1969.

U.S. Scientist Retracts Plea for Moon A-blast

HOUSTON (Reuters) — A scientist who caused a storm of controversy by suggesting that the United States should explode an atomic bomb on the far side of the moon said Tuesday night he has changed his mind.

Dr. Gary Latham of Columbia University told a news conference that although seismologists might like to get readings from the core of the moon which a nuclear blast would provide, radiation from such a blast would harm radioactive measurements of the moon in its natural state.

Latham is attending the first lunar science conference here at which scientists are reporting discoveries made during the study of moon rocks and dust brough back to earth by Apollo 11 astronauts.

Protests followed Latham's proposal, in a speech in San Francisco Dec. 16, that a nuclear device could be detonated on the lunar surface to obtain an analysis going down to the core of the moon.

Latham said he now has suggested to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration that they find another way of creating a large impact on the lunar surface.

"This is his answering service."

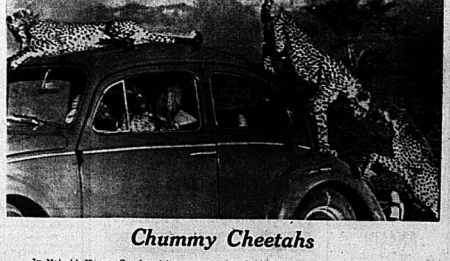
Frozen Lake Will Be Melted In Hunt for Remains of Ark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A team of scientists and explorers plans to melt a frozen lake on Mount Ararat in Turkey in hopes of finding the remains of Noah's Ark.



The $1,000,000 project, announced Tuesday, is based on discovery last year of several pieces of hand-tooled wood, believed to be more than 4,000 years old, deep in a glacier at the 14,000-foot level on the mountain in northeast Turkey near the Soviet border.

Ralph E. Crawford, president of Search Foundation, Inc., Washington, D.C., told a news conference the expedition will climb the 17,000-foot peak this spring to study ways to melt the 100- by 450-foot ice field, possibly by using volcanic steam. Recovery of an estimated 50 tons of ancient timbers is expected in the summer of 1971.

Fernand Navarra, French explorer who found the timbers in a deep crevasse, said he believes they are from the original Noah's Ark of biblical history.

Crawford said the timbers have been dated at 4,000 to 5,000 years old by methods which measure the rate of decay of radioactive carbon in the wood.

The prow of a ship was seen jutting from the Mount Ararat ice pack by aviatsnche workers in 1840. Since then, commercial pilots have reported sighting a ship-like shadow in the ice near the top of a treeless mountain.

Spanning A Century

Ontario School for the Deaf students Steven Bradshaw and Helen Woodward are seen beside huge 45-foot sign which will mark the school's 100 years of operation. The sign "1870 - 1970" will be hoisted to school roof for 1970 anniversary year.

OSD Getting Ready For A Centennial Year

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Preparations for year-long celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of the Ontario School for the Deaf in Belleville are underway this week.

As many as a dozen or more functions relating to the centennial are planned for the year, first of which will be on Friday afternoon.

An opening parade, with floats, and the school body taking part will leave from Belleville city hall ending up at the OSD on Dundas Street West. The parade gets underway at 1:30 p.m.

"There will be a number of floats depicting school operation over the past 100 years," commented Peter Kitcher, assistant school superintendent. "The student body will walk in the parade or ride in school buses."

Mr. Kitcher said the actual anniversary of the school in Belleville is Oct. 26. On or about that day a special function is planned with Department of Education officials to be invited.

In preparation for the anniversary year celebrations the school shop personnel have been busy in recent weeks fabricating two mammoth signs symbolizing the 100 years during which the school has been in operation. Following Friday's parade, the signs will be hoisted to the top of the school administration building where they will remain fixed for the balance of the year.

But the anniversary will also have a personalized touch. As a fund-raising effort, anniversary buttons have been prepared for sale to school staff members and others.

OWRC Soon May Call Tenders On $3,000,000 Plant Project

The Ontario Water Resources Commission is expected to call tenders some time in February for construction of the secondary treatment facility and addition to the sewage treatment plant in Belleville's Prince Ward area.

City manager J. R. Reynolds said the latest word from the OWRC was that final approval for the expenditure was now being awaited from the Ontario Municipal Board and that tenders were expected to be called in February.

Tenders to be called would include construction of a pressure sewer system required for plant operation.

Cost estimate of the work is in the neighborhood of $3,000,000.

Although the Foster Ward water pollution control plant was built by the city in the early 1930s, the plant for some time has been opened and operated by the OWRC.

Belleville residents have been paying toward the cost of the yet-to-be-built secondary treatment plant through a one mill levy on property and a sewer rate on their water bill.

"The money is going into a special fund and will mean the new facility will be built for sooner than otherwise," stated Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Big Week For City Jaycees

Belleville has joined with many other parts of the world this week in celebrating International Jaycee Week.

And that means approximately 400,000 active Jaycees in the world will be assessing and publicizing the work and aims of their clubs.

So too, in Belleville. The members of the Belleville Jaycees are attempting this week to make citizens aware of their organization's projects and principles.

The 37-member Belleville chapter received its charter in 1961.

Its membership consists of people from all walks of life.

Spokesman for the club, Gerry Gill, explained that the Jaycees was not a service club, but a source of training for men in leadership under the theme of "young men in action".

"We run courses in leadership and effective speaking and we better ourselves through helping other people," he said.

The members also have an opportunity to variously develop themselves through working on community projects. Money matters, personnel and entertainment are examples of chores with which Jaycees are provided.

The organization is not dependent on anyone for grants and raises its own operational funds. Many projects raise money and many are community services.

Any male from 18 to 40 years of age who is employed can be a member of the organization and take part in its projects and bi-monthly meetings at the Belleville Shrine Club.

In the past the Jaycees have worked with the Ontario Water Resources Commission in taking samples of the Bay of Quinte for the purpose of pollution prevention.

It was responsible for organization of the Belleville Week parade and will organize the Winter Carnival parade to be held shortly.

Other future projects include a Home and Sport show, and a Junior Achievement setup.

Regular projects include the Citizen of the Year, the Belleville Bowe'en Howl, Teen Driving Championships, Brotherhood Week and the Rose Queen Pageant.

A Term Begins

Frank Rabel (right) is welcomed to first term as Loyalist chairman by college president J. K. Bradford, and (centre) retiring chairman Judge J. C. Anderson.

New Chairman at Loyalist

Frank Rabel, Frankford, was unanimously elected chairman of the Board of Governors of Loyalist College last night.

The assistant manager of Bata Engineering Division, Mr. Rabel has been a member of the board since it was established in 1967. He formerly served as vice-chairman of the board and chairman of the building committee.

Mr. Rabel succeeds Judge J. C. Anderson, a member of the original board and chairman since 1968.

John Donelan, Napanee, also a member of the original board, was elected vice-chairman. He is technical director of Napanee District Secondary School.

The new chairman of the Loyalist Board is a native of Czechoslovakia. He has served as mayor of Frankford and president of the Frankford Lions Club. Mrs. Rabel is a member of Frankford village council and the couple have two sons and a daughter.

IN MEMORIAM

LAZIER — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Lorne Lazier, who passed away Jan. 7, 1966.
Treasured thoughts of one so dear,
Often bring a silent tear,
And whatever life may bring,
Memories long last.
Years roll on but memories last
Sadly missed and ever remembered by his wife and family.

KELLSMER — In loving memory of our darling daughter and sister Theresa, who passed away Jan. 7, 1967 at the age of what was 17 years and 10 days old.
God knew our home was full of love,
That his bills were hard to climb,
So He closed her weary eyelids,
And whispered, "Child, be mine."
Away in the beautiful hills of God,
Where the flowers bloom and never fade,
We will meet our little one there,
We miss her so and her baby ways.
Why, but we spent our happiest days
In our memory we see Theresa just the same,
As long as we live we'll cherish her name.
—Forever loved and missed by her husband Donald and by her father, brothers and sisters, Cathy, Linda Anne, Judy, Michael and Neil.

SERO — In loving memory of a dear brother Nick Sero who passed away one year ago Jan. 7, 1969.
I think of him in silence,
He came I can't recall,
There is nothing left to answer,
But his picture on the one so dear,
—Always remembered by sister Mary, brother-in-law Arthur and family.

SHATRAW — Alfred Henry — In loving memory of a dear husband and father who passed away three years ago today, January 7th, 1967.
Though his smile is gone forever,
And his face we cannot see,
Still we have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much.
His memory is our keepsake,
With which we'll never part,
God has him in His keeping,
We have him in our hearts.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by wife Jessie, daughter Sharon and son-in-law Bill.

Action Postponed By Planning Board

TRENTON — This town's planning board has deferred immediate decision on three proposals from the Department of Municipal Affairs for re-organizing Quinte - area land planning.

The board last night decided to give the suggestions more serious consideration. A meeting then will be called to discuss choices.

Planning board chairman W. R. Patrick told board members that town council was looking to them for guidance and specific advice.

The board could be of "real service" to council in the situation, he stressed.

"This could be the single most important step in 100 years and we want to be sure we make the right move," councillor Paul Tripp said at last night's joint meeting of council and the planning board.

Councillor Tripp was more explicit: "It's important that our decision be similar to that of Belleville because of the similarity of our situations."

Clerk - comptroller O. W. Larry, who feels that zoning and government are pretty well "inter - related", outlined his intervretation of the specific problem.

"The most critical factor is that the planning board is advisory only, so, in order for the board to be effective, there must be a direct relationship with the governing body," Mr. Larry explained.

He said it was his understanding that Hastings County council favors a county planning unit while the southerly portion of Hastings County is in opposition to their inclusion with north Hastings.

It was the clerk-comptroller's opinion that the planning body may have to be altered to coincide with the establishment of a regional government.

He also felt that the provincial government was attempting to divide the province into planning units and "because there was no unanimity—the Minister offered the three proposals to get action.

Of the three suggestions the Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough favored the first two, all but eliminating the initial proposal. The favored proposals were:

(1) Replacement of existing planning boards with three — Belleville, Trenton and Hastings County — with joint planning committees as co-ordinators.

(2) Establishment of a joint planning area to embrace Belleville, Trenton and all of Hastings County, with retaining planning areas being dissolved or remaining as subsidiary planning areas.

The initial proposal which was downgraded by Mr. McKeough included continuation of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board and establishing the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board and establishment of a new joint planning area for Hastings County.

Woman Is First Road Victim

TRENTON — The Quinte area's first traffic fatality of 1970 occurred Tuesday night just west of Trenton.

Mrs. Velma Mary Vrenckenen, 34, RR1, Carrying Place, died in Trenton Memorial Hospital after being struck by a car on Highway 2 just west of the Second Dug Hill road, say police.

A spokesman for Brighton OPP detachment said Mrs. Vrencken had been a passenger in a truck owned and operated by her husband, Harry.

The truck stopped on the north shoulder of the highway because of mechanical trouble. The victim alighted from the truck and was attempting to cross the road behind the vehicle to get assistance.

She was struck by a car driven by Melvin Stafford, 69, Trenton, police said.

First Baby A Winner

Rhonda Lynn, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mostman, 639 Sidney St., Belleville, is the winner of the first - baby - of - the - year contest.

The Mostmans' first child, Rhonda Lynn was born New Year's Day at Belleville General Hospital and weighed eight pounds, 13 ounces.

The contest was sponsored by 19 local merchants and The Intelligencer.

Trenton Planning Board Hears Developer's Protest

TRENTON—Tuesday night's joint session of council and the planning board heard objections from a local land developer to conditions set down by the Department of Municipal Affairs.

The planning board will now review the protest of Eben James, a principal in Fraser-Glenburnie Development Ltd., to Queen's Park conditions for acceptance of changes in the town's official plan.

Fraser-Glenburnie's 16-acre waterfront development on Wharf Street is the issue. The project, consisting of four or five apartment buildings, parking space and a recreation area, is to be situated on land reclaimed from the Bay of Quinte near the downtown business section.

A population density of 50 persons per acre and a finished height of 351.64 feet above sea level — 1.5 feet higher than the adjacent existing dock — were the conditions set down by the department before approval is granted for a change in the town's official plan.

However Mr. James asserted that the landfill project shouldn't be higher than the dock. Wharf Street or the surrounding area would be vulnerable to flooding when a heavy rainfall occurs or the water level of the Bay of Quinte rises, he said.

He also contended that 250 apartments with 3 persons each for a total of 750 people and a population density of 75 persons per acre were required to make the project an economic feasibility.

Mr. James said that the group wouldn't proceed any further with the project (the land fill is installed and is currently eight inches above the level of the dock) until rezoning permission is granted by the department.

Councillor Paul Tripp agreed with Mr. James and found it "hard to believe" that the department could impose such conditions. He urged that the planning board recommend these changes to the DMA.

A second request by Mr. James called for rezoning of the old mill yard property on Wragg Street, just east of Erie Technological Products.

At present the 11-acre property is zoned industrial. Mr. James claims it is unsuitable for industry and therefore should be redesignated residential.

Two years ago Mr. James made a similar request to have the town's official plan changed as a step to rezoning the property. The request was turned down by the municipal affairs department.

Location of the property between a railroad track and an industry (Eloris Chemicals Products) was believed to be the reason for the department's refusal.

Mr. James said that prior to the previous rezoning request he had all but constructed a deal with an industry. The industry rejected the land after taking soil tests. The tests apparently revealed that the subsoil wasn't satisfactory for industrial construction, he said.

If a zoning change were approved Mr. James proposes to construct approximately four houses per acre, making a total of 45 to 50 houses with an approximate taxation of $500 each. This would gather $20,000 - $25,000 in tax revenue for the town.

At the same time, said Mr. James, there are sewers along two sides of the property. He had already spent $800 to remove rocks and plant a hedge. Canadian National Railways will probably reduce the tracks to one and then eventually eliminate them, he added.

The tracks link Trenton and Picton and are used twice daily. They carry lumber from Marmora to Picton once a day and empty cars return by the same route.

City Flood Control Gathers Momentum

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

After more than 100 years of spring flood history in downtown Belleville, possible action on flood control measures could soon be, reconsidered.

This was suggested by Belleville Mayor J. Emerson Scott in his inaugural address this week to city council.

Referring to possible urban renewal in the city's downtown area, Mayor Scott said that before any such scheme could be commenced on a large scale whether by public or private funds some control measures to prevent spring flooding would have to be instituted.

"Nothing has really been done about this in all the 100 or more years," he said.

During the past year, the city, in co - operation with the Moira River Conservation Authority, has had a Moira River channel improvement study done by the engineers Cryster, Davis and Jorgensen of Toronto.

One of the main areas of study was possible control measures for the spring flood threat in downtown Belleville, their recommendation was the construction of an ice control dam just north of the old Lok dam opposite Belleville Crematorium.

Purpose of the dam would be to create a storage area for ice floated downstream during the spring break-up, thus preventing it from jamming up in the downtown area.

Estimated cost of the dam has been set at about $696,000.

The consulting engineers' report is soon to be presented to city council. Mayor Scott in his inaugural Address said he would press for commencement of some start in flood control measures in co-operation with the Moira River Conservation Authority.

During the past century, there has been close to a dozen serious spring floods in Belleville — the last occurring in 1936.

What About Traffic?

Some idea of the magnitude of running a city may be gauged from the fact Belleville has no fewer than 36 boards and commissions covering every facet of community affairs from parks and recreation to provision of sewer and water services and industrial promotion.

As Mayor J. Russell Scott has pointed out, the seventies in Belleville promise to be one of the most important eras in the city's development. Even if full-scale urban renewal has been relegated to the background, for a number of reasons including lack of government financial support, there are other problems to be tackled. One of these is the need to implement flood control measures.

"Nothing has really been done about this in all the past 100 or more years," said the mayor on this spring flood threat from the Moira River. He added that council would receive a report on this matter shortly.

All well and good, and Mayor Scott went on to mention other community needs. It might appear, however, that for the moment at least he has overlooked that hurting problem of synchronization of the traffic lights.

He did mention it though during the election campaign and as a member of the traffic committee it must be one of the matters uppermost in his mind.

A computer system has been mentioned and undoubtedly this will be costly. But Belleville will be a much more "liveable" place when this exasperating problem is overcome. When that day comes Belleville will also be a much more efficient place, in the knowledge that efficiency stems in large measure from even traffic and pedestrian flow.

Mayor Scott's call meanwhile for a meeting between the province and municipalities to define the extent of municipal powers at a time when some of these powers have been taken away, is timely. Municipalities must know where they stand in this regard.

Democracy?

When we hear references to the people's democracies of the Communists world, we know that those countries are not democratic in the sense of their citizens being free agents.

Communist leaders like to give the impression that everyone has a say in the affairs of the nation, but of course that is not the case. Take Ernesto Guevara, the Argentine who was one of Fidel Castro's chief lieutenants; known as Che (mate, or buddy, to his fellow Latins), Guevara was a victim of "A revolution like ours, a people's revolution, made by the will of the people, for the people, cannot advance unless each conquest, each step forward, is taken by the full mass of the public.

The theory of course is no different from our own. Hastings MPP Dr. Richard Potter for instance put it this way in a New Year statement: "It would like to see much greater involvement of the individual with government. It is necessary that people participate . . . only when we have that will we really have a true democratic system."

In the Communist world they prate about a democracy that does not exist in the sense that each individual's voice is heard. In the Western world we do have freedom of speech and all the other freedoms as well . . . but it is not a perfect democracy either because so many of us fail to make our views known, attend political meetings or even cast our ballots at election time.

Well Said

—The Sunday Times, in a review of former Prime Minister Harold Macmillan's third volume of memoirs, says of Macmillan: "Like his deliberately archaic oratorical mannerisms, or his Edwardian affectations in dress, they are part of one of the most elaborate exercises in self-concealment since Benjamin Disraeli abandoned his ringlets and settled down as the squire of Hughenden."

—Very well . . . granted that Mr. Macmillan's oratory generally was flat, uninspiring (we have parallels today in the monotonous efforts of Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Stanfield), but nevertheless he is remembered also for some memorable statements.

Not the one quoted from his book with regard to nuclear weapons — "I think that the nuclear weapon is so horrible and so destructive that it really prevented war" — but rather another one of much greater incisiveness, and on the same theme.

It was this: "War happily, has become too dangerous."

He was speaking of nuclear war of course. It goes by other descriptions too, like the "balance of terror," the point being that both sides have the power to destroy each other. Thus, when all is said and done it is the bomb, possessed by the United States and Russia, that maintains peace in the world today.

Now or Never' Says Nixon

State of Union Speech Will Emphasize Pollution Curbs

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP) — Air and water pollution, once only the concern of conservationists, now has a "new or never" commitment from a President himself and the promise of a lively fight for control of the environment.

The real battle will undoubtedly be between conservative Republicans and their party's supporters in Industry and the chief contributor of foul air and water in the United States and elsewhere.

Nixon, in a New Year's message from his ranch home but highly-polished state of California, said the 1970s must be used to clear the environment, or the country will "smother in its own waste matter. . . . It is literally now or never."

With that commitment and the signing of a bill to create an environmental council with a budget of $1,000,000 to advise him, he is at least assured of starting a large segment of the public and the press at his side, including growing support from young people.

If this program results in wholesale pollution controls, the major conflict will come from lobbyists for powerful industrialists who contribute vast amounts of money to political parties and who would have to foot a great amount of the cost of such controls.

The question is whether the new commitment against pollution will be a whole new concept and understanding of pollution control, or a patch-up effort to muzzle a few smokestacks or clean up a few sewers.

Nixon has requested $214,000,000 in the current budget to help clean up the nation's wastes. Congress finally appropriated $800,000,000 and it is not yet clear that the administration will spend the extra money.

Opposition reaction to the proposition was that the president was talking much and doing little, but observers here

About all that $2,000,000 hungry Americans have gotten so far is a year-guard action.

What three people expect as a minimum is some tasty real concrete action, such as vast federal monetary aid and incentives and laws with heavy fines and penalties, forbidding further pollution by industries and corporations.

As the Washington Post says in an editorial:

"It is good to know the president has joined the growing anti-pollution movement. The real test will come later—in whether he has come to lead or merely cheerleard."

"He's cute enough for a gringo but what a line he uses — Imagine claiming to be Prime Minister of Canada"

Hotrodding It Up The St. Lawrence

Montreal Gazette

In former years, the race for the Gold Headed Cane, symbolic of the first ship into Montreal in a new shipping season, was usually a dramatic battle which started in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and lasted for about 1,000 miles in March or April.

Now it is a matter of who passes a certain point downstream from Montreal when the bells toll the New Year.

There is a certain unfortunate dispute about whether a British or Russian vessel should have won the Gold Headed Cane.

But the real winner in the last few years has been the Montreal port. And the race this year — run on the water over the Gold Headed Cane — is spectacular evidence that Montreal is so much a winter, as well as a summer port, that it's getting very hard to distinguish between the last sailing of the old year and the first ship of the new.

Society's Scale of 'Values'

Car Parks Before Playgrounds

Peterborough Examiner

Since it is currently fashionable to comment on the seizure of the decade of the Sixties, we cannot but submit to that fashion when we think of the automobile.

The car, of course, was with us long before we entered the decade just past but the prominence it gained during the Sixties is almost legendary. The automobile is different things to different people — to some it is necessity, Vance Packard has told us that to others it is a mistress, and to some it has meant death.

One major car manufacturer currently advertises its product as a means to getting away from it all. When the wife's nagging and the boss's commands become too much, just steal away in a shining new sport coupe, with twin duo-carbs, four on the floor, torsion bar suspension and widetracks. Linus has his blanket, babies have their soothers and the all-American male has his car.

To some the car is pollution and to some Peterborough child ren it is a lost playground. If the supremacy of the automobile was ever in doubt it is now confirmed. In the south end of Peterborough a playground of the past 21 years is being converted into a parking lot.

There will be no new playground because there is no other land available in the area.

The Braidwood Playground is privately owned and the firm that owns it has been kind enough to permit its use as a playground. Now the company finds it needs more parking space for employees cars. It would hardly be fair to castigate the company. It has graciously lent the land for almost 21 years and must now serve the needs of its employees.

But that hardly makes the event any less sad. And it says very little for city council's foresight.

We have finally come to the point of giving cars preferred status while children must settle for second best.

This trend will continue until responsible members of the community make concerted efforts to rearrange our priorities.

Province Takes Over Assessment Role

Brockville Recorder and Times

Without as much as a lowering of a flag or a last hurrah, Ontario's old assessment system was laid to rest on Dec. 31.

And without so much as a welcome salute, the new system took over on the first work day of the new year, Jan. 2. The cries of pain will come later. . . . the full impact of the new assessment is not expected to be known for perhaps two years when the entire province will have been reassessed.

It has been said that the provincial government take-over of the assessment of real property in Ontario is a first step towards the eventual overhauling of the municipal governmental system into specific regions. It certainly provides the tax base for regional government if the organization of the regional assessment operation is a clue. Leeds, Grenvil and Lanark could be earmarked by the provincial government as a possible regional unit. Indeed, studies to this extent have been undertaken by the three counties and the Health Unit now operates on a bi-county basis. The school board, however, doesn't.

It is something that isn't going to happen overnight, and the five year forecast for completing the reassessment of the province provides for thereafter of at least five years. This does not mean that county studies should wait until something has been laid on the table officially though. Nor does it mean, necessarily, that we will be forced into a new level of government here either. Much will depend on the success that municipal governments have in the operation of their own municipalities and on the need for more tax money and ability to raise it by municipalities, especially county governments, are opposed to regional government. Murdo Lind, old Creighton of Lennox and Addington, said last week that he'd like to see how the government they aren't needed, that municipalities can operate efficiently. "If township could work together, with more unity, there would be less chance of the government bombing them," he explained.

But there's no turning back the clock. Tax burdens borne by the home owner and owners of industrial and commercial properties are nearing the limit. The transferring of assessment of real property from the municipality to the provincial government is aimed at bringing about a uniformity of assessment throughout the province. This has been designed to remove inequities between taxpayers in the same municipality, between persons owning different municipalities and between municipalities themselves.

The change is seen as a step towards regional government, there is another important step in the assessment system. The provincial government pays out more than $1 billion in grants to municipalities every year. These grants are paid on a needs basis formulated on the total assessment of each community. Some communities, such as Brockville, are "have" communities. This situation, always a favorable one, will disappear in the near future. And taxes may or may not go up as a result.

Neglect of the Humanities

Man—an Economic Commodity

Windsor Star

It is a sad sign of the times that human labor is more and more regarded as just another economic commodity. Manufacturers, service industries and construction companies often compete using the labor of their employees as a stake in the battle for dollars. Labor unions have not halted this trend, and leaders often seem to think of their members in terms of economic conditions whose value is subject to bargaining.

It cannot be denied that such a point of view has brought some tangible and immediate economic benefits to the workers. But the spiritual price of a corresponding decrease in human dignity may well have been too great a price to pay.

The trend to regard a man's hands as either an extension of a machine or a commodity like coal or steel, along with increasing automation and mechanization, contribute to a kind of social schizophrenia where a man's work is detached from his life and his personality.

The result of this split between a person as human being and a person as worker go deep, creating both a prevalent sense of "not really counting" and "not really caring."

It is time for employers to cease to regard their employees as mere economic entities on the balance sheets, and also time for unions to insist on more than economic benefits if essential though these be), and to have regard for the welfare of man as human being rather than as merely a worker.

But hardly makes the event any less sad. And it says very little for city council's foresight.

We have finally come to the point of giving cars preferred status while children must settle for second best.

This trend will continue until responsible members of the community make concerted efforts to rearrange our priorities.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

André Maginot, for whom the Maginot Line was named, died 35 years ago today—in 1932 — aged 52. French undersecretary for war in 1916, he joined the army as a private and was crippled for life in action. He went back into politics in 1918 and was minister in six successive cabinets. His name became the symbol for tendency to absorb bad lessons of the last war without looking forward to differences there might be in the next.

1827—Sir Sandford Fleming, the Canadian who originated and brought into being Standard Time, was born.

1955—Marian Anderson became the first Negro ever to sing at the Metropolitan Opera in New York.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—Moscow announced that German casualty-attacks northwest of Budapest forced the Red Army to evacuate Esztergom on the Danube; American heavies dropped 3,000 tons of high explosives on German communication and transport targets by day following night strikes by RAF and RCAF.

Canada Out of World Hockey

Ottawa Journal

Canada played along with the hypocritical double standards of international hockey long enough. The decision to pull out of the 1970 tournament rather than bow once more to unrealistic rules which would prevent Canada from icing anything much better than a Junior "B" team will have the support of most Canadians.

If the international hockey organization wants to perpetuate a situation whereby Canada can not use "pros" but Europe can use paid players then it will have to hold its little tournament without Canada.

Trouble with the Canadian position is that withdrawal came so late in the day. The question of Olympic eligibility over which everything foundered should have been cleared up before Hockey Canada put its team together and Canada started selling tickets to the world competition in Montreal and Winnipeg. But that is a procedural matter; not one of principle. On principle Canada was 100 per cent right to pick up its sticks.

A Massacre

Peter Worthington

In the Ottawa Journal

In Russia it's the tragedy that's been forgotten . . . officially. In Poland it still scars the soul of a generation, though it's unwise to talk — even think — about it openly.

In the West it's been something of an embarrassment, for Britain and the U.S. have had to change their positions on its cause.

It is the mixed-up massacre of the Second World War, and though there's no mystery about it, there's a lot of unanswered questions — some 10,000 of them.

Thirty years ago last month events took place that led to what's become known as the Katyn Forest Massacre where 4,500 Polish officers captured by the Russians, who'd invaded Poland in 1939 as Hitler's allies, were each shot in the back of the head and buried in three secret graves near Smolensk.

Dairy Farm Income Sliced

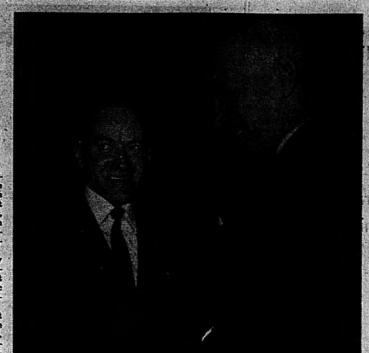
tially subsidized prices. To export such of our supplies as are not required for domestic use is estimated to be costing us about $47,000,000 in this dairy year, funds which are deducted from those made available to improve the returns of milk producers."

Those who ask why the dairy producer does not cut back production do not understand that farmers seek an economic answer to the problem of increasing costs.

The farmer had either to get higher prices, to produce more or lower his costs in some way, said Mr. McLaughlin. "He believes that to reduce his production as an individual will only reduce his income."

Orvil W. Guy, board vice-chairman, also touched on rising costs and said these threatened survival of even relatively efficient producers of industrial milk.

"In raising market prices for dairy products, milk producers are faced with shrinking markets and greater use of substitutes to remove surpluses from the domestic market," said Mr. Guy.



One of the problems was that consumption of dairy products on a milk equivalent basis "decreased almost 100 pounds per person between 1958 and 1967."

Although the number of milk producers between 1951 and 1969 declined to 221,850 from 458,058 or by 53 per cent, milk production increased in the 15-year period by 20 per cent.

Thus the process of simply eliminating or removing the smaller producer was not the answer to improving the incomes of those who remain in milk production.

"This can only be accomplished by strengthening demand or controlling total supplies," said Mr. Guy.

One of the proposals the board was investigating was a system of market-sharing quotas across Canada for dairy products, excluding fluid milk and cream. This proposal will be put before the annual meeting of the Dairy Farmers of Canada in Vancouver later this month.

Congratulations in Order

Newly-elected Warden, Gordon Lloyd (left) is properly congratulated as retiring Warden George Foster hands over the chain of office. Congratulations took up a few moments at the inaugural session of County Council, held yesterday afternoon.

Turbotrain Tests to Resume

Canada's first turbine-powered passenger train is all set to undergo a long series of cold-weather tests after fluking the grade last winter.

But, the turbotrain will not be seen on Belleville-area tracks during the test runs.

In its brief career last winter the sophisticated streamliners passed through Belleville twice daily between Toronto and Montreal.

J. A. Lomas, superintendent of transportation for the CNR Rideau area said this morning the first test runs of the turbotrain will be between Montreal and Brockville. No passengers will be carried.

Later, he expects the turbotrain will run from Montreal to Capreol in Northern Ontario, to test its performance in the very cold weather.

A Canadian National Railways spokesman said Tuesday in Montreal the turbotrain will begin indoor movements tests in a day or two before making short runs in the Montreal area.

The train then will attempt longer journeys to prove to CN officials that it is ready to go back into service on the Montreal-Toronto run.

The tests are expected to continue throughout the winter to make sure that it is entirely operational before any decision is taken to place it into scheduled service.

Find Break-in

Belleville police are investigating a break-in discovered by a police officer today at City Cleaners store on Footbridge Lane.

The break-in was discovered at 1:55 a.m. this morning when a constable noticed a small pane of glass broken in a door window.

Stolen in the break-in was a small amount of change, say police.

Prince Edward County Council Votes Hillier Reeve as Warden

By MARGARET HATLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Members of Prince Edward County council yesterday voted Hillier reeve Gordon Lloyd to the office of county warden.

When led to his seat by former wardens Earle Osenbrug and Robert Boyce, he was invested with the chain of office by retiring warden George Foster.

A representative to county council for the past six years, Warden Lloyd is also president of the Prince Edward County Chamber of Commerce.

In his inaugural address, Warden Lloyd outlined several projects for 1970 to fellow councillors. He urged county council's co-operation with Picton's Mayor H. J. McFarland in "doing something" about the Bay bridge at Belleville and the bridge at the Murray Canal. The load limit on the Belleville bridge is insufficient to the traffic needs of today, according to Mayor McFarland.

While Warden Lloyd remarked he'd "love to put my foot on a shovel turning sod for a new county home this year," he admitted that the project might not move that quickly.

"The Prince Edward County Home committee has a big chore this year, and I hope we can make a start — although we may not turn sod," said the warden.

A new home for the old county home is one of his ambitions during his term as warden. Suggesting the name Prince Edward Manor, Warden Lloyd added that a contest could give council revue at appropriate names to choose from. The proposed new county home would also bear this name.

A spokesman of a committee to investigate the possibilities of a Prince Edward county library board requested another of Warden Lloyd's goals for 1970. He was also interested in the possibility of making the county's department of welfare with the Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society under one system.

Warden Lloyd, who has served on the county road committee for six years, remarked that road work is being carried on as usual and a North Shore study hopefully will be completed soon.

Returning to county government, the new warden remarked: "I personally never some thought. We have to do something quickly if we are to survive as a county and be looked up to. We need to appoint a committee to look into this." Supporting his suggestion a committee later, he invoked a successful motion asking to appoint a special committee to investigate a form of county government for Prince Edward County.

Remarked Warden Lloyd: "It definitely has to be done and I will appoint a committee." Chosen to carry out the investigation were Picton reeve Bernard Hepburn who will act as chairman, Ameliasburg deputy reeve, Norman Post, reeve of North Marysburg Harold Harrison, Sophiasburg reeve George Foster, and Athol reeve Keith Brummell.

McFarland Stresses 'Closeness to People'

PICTON — During an address at the inaugural meeting of county council yesterday, Mayor H. J. McFarland stressed the importance of the communication between county councillors and the people they represent.

"Who works closer to the people than the warden, his reeves and deputy reeves and their township councillors?" he asked. The mayor added that many of these men in municipal life work "long hours on short pay" representing the men and women who voted them into office.

Speculating on changes in 1970, Mayor McFarland remarked: "I say to governments across Canada today, when they change this closeness they'll make one hell of a mistake. Changes possibly will be forced on our hands by the government. I hope this doesn't happen but I see where it could."

"Today," advised the mayor, "all governments should stop and look at how close you are to the people. Maybe all of your ideas are not right but if they want to look at them there is some good meat to be picked out of them."

Cheese May Be Hit

"But if we are forced to pool our milk, due to surpluses of butter and powdered milk, we may have to take the surplus of industrial milk for cheese production. This would hurt the dairy farmers of this county, most of whom ship their milk to cheese factories. If we end up with a surplus of cheese we can't sell, the farmers will be hurt.

At the present time, Mr. Tipper said, about 760 dairy farmers in Hastings ship milk to cheese factories. Only about 60 to 70 Hastings county producers ship their milk to the Pet Milk Company in Napanee for processing into powdered milk.

"County farmers are faced with two vital questions," Mr. Tipper noted. "How soon will the across-the-board subsidy for milk production be lowered or cut off altogether? And how strict will the controls instituted by the government be, if over-production becomes an acute problem? Will the quota for each farmer be enough to allow a decent standard of living for his family?

"We are over - producing, while half the world starves. The problems of agricultural production and distribution go round and round in a vicious circle and no one has found a way to break the cycle."

Most People Do A Poor Job in Communication

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We have today the most advanced technique for communication known to man, yet we do a poor job of really communicating. Sometimes people don't hear what we say because they aren't interested; they don't understand the language we use; prejudice get in the way; or they just aren't listening.

What there's a breakdown in communication we must find out how it happened. Whether it is between father and son, husband and wife, neighbors nations, we have to ask, "What got in the way?"

We don't just communicate to give answers (that is, straight news), not just to achieve agreement (the advertiser's hope), nor is our goal merely to break down barriers between men.

Communication's true goal is to enable men to reach out to one another in loving concern, so that they may walk together in love. In this way we move from communication to what the church calls communion. — Roy Bonisteel of CBC's "Man Alive" and National Co-Ordinator of Inter-Church Radio.

P.S. I always enjoy reading you wherever my travels take me across Canada. R. B.

Dear Roy: I think you have put the essence of human relations in a nutshell. If we don't communicate we get practically nowhere. And what good's that?

Dear Doris: About the girl who has landed in a wheel chair as the result of an accident, doubtless it is very boring. I have no ailment, but I find endless enjoyment in playing a guitar.

All she would need is a book for beginners and she would be able to teach herself. — B. D.

Dear Doris: To "Wheel Chair Hobbies": Why not pursue the possibility of ham radio? There are thousands of wheel chair members and many, many girls included in this hobby. As you progress as a ham, your friends spread out to the point where you can converse with anyone in the whole world. — A Well Wisher.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am in a wheel chair because of polio — but I am a housewife with five lively children.

My favorite hobby (and I have several) is liquid embroidery. I have done pictures on pillows, cotton, velveteen. This paint may also be applied to wood, glass, plastic and metal. The possibilities are infinite. — Dependent On Wheels.

Dear Doris: I am an agent for a liquid embroidery company and would be glad to send my catalogue and prices to this lady. (Wheel Chair Hobbies). — Mrs. N. H.

Dear Friends: Thank you. W. C. H. has some dandy leads here.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Joe: "I didn't realize it was so late. It will be dark soon. Let's cut across here."

Jim: "There's a car coming, but he'll slow down."

Older children, in their dark clothing, are especially vulnerable to accidents around 5 o'clock in the evening, an hour when many teen-agers are returning home. They blend into the shadows beyond the reach of headlights and a car may be upon them before the motorist realizes it.

Father: "It's almost impossible to see someone in the street when it's dusk. Always be especially careful about crossing the street when you're late coming home from after-school activities."

Discrimination Ended at College

ROCK HILL, S. C. (AP) — Walter H. Schrader Jr., a 56-year-old biologist with the State Wildlife Commission, is the first man to receive a degree in the 91-year history of Winthrop College, the South Carolina college for women. The college has admitted men to summer classes for years. But it did not grant degrees to them until Schrader filed suit in a federal court and until the legislature passed a law permitting the school to admit them to degree programs on a trial basis. Schrader received a master of arts in teaching degree.

Committee Reports Given at IODE Chapter Meet

The first regular meeting of the new year for St. Julien Chapter IODE was held at the Kiwanis Centre, Monday, January 5 with Mrs. R. Ellis, Acting Regent, presiding. There were 23 members present.

Mrs. Ellis brought greetings from former IODE members who were in Belleville during the Festive Season and Mrs. G. Hume read letters received from several others.

Mrs. R. Bailey, secretary, read a letter received from Mr. B. A. Wright, Principal of Parkdale School, thanking the Chapter for the 1970 IODE calendars sent to his school for all the classrooms.

Services secretary, Mrs. M. Kerr, reported sending 155 items of clothing, knitting and personal property bags to Provincial Headquarters in December. Mrs. Z. Harris gave a report on a Blood Donors Clinic held at Northern Electric on December 18. A Christmas parcel was also sent to Far Nursing Station in the N.W.T.

Educational secretary, Mrs. R. Ellis, read a provincial release regarding the scholarship and awards given from the Lucy Moorhead Memorial Fund for Education in 1969, and (3) First and Second War Memorial Fund Scholarships were given valued at $5,000, (Overseas) and $3,000 (Canada) respectively.

Citizenship secretary, Mrs. G. Hume, reported on the special citizenship court held on December 9 and, as world affairs convenor, gave a paper on "Tindou 70". The project is Canada's major contribution to the International Oceanographic decade 1970-80.

Mrs. G. Vince, membership convener, presented a new member, Mrs. M. Lack, who was inducted and welcomed into the Chapter.

Mrs. G. Wadds, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the new slate of officers who will be installed in office at the annual meeting in February.

The various group leaders gave financial reports. Mrs. J. Hepburn, Group Two Leader, announced that Mrs. J. Zalatoris who held Ticket No. 207 was the winner of the floral oil painting by Mr. Tichiken, drawn on December 22.

Mrs. Ellis announced that the provincial annual meeting will be held in Hamilton April 22, 23 and 24. An executive meeting will be held at her home Tuesday, January 27 to approve the Chapter's annual reports.

The meeting concluded with cookies and tea served.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

SPRINGBROOK — BONARLAW WI

Mrs. Gerald Burkitt opened her home for the Dec. meeting of the WI with an attendance of 16 members and visitors.

Mrs. W. Barlow gave the reports on money donations and gifts to shutins. Mrs. Cyril McKeown put on a Christmas decoration demonstration. Readings were given by Mrs. Jean Williams, Mrs. George Thompson, Mrs. Clarence McKeown and Mrs. Cyril McKeown.

Mrs. Gerald Burkitt presented three groups with decorations for Christmas and each was to make a decoration in a set time. A prize was given for the best one.

In charge of gifts was Joanne Burkitt. At the close of the meeting the gifts were drawn by numbers.

The hostess and assistants served a lunch following the gift exchange.

The January meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. W. J. Barlow.

Unorthodox Approach To Alcoholism Works

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was glad to see that you approve of the somewhat unorthodox approach to alcoholism. Twenty years ago, such a concept would have been labeled "heartless, cruel — unthinkable."

ANN LANDERS

I know because I was a hopeless drunk for ten miserable years. My wife lied and covered up for me, never raised her voice or criticized me in any way. The neighbors called her a saint. In the meantime, my drinking got worse and worse. The day I accidentally stepped on the cat and broke his neck (I was stoned, of course) my wife showed me a side of herself I had never seen before. She packed my bags, threw me out of the house and told me not to come back until I had licked the booze. That's the day I decided to get some help.

I located the Chicago Council on Alcoholism at 6 North Michigan and they saved my life. This outfit has a motto for wives of alcoholics. "Don't nag. Don't hide the liquor. Let him drink. If he gets too hard to live with, throw him out and keep him out until he takes steps to get help. And be prepared to support yourself and your family if you have to." If my wife hadn't tossed me out, I'd still be on the bottle. I know this is true because she tried every other way and it didn't work. Sign me — ONE DAY AT A TIME.

* * *

DEAR ANNE: Alcoholism is now a major public health problem. A million people a day cross the line from social drinking to problem drinking. New medications, new techniques and new approaches are being tried everywhere. The technique outlined in your letter has proven to be one of the most effective. Thank you for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm glad someone wrote in and asked who to contact about leaving his body to a medical school. Death is not a pleasant thing to think about, but it's a subject we should come to grips with.

The obvious reason for giving one's remains to a medical school, is of course, to give a continuing gift that will benefit mankind. Additional benefits which might not cross the mind are these. Virtually all funeral expenses are saved. Only a small religious (or non-religious) service need be held. And there is no grave-marker or tombstone to buy.

I gave my body to the Anatomical Board of Texas some time ago. The Board is letting me use it until I am through with it, however. — R.C., an M.D. of El Paso.

DEAR R.C.: Your comment that the Board is letting you use your body until you are through with it is comforting to say the least. It brings to mind the well publicized highway sign in South Africa which reads: "Drive Carefully. Christiaan Barnard Is Watching."

* * *

Confidential to GROWING WEARY AND READY TO QUIT: Read these lines by Stephen Vincent Benet. Stick them on your mirror. Paste them in your hatband. You need soinething to hang on to. This could be it: "We can fail and fail, but deep against the failure something goes forward, something lights a match. Something gets up from Sangamon County ground, armed with a bitten and blunted axe. And after twenty thousand wasted strokes, brings the tall hemlock crashing to the ground."

The Experts Say

Early Detection of Disabilities Necessary

MONTREAL (CP) — Physicians generally agree that the single greatest hope for children with perceptual learning disabilities is detection at an early age—preferably at the kindergarten level.

For this reason, the Quebec Association for Children with Learning Disabilities has as one of its goals the establishment of a service that would test every child on entering school. Methodical examination would ensure that children with this handicap are discovered before too much damage is done to their personalities.

If these children receive special training on how to cope with the disability, and then learn to function relatively normally despite it, says the association, they can progress through school and university. Many have above-average IQs.

On the other hand, if the children go undetected, they may be brushed off as lazy, deaf or retarded until they become sufficiently discouraged and emotionally battered to drop out of school and withdraw from social contacts.

Ideally, every parent and person who works with children should know what to look for in a child with possible learning disabilities.

Laura Lehtinen, an American pioneer in learning disabilities research, says in an article distributed by the association that "to say a child is perceptually handicapped is another way of saying he has minimal brain damage without intellectual retardation."

"This damage has changed the way in which he perceives the world and the way in which he thinks about what he perceives. The child with a perceptual handicap overlooks important details or focuses on them so strongly that he misses the whole.

"He may grasp aspects of the whole but not their relationships or the whole itself. He hears meanings but fails to attend to word structures. He mishears word structures and is misled in their meanings."

Miss Lehtinen describes impaired perception this way:

"You may have had the experience of driving along the highway and noticed an advertisement, but so briefly that you were unable to identify what the picture was about."

A child with learning disabilities may know what a word means but be unable to write or read it; he may know what he wants to say but lacks the ability to formulate correct sentences; hearing impairment may prevent him from understanding spoken explanations.

Fortunately, the association says, experience has indicated that early training and special education help the child to learn more normal ways of perceiving. He can use the deviations by recognizing and working against them.

At present, the Learning Centre of the Montreal Children's Hospital is able to offer remedial help to a limited number of children. One session, designed to aid both students and teachers, was the centre's summer program in 1969.

Forty-four children were admitted and assigned to groups according to their age and special requirements. Each had a supervising teacher and other, less experienced personnel. The ratio was usually three teachers to four children.

Teachers, psychiatrists, speech therapists, social workers and medical students all attended the six-week session to observe and involve themselves with the children.

The first two weeks were spent with centre director Dr. Sam Rabinovitch, who discussed various aspects of learning disabilities.

Then during the next four weeks, the children—all 10 years old or younger—attended for three hours daily. Classes, included 45-minute gymnasium sessions to improve motor skills, creative drama and individual meetings with a music therapist.

As the association said in its December bulletin, these children "are disabled when it comes to learning how to make friends, how to behave in socially acceptable ways, how to go to a store to make a specific purchase, how to make change, how to travel on a bus, buy tickets, get off at the right stop, etc."

"There are no magic formulas or mysterious potions. We must work to understand what problems our children encounter and learn by educating ourselves to help our children to become 'drop-ins' to life."

Procedures for Entertaining at Fondue Party

Rules for fondue service are important. Mary Moore outlines fondue procedure today and tomorrow will give you some sauces to accompany these exciting prepared-at-the-table foods.

By MARY MOORE
(First Instalment;
Second Tomorrow)

On a flight out of Vancouver to Winnipeg via Edmonton and Saskatoon one of the stewardesses recognized me. When they had a few minutes to spare four of them gathered around me for Fondue information. They were going to have a Fondue party on Gray Cup Day in Winnipeg. Then the pilot and flying officer wanted to see me too for they were going to the same party so in the cockpit I promised to send them all of my Fondue releases.

Home I decided to update the sauces and technique so had a Fondue party here for six.

FONDUE RULES:

1) You must have a burner hot enough to maintain fat temperature at 360 deg. Fahr. Sterno and methyl hydrate are not hot enough. The new butane burners are ideal.

2) Do not have lighted candles or tall wine glasses on table. Have handle of fondue pot at an oblique angle between guests to prevent catching cuffs on it. Have fondue lid handy to put on pot in case oil flames. (NOTE: I have never heard of this happening.)

3) Heat oil (I used corn oil) in fondue pot on stove to 375 deg. Fahr. before transferring it to table burner. This gives it a good head start.

4) Provide two sets of forks; one set of fondue forks for each guest and one set of dinner forks so that hot fondue forks never touch and burn guests' lips. We found steak knives handy for Roast Beef suggestions.

5) Set table with the two forks and knife if desired a forks and knife if desired and dinner plate at each setting.

6) For six people I provided four pounds boneless, well-trimmed sirloin steaks, hung four weeks and cut into 1½" pieces. Beef tenderloin could be provided instead if you can buy it in your area. The cubes of beef were piled neatly on two breakfast plates and lined up vertically with fondue pot to make reaching easy for guests at both ends of table. A big round table is ideal for fondue service.

With the Beef Bourgignonne we served a generous salad and a generous basket of hot garlic French stick slices.

Dinner Menu

Chicken Pilaf (see Tuesday); Generous Tossed Salad; Hot Buttered French Stick; Assorted Fresh Fruits; Sliced Christmas Cake; Tea.

Canadian Declares Massacre Routine

TORONTO (CP) — A doctor who directed Canadian medical aid in Vietnam for five years says he knew about the Song My massacre two weeks after it happened but did not report it because such slaughters were commonplace.

Dr. Ally Vennema said Monday night that his hospital was six miles from Song My, where at least 110 civilians were alleged to have been murdered by United States troops.

Dr. Vennema said another reason why he did not report the incident was because the U.S. forces would argue that all the dead were Viet Cong, "even the two-year-olds."

He said he saw the bodies of women and children who had been shot after U.S. search-and-destroy missions in the Duc Pho district.

Dr. Vennema was born in Holland and lived for some time in Burlington, Ont. He now is taking a post-graduate medical course in England.

In Toronto on a two-week Canadian speaking tour sponsored by the Quakers and the Voice of Women, he said the South Vietnam government is corrupt and that the Americans should leave so the two Vietnams can work out their own problems.

Transplant Of Veins Developed

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto doctor said Tuesday he has developed a vein transplant technique to aid stroke victims.

Dr. William M. Lougheed, assistant professor of surgery at the University of Toronto, said the operation involves the transplant of a vein from the patient's leg to head to replace the blocked section of an artery which could cause a stroke.

He said the operation was performed for the first time at Toronto General Hospital Dec. 8. The patient, a 56-year-old woman, has recovered.

Dr. Lougheed said he was among two teams of surgeons who removed the woman's leg vein and inserted it into a small opening cut above the blocked section of the artery. The vein then was threaded out of the skull under the skin and reconnected to the artery in the neck below the blockage, thus acting as a bypass.

The bypassing vessel immediately began to pulsate, team members said, carrying blood to the starved area of the patient's brain.

Dr. Lougheed said the technique could be used on patients in early stages of hardening of the arteries before they had suffered strokes.

Kingston and Peterborough Join Major Ontario Urban Areas

TORONTO (CP) — An economist with the Ontario department of treasury and economics says that while Ontario people tend to concentrate in seven major urban areas, four new areas are developing.

Rudolph Kogler, reporting on population trends in the province, said 53 per cent of the province's population in 1968 was concentrated in the cities of Toronto, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Kitchener, Ottawa and Sudbury.

"The concentration of people in the seven major urban areas is expected to continue as people move away from rural areas," Mr. Kogler said.

"In addition to the seven areas already mentioned, some smaller centres of population, the Lakehead, Niagara, Kingston and Peterborough—are forming."

He said their attraction is that "they are the centres where goods and ideas are exchanged and where political, cultural and social life are concentrated. Natural increase was the dominant factor in population growth until 1951, but it was surpassed in 1956, 1957 and 1968 by growth through migration.

Mr. Kogler's report emphasized the distribution of population in Ontario—in the district of Kenora one person has three square miles of living space while in York County there are 2,288 people for every square mile.

But crowding in southern Ontario is not all that bad, by international standards; its density of 136 persons a square mile compares with England's 923 persons.

Mr. Kogler, in an article published in Ontario Economic Review, says that since 1966 immigration has replaced native reproduction as the main source of population in the province.

"If the current fertility trends continue, migration will become the principal source of future population growth in Ontario, provided that the present high levels of immigration into Canada are maintained," he says.

"If immigration declines and the birth rates do not improve the rate of growth of Ontario's population will revert to the level of the 1950s," when it was only .30 per cent annually.

Ontario Lottery Control Planned

TORONTO (CP) — A program for the control of all forms of lotteries, made possible through changes in federal legislation effective Jan. 1, will be presented to the Ontario cabinet this week.

Leslie Rowntree, minister of financial and commercial affairs, said in an interview Tuesday that his department had said.

Banquet Licence Refused As Fire Escapes Poor

TORONTO (CP) — A Metropolitan Toronto police superintendent said Tuesday a banquet licence for a New Year's Eve party at a Roman Catholic Church was refused because the church hall did not have adequate fire escapes.

Supt. James Morgan said an inspector of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario turned down an application for the licence because of inadequate fire escapes and then told police that he thought the party would be held anyway.

Peter, Ambrose McCabe and six parishioners who acted as waiters at the hall have been charged with selling liquor.

been assigned the task of preparing a program just before Christmas.

The program includes control of many forms of lottery through licensing of charitable organizations but the idea of a provincial lottery "has not been contemplated," Mr. Rowntree said.

Strictly Personal

The Appropriate Varies

By SYNDEY J. HARRIS

When I was 20 years old, I grew a moustache in order to look older; more responsible, more authoritative. It served its purpose, and after a few years I got rid of the thing.

Thirty years later, I have grown another moustache — in order to look younger, more dashing, more contemporary. It seems to be working as well as it did the first time — only in reverse.

This is the strange thing about style, or fashion, or, to use the currently contemptible word, "image" — the same accessory, or appurtenance, or impediments, can have opposite effects at different times.

Beards are even more illustrative than moustaches. A beard in the past was a symbol of age, position, dignity, stability, and propriety. A beard today is a symbol of youth, dissent, hedonism, irreverence, and activism. A man my age is too old to wear a beard these days!

Only greasy and sinister characters wore sideburns a few years ago; now the sideburn is a status symbol in its upward mobility from the shins to the earlobes. And now that the pukka sahib types are wearing "gangster" suits with stripes and wide lapels, the gangster types are reduced to wearing conservative Brooks Brothers suits with button-down shirts.

Peri passu, the same has happened to the female image. In the past, little girls used to dress up like their mothers; when mother and daughter walked down the street together, daughter was a miniature of mother. Now, mothers dress up to their daughters, and from the back it is hard to tell which generation is encased in which body-stocking or mini-skirt. They both look like teeny-boppers on parade.

Actually, the voluminous skirt worn by fashionable women in the 18th Century — which later became the "hoop-skirt" — was not prompted by modesty, but by the "fashion of pregnancy" that spread through the French court before the birth of the son of Marie Antoinette and Louis XVI.

The Queen's ladies-in-waiting began wearing skirts stuffed with cushions to make themselves appear pregnant; they coveted "shirts of the season," labeled "four - months skirt," and so forth, whose voluminousness adjusted the gestation period of the Queen.

Beauty is not the only quality that exists in the mind of the beholder; "appropriateness" is an even more subjective matter — and a matter of which period in history we are living in. All the great heroes, from the Bible through Kit Carson, wore long hair down to their shoulders; only in 19 th century has this been deemed "feminine."

Momentary Blizzard

Spectators turn their backs as air cushioned Aquaterra leaves snow spray in its wake during demonstration run on Trent River Tuesday.

Trenton firm will manufacture machines and sell them as a year-round recreational proposition.

Here Comes the Aquaterra

Riding on Air, New Machine Skimming Into Production

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON—The Aquaterra is a very sophisticated toy for adults.

An English translation of the Latin words means "water-land" and the air-cushion vehicle designed and constructed by Komar Engineering Ltd. of Trenton has the ability to travel over land, water, ice and snow.

Gord Komar, the designer of the aquaterra and principle investor in Komar Engineering Ltd., calls it "a new dimension in transportation".

He stresses that the vehicle, of fibreglass and aluminum construction, can be used year round as a recreational machine and offers capability of travel in once inaccessible places.

The aquaterra is capable of carrying up to three people. It is powered by two 25-horse-as hour can be reached on ice power snowmobile-type gas engines. One engine is for lift, the other for thrust.

A flexible skirt allows the machine to travel over obstacles up to 12 inches high and it can climb a 13-percent grade. Speeds up to 40 miles and 30 miles an hour on water.

Komar Engineering will begin manufacturing the machines this spring with the hope of producing 5 machines per week and 250 a year.

Distribution will be through a system of independent marine operators in Ontario and the retail price is estimated at $4,000 by Mr. Komar.

Promotion of the aquaterra will be done by a series of dealer demonstrations and also by attending the Sudbury Winter Fair which begins Feb. 1.

"There's a big market for this machine and we're one of the first ones into it," emphasized Mr. Komar who hopes to expand sales into the United States if his product meets with acceptance in Ontario.

"We're aiming at sports enthusiasts, trappers, hunters and government services such as the department of lands and forests," he explained.

Already he has plans on the board for a second machine — Aquaterra Mark 11, a two - seater of smaller construction and considerably lower-priced.

At present the Komar Engineering Ltd. is operating out of the basement of a barn located a mile north of the Macdonald - Cartier Freeway on Highway 33.

Mr. Komar said that the staff would be increased from the present six to 15 when production begins.

An interesting feature of the Aquaterra is the low pressure beneath the skirt. The manufacturer says that the pressure is so low that a person could lie down and be unharmed when the machine passed over him.

The production model will be 14 feet long, six feet, six inches wide, and six feet six inches high at the top of the rear fan housing. But the operator and passengers sit only 24 inches above the ground.

A demonstration was held Tuesday at the mouth of the Trent River. Mr. Komar admitted he felt tense at first when the choke stuck, even though he knew there was nothing seriously wrong with the machine.

In motion there's a gliding sensation not unlike that of a plane ride. But there also is an awareness of speed while travelling across the ice.

The aquaterra is similar to other air cushion vehicles in that it requires a large area to turn — a 180 degree radius.

An Ottawa-based industry is currently manufacturing another model with a design they obtained from a British company.

Another One . . .

George Storms makes another catch. George has been fishing in Belleville harbor almost as far back as he can remember, regardless of season. Ice-fishing usually nets him a good run of small perch.

Weather No Bar For This Angler

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

For a veteran fisherman, the weather is never inclement, nor is the season.

In fact, most fishermen will tell you those are just excuses used by amateurs to give up the fight.

That is the way George Storms sees it, and he has been fishing for the past 30 years.

Usually, mornings see George out on the harbor with his chisel — making the way ready for another assault on the fish population.

He chisels an average eight holes when he begins his day, waiting as long as 45 minutes at one till he switches to the next.

"I catch six - to - seven - inch Perch. Some days my catch is maybe nine fish — while other days as many as 18," explained Mr. Storms.

"They run good most days. The mornings are usually the best. I find — better than afternoons, anyway."

Mr. Storms has lived in Belleville for the past 45 years, and has fished in the harbor and the Bay for as far back as he can remember.

"I was born and brought up as a fisherman, and I still enjoy it," he remarked.

For bait, he uses the eyes of the fish he has caught, because "they bit on that better than anything else".

And, as George will remind you, there is no greater satisfaction for him than sitting down to a hearty feed of fish.

Thriller Is Next On Guild Playbill

By BARRY GRILLS
(Staff Reporter)

The Belleville Theatre Guild is approaching readiness for presentation of its third major production of the season — Wait Until Dark.

Resident artistic director, Roy Higgins, is working under optimism as director of the play in the wake of two former theatrical successes, Blithe Spirit and Dark of the Moon.

Wait Until Dark, by Fredric Knott, is, according to Mr. Higgins, "one of the best thrillers ever written."

On top of that, for those who have seen the movie version starring Audrey Hepburn, Mr. Higgins feels that the stage version is stronger than the movie version.

It is the story of a blind girl terrorized by a group of criminals, in her home seeking a doll filled with heroin.

Starring as the blind girl is Sandra Fort, just recently arrived from Kitchener who obtained acting experience in that area.

Also in the cast are Robert Lawton, Ronald MacPherson, Gary Lafferty, James Williamson and Tammy Reid.

Two nights of the 10-night run of the play are already sold out.

The Guild's Eastern Ontario Drama Festival play, The Lark, is due for adjudication immediately following closing night of Wait Until Dark.

Give 'Em Enough Rope . . .

PICTON — "Rally round the flag boys" — the rope has been cut.

Picton recreation director Wayne Ring, has suggested the purchase of wire, covered with nylon or plastic, for use on all flag poles in the town parks in 1970.

"Mischievous youths," he explained, "continually pull down the ropes. Recently, some mischievous person shortened the rope on the Bennet Park flag pole."

Mr. Ring feels that a sturdier rope is the only way to avoid, "losing his pall".

Scrolls for Blood Donors

PICTON—Tonight 15 Prince Edward County residents will receive honor scrolls during a blood donor clinic sponsored by the Prince Edward County Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Dr. Earl Taylor will present the scrolls.

Top donor noted in the Women's Hospital Auxiliary records is Wallace Frost, Picton, who has made 72 donations to the blood bank.

Today's clinic, first of three scheduled for 1970, has set its goal at 200 pints.

Co-convener of the clinic, Mrs. John Mathies, today reported an urgent appeal from Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital for a donation of at least 175 pints.

Prince Edward County residents willing to contribute to the clinic's success can donate blood this evening from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Father of Aquaterra

Gord Komar points out specially designed fans on the Aquaterra — an air cushion vehicle which he designed and intends to begin manufacturing in Trenton this spring. Komar's brainchild of fibreglass and aluminum construction, weighs 750 pounds and can be transported by trailer.

Even the Kitchen Sink

Ken Wright, stage manager for Wait Until Dark, the Belleville Theatre Guild's upcoming play, installs a kitchen sink on the set of the play in the Pinnacle Playhouse.

Ecologist's Warning

Prosperity Not Compatible With Welfare, He Says

HALIFAX (CP) — National prosperity is incompatible with human welfare, Dr. Donald Dodds, an ecologist at Acadia University in Wolfville, N.S., says.

National prosperity as a goal is incompatible with a quality environment, he said in a lecture here.

It inspired physical and mental health, created stress, required sacrifice of personal freedom, increased international competition for resources and was not conducive to world peace.

"Some of the American dreams are turning into nightmares. General Motors operates on a budget greater than any world government, except the United States and the U.S.S.R."

Industrial empires were nurtured by an advertising industry which created champagne tastes in people with beer incomes.

The common man felt inferior if he did not have an American-made 400-horsepower death trap on wheels and color television.

"In Saskatchewan there are more television sets than houses with indoor bathrooms," he said. The tendency was to get the car and build the garage around it or to get the TV and build the house around it.

Dr. Dodds said regional disparity such as Nova Scotia suffered was caused by population distribution and he wondered if an industrialized province was the answer.

"We need a limited industrial growth here, based primarily on our own resources without over-exploitation. We need an agriculture growing base but we must have it without hard pesticides.

"Citizens must insist on prevention of gross pollution."

He didn't know how many tons of herbicides and pesticides were used each year in Nova Scotia. No single individual knew, he said, and not knowing was "a bloody good reason why we should know."

As early as 1961, animals in Nova Scotia were carrying pesticide residues.

"Millions of individual animals, including a few human beings, have died from pesticide poisoning in North America. We do know pesticides and herbicides can completely destroy our environment."

Dr. Dodds said man's major problem was to prevent his self-inflicted diseases from becoming malignant.

Canada Finds Allies for Hockey Cause in Sweden, Campbell

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's withdrawal from international hockey and subsequent forfeit of the 1970 world tournament continues to attract comment from sport officials on both sides of the Atlantic Ocean.

Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, predicted Tuesday additional participation of European teams in a challenge for the Stanley Cup, and Helge Berglund, Swedish Ice Hockey Federation president, said his organization plans to press for open world hockey competition.

Berglund's remarks come as a surprise, following suggestions during the weekend emergency meeting of the International Ice Hockey Federation's executive council in Geneva that the Swedes conspired with the Russians to force Canada's decision to pull out.

"We intend to work for a change at the Olympic rules, and simultaneously for open world ice hockey championship tournaments with the right for professionals to take part," Berglund said in Stockholm, likely site of the 1970 tournament now that Winnipeg and Montreal are out of the picture.

Canada withdrew its team, and its role as host country, as a result of the reneging of a rule, passed last summer at the IIHF congress in Crans, Switzerland, permitting Canada the use of nine professionals for the 1970 tournament.

Berglund insisted Tuesday that the idea to allow nine professionals was approved on condition of International Olympic Committee sanction.

"To start with," Berglund said, "Canada took no actions whatsoever, and the Canadians have been out too late with their initiatives...

"Sweden, on the other hand, raised the question at an extra meeting in Stockholm in early November last year, and, at that time, was informed by the IOC that playing against professionals should mean suspension for our players. The Canadians could not have been unaware of this reservation, added in the Crans decision."

Berglund said he hoped Canadian professional teams should be able to come to Sweden, noting that nothing prevents any team playing against professionals in exhibition games or tournaments other than the world championships.

The transplanted 1970 world tournament has been tentatively set for March 13-29 in Stockholm. Swedish officials are already working on organization and the IIHF directors will meet in Stockholm later to discuss whether the United States or Poland will be invited to become the sixth entry, taking the place left vacant by Canada.

Countries already entered are Russia, Sweden, Finland, East Germany and Czechoslovakia.

In Montreal, Campbell said he believes public opinion will eventually force the Europeans to play the Stanley Cup championship for a true world championship.

He said the Canadian withdrawal has left no true basis for anyone to compare the strengths of international teams.

The NHL president said he has doubts the Canadian brass with the IIHF could be bridged, but questioned whether it is "worth salvaging."

"Ultimately there ought to be a genuine world championship. If it doesn't come one way, it'll come another.

"The only real trophy for the world championship is the one we've been playing for—the Stanley Cup."

Brundage Letters Critical Factor In About-face

MONTREAL (CP) — Two letters released by the Canadian Olympic Association Tuesday reveal some of the background that led to Sunday's about-face by the International Ice Hockey Federation at its Geneva meeting.

Both letters are from Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee and express to IIHF president Bunny Ahearne concern over the fact the IIHF had agreed at its July meeting at Crans, Switzerland, to allow Canada the use of nine minor professionals on its national team.

In both letters Brundage deals with the question of Olympic eligibility of the players participating against the Canadian pros.

"The fact the IIHF has opened its world championship as well as other tournaments to professional players, will no doubt affect the Olympic eligibility of all participating teams.

"While the IOC has not passed officially on this situation since it has only now been informed officially, you should know that all teams participating in the Soccer Football World Cup in which professionals are permitted are ineligible for Olympic competition.

"It can be expected that a similar decision will be reached in the case of Ice hockey."

Brundage also said there is no IOC provision for the reinstatement of professionals.

In reply to a further query from Ahearne, Brundage wrote on Dec. 23 that he did till personally know what decision the general body of the IOC would take regarding the Olympic eligibility of the participating athletes.

However, the IOC president said that many members of the world Olympic body "were shocked to learn that this step had been taken by the hockey authorities."

"One newspaper stated that your vote decided it," Brundage wrote.

Ahearne cast the deciding vote that gave Canada the right to use the nine professionals at the Crans meeting.

Timing Bad?

CALGARY (CP) — Canada's withdrawal from international hockey was inevitable but the timing was bad, Ron Butlin of Calgary, president of the Western Canada Hockey League, said Monday night.

"The timing was awful when you realize it happened so close to the actual presentation and that 'many' many hours of voluntary labor had already been applied."

Butlin was referring in an interview to preparations in Montreal and Winnipeg to play host to the 1970 world hockey championship, which now has been transferred to Stockholm, Sweden.

"I'm not sure the tourney shouldn't have been held with an adequate amateur team and then have Canada bow out. I don't suggest any solution, but I'm not so sure there couldn't have been some compromise."

Butlin said that "one of these fine days I hope and trust there will be a hockey commissioner for all of Canada who might assist in clearing up and stabilizing the hockey picture all across Canada including the national team . . . all of which has been turbulent for the last five years."

The WCHL, a junior circuit, plays outside the jurisdiction of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

"Let's not kid anybody," Butlin said. "Hockey all over North America is controlled whether we like to think so or not, by the National Hockey League. . . . The NHL controls all of pro hockey and it in turn really, in all intents and purposes, controls amateur hockey in Canada. The NHL will now, undoubtedly, be brought into world competition."

Uphill for Betsy

GRINDENWALD, Switzerland (AP) — France's Michele Jacot bagged a teen-age 1-2-3 sweep of a thrilling World Cup special slalom race Tuesday. Less than five-tenths of a second separated the top five.

Betsy Clifford, 18-year-old Canadian star from Camp Fortune near Ottawa, was second and Marilyn Cochran, 18, of the United States was third. Right behind came two French stars, Annie Famose and Florence Steurer.

Michele, a pretty, petite brunette from the Savoy Alps, stormed from behind with a brilliant second run of 48.18 seconds — fastest in the field — for a total winning time of 1:37.49. She was clocked in 49.31 for the first descent of a steep, icy course at the foot of Eiger Mountain.

Miss Clifford, Canada's best woman skier since the retirement of Olympic champion Nancy Greene Raine, had a total time of 1:37.87. Her leg times were 49.15 and 48.52.

"The second run was much nicer," Miss Clifford said after the competition. "There were a few tight gates but some real nice turns."

Miss Clifford moved into sixth place in the Cup standings with 38 points. Miss Jacot leads with a whopping 121 points. Francoise Macchi of France is second with 71 and Barbara Cochran of the U.S. third with 70. Judy Nagel of the U.S., is fourth with 50 and Berni Rauter of Austria fifth 41.

Diane Culver of Montreal finished in 21st place with a total time of 1:44.66.

No Tourney For Canucks

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (CP) — Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League are not likely to be available for a proposed all-Canada hockey tournament in Winnipeg in March, Joe Crozier, Canucks' general manager and coach, said Tuesday.

He was commenting on a statement Monday by Gordon Juckes, executive-director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, that the CAHA hopes to stage the tournament March 22 to 29 to replace the cancelled international tournament.

Quebec Aces and Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League, the Canadian nationals, and the Canucks were suggested as possible teams.

Crozier, here for a WHL game tonight against Salt Lake City Golden Eagles, said Tuesday the Canucks have not been approached officially regarding the Winnipeg tourney.

But he said it would be difficult for the Canucks to appear, since they are scheduled for three key WHL games that week.

Simply 'Rock and Sock'

Vikings Don't Need Football Gimmicks

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — "We're going out there to rock and sock and may the best team win."

Joe Kapp sounded the battle cry of Minnesota Vikings for Sunday's Super Bowl game after the club's first workout Tuesday in chilly New Orleans.

"The Minnesota Vikings came a long, long way," said the Vikings' quarterback. "We have 40 people who love to play the game.

"We had a great defence last year. This year we have been able to improve our offence and get some points on the board.

"We are basic. We don't rely on formations or tricks. We just go out and block, execute and win."

"We have several men with exceptional ability," said Kapp, "men like Gene Washington, who can break open and turn a game around. Our offensive line is outstanding."

Kapp refused to take the bait and guarantee a Viking victory as Joe Namath of New York Jets had done last year.

"I don't think anybody can guarantee a football game," he said. "These are two great teams going out there.

Kapp played eight years in the Canadian Football League with Calgary Stampeders and British Columbia Lions before he came down to the Vikings in 1967 in a deal arranged by Jim Finks, Minnesota general manager. Drafted originally by Washington Redskins, he went to Canada with Finks, then general manager of Calgary Stampeders.

"I like to play and I knew college quarterbacks didn't play much in the National Football League," he said. "I signed for about $15,000, fifteen big ones.

"I was playing in the Hula Bowl after the Rose Bowl when Finks made me the offer. I was playing against (Bobby) Layne and he told me go with the money."

"After eight years in Canada I decided it was time to come down. I was getting older and the body was wearing out. I am delighted that I wound up in Minnesota."

Ontario Amateurs, Pros Get Crack at Five Opens

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Branch of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association announced Tuesday that five open golf tournaments worth $15,000 each will be held in September and October in the province.

Ben McCallum, executive director of the branch, said the tournaments will be open to all professionals and rated amateurs.

First prize in each would be $2,000, he said, in 36-hole, medal play with entry fees of $25 a tournament. Play would be restricted to 150.

Tentative courses have been arranged at Peterborough, Ottawa, Hamilton, Niagara Falls and Windsor. Dates were set at Sept. 3-4, 10-11, 17-18, 24-25 and Oct. 1-2, he said.

A number of sponsors have been approached and "they are all excited about the prospect," said Ken Duggan, publicity chairman of the Ontario organization. No commitment has been made to any sponsor yet.

George Knudson, one of Canada's top touring pros, described the proposed tournaments as the best thing ever to come along in Canadian golf.

Commonwealth Game Hopefuls

Weightlifting Coach Has 4 Reasons for Delight

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Sports Editor)

Apollo Barbell coach Ken Carr-Bristol has four good reasons to be delighted that Belleville has been selected as the May 8 - 10 site of the British Commonwealth Games weightlifting trials.

They are, in alphabetical order: Paul Barrett, Enos Evans, Price Morris and Bob Wall — the four members of the city weightlifting club coach Carr-Bristol gives best chances of making one of the nine berths on the Canadian team to July's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland.

"We could, conceivably, place four lifters on the nine-member team," Carr-Bristol said after last night's organizational meeting setting the wheels in motion for the prestigious May event.

Doubling as the Canadian Weightlifting Championships, the Commonwealth Games Trials at Centennial Secondary School will mark the first time in Belleville history a sporting event of national stature has been staged in the city.

"Altogether, there are going to be about 80 lifters from Halifax to British Columbia trying for those nine team spots," Carr-Bristol estimated as he began plans to welcome and accommodate "about 150" visiting competitors, judges, and officials.

"It's hard to believe, but with 40 members, we're the biggest weightlifting club in Canada. And we have four lifters with a good chance to make the qualifying standard to compete in May's trials."

Former five-time Canadian Heavyweight champion Price Morris is a prime contender, Carr-Bristol figures, if he can wrap a sound enough training program between now and May to offset a four-month layoff due to a shoulder injury.

"Tiny Champ," as he is known around Carr - Bristol's Boswell St. garage that serves as the Apollo Club's training headquarters, still holds two national records.

No Canadian has surpassed his 1,030-pound three-lift total or his 406-pound "clean-and-jerk" mark.

"Two of our middleweights — Bob Wall and Paul Barrett — are already close to the 800-pound three - lift qualifying standard for the trials," Carr-Bristol revealed. He also gave 25-year-old lightweight Enos Evans a good crack at qualifying for the May trials.

There are nine weightlifting classes — by body - weight — and each competing Commonwealth country can send as many as two lifters to a classification to a maximum of a nine member team, Carr-Bristol explained.

"This, of course, means we won't be sending lifters in all weight classifications. Onsidds probably won't send anyone in the flyweight class."

If some of his pupils are good prospects for a July trip to Edinburgh, Carr-Bristol has to be rated among the favorites for a coaching position on the Canadian team. He has previous experience in that capacity in both Commonwealth and Pan American Game competition.

Between now and the May 8 arrival of the Games Trials competitors, Carr - Bristol will be spending as much time planning as coaching.

A Tuesday night meeting established the Games Trials Committee with members Alderman Paul Hassell (vice-convinor), — vice-convinor committee member Mrs. Joan Gosbirk (accommodation, Jos Ont (transportation), Dr. Tom Woodley (medical), Bill McMurter (coach school-ships), and Carr - Bristol as chairman.

For the next four months, these people will be attempting to put out a Belleville welcome mat equal to the occasion that has in past years gone to such larger centres as Calgary and Quebec City.

The Big Push

Apollo Barbell Club member Price Morris has started training after a four-month layoff to try and regain this form that won him five consecutive Canadian Heavyweight Weightlifting titles. The Belleville weightlifting club members will be hosts to the British Commonwealth Game trials in May.

Jury Finds Ellis Juniors Guilty of Non-Support

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

KINGSTON — In hockey's courtrooms, if the defence rests, you are quite frequently left with a hung Jury. Confused? Then you probably share the feelings of Ellis Juniors' goalie Ron Jury, who didn't realize this much rubber existed north of Brazil.

Last night Jury weathered 47 shots, mostly from close range, as the Belleville B's shocked a 12-3 thumping from Kingston Frontenacs.

It's hard to knock a team that played, with no relief, against the league - leaders, minus two of their regulars. This does not change the fact that the Ellis defence played a poor game, although it does make it more understandable.

Most of Belleville's problems were due to the fact that they were shorthanded. A back injury to Greg Burkitt, Dalton Lambert's one - game suspension for a game unbecoming Sunday against Oshawa and the absence of Danny Lupenette and John McConnell were responsible for the player shortage. The team was further weakened in the third period by a hand injury.

RON JURY
No Fault of His

Jury can in no way be faulted for the loss, turning in a fine performance despite the lopsided score. At the other end of the rink, Kingston goalie Clyde Harris was brilliant on occasions robbing Meagher twice and Ted Waite once.

Kingston scoring ace Colin Loudon led the winners by notching four goals and assisting on two others. Completing the Kingston scoring were Lynch (2), Rivoire (2), Murray, Dechaene, Baker and Coffey.

Reid Mallory bit for two unassisted goals, while Ted Waite scored the other on a long slapshot that beat Harris cleanly.

Belleville's Dennis McCormack played a strong game centering juvenile call-ups Steve Sharpe and Steve Moore.

Coach Floyd Crawford was philosophical about the defeat. "We've got a young club. They're improving and they're hustling. I'm confident we'll make the playoffs."

All of the absentees are expected back in the line-up for Sunday evening's game against Peterborough, in Belleville.

Will Old Stars Twinkle?

Will youth be served or is experience necessary?

Belleville hockey fans will be given an answer Thursday, Jan. 29 when the aging veterans of the Quinte Hockey League All-Stars take on the Ellis Juniors.

The Quinte League teams, which consist of Belvedere Hotel, Central Taxi, Aluminum Star and Stinson's Construction, will each contribute three forwards and a pair of defencemen. Two goalies will split the netminding chores and the team will be handled by the coach of the league - leaders, at the time the game is played.

It will be interesting to see if the generation gap extends to hockey. Game time is 8.15 p.m.

Admission tickets now being sold by Quinte League members and the Ellis Juniors also entitle purchasers to chances at numerous door prizes.

High School Basketball

New Format Tightens Races

Something new is on tap for high school basketball this year. Quinte Hastings and District High School has been added and the league split into two divisions. The top two teams in each division will be eligible for a championship tournament near the end of February, with the winners going on to COSSA. The new format should produce tight competition for the play-off berths and the tournament formula has proved highly successful for such groups as the NCAA.

In Say of Quinte action last night, Centennial and BCI swept tripleheaders against Madoc and Trenton, while Quinte and Moira split their games.

At Madoc the Chargers had little trouble subduing teams of the league's newest entry. In the senior game Centennial hit for 37 points in the second half to sweep to a 64-29 victory. Frank Johnston had 14 points, followed closely by Dennis Neron with 13 and Keith Watson with 12.

For the Juniors, Andy Ling's 14 points led the way for a 69-13 Centennial victory. Mike Thompson scored 12 points and Bob Henderson 11.

In the bantams' 65-33 win, the scoring was fairly evenly divided between Vahe Parmaksigian (16), Brian Murphy (16); and Bob Vandervaeter (12).

At Quinte, Moira seniors stayed within shooting distance of BCI with a 46-36 victory. Moira scorers were led by Ralston with 17, Thomson 10, and Mason 8. Leo Baker and Tom Churchill were tops for Quinte with 10 and 9 points respectively.

Quinte's undefeated junior team coasted to a 38-8 half - time lead and then held on for a narrow 33-27 victory. Stan Brooks hooped 12 points for Quinte and Steve Nash added 6 more. Wiggins was the game's high scorer with 19 for Moira.

The bantam tilt saw Quinte win its initial game of the season, 52-47. Bruce Nickle scored 22 points to pace Quinte's attack. Rutherford was high man for Moira with 18.

BCI seniors kept their record undefeated by dropping Trenton 62-34. High scorers were Jim Wright (17), Dave Wright (16) and Brent Gallupe (8). The junior Collegians came through with a 52-32 victory and the bantams stayed in first with an easy 60-30 win.

Goal-Beats Kings

Ferguson's Return Handy for Habs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

John Ferguson celebrated his return in action with Montreal Canadiens Tuesday by collecting the winning goal as the defending Stanley Cup champions stopped Los Angeles Kings 4-3 in the only National Hockey League game scheduled.

The left winger, better known for his heavy-hitting, pounced on an Yvan Cournoyer rebound at 18:34 of the final period and beat Los Angeles netminder Gerry Desjardins from close quarters with Kings' defenceman Dale Rolfe sitting in the penalty box. Ferguson had not played since Dec. 13, when he suffered a fractured thumb.

Jacques Lemaire, with his 21st goal of the season, Ralph Backstrom on his 15th and Larden Worley with the first goal of his NHL career, also scored as the Canadiens raised to within one point of the idle second-place Boston Bruins in the East Division.

Leon Rochefort, Ted Irvine and Skip Krake replied for the Kings, who suffered their 22nd defeat of the season and remained in the West Division cellar.

Grenier, playing only his third game in the NHL, is up from Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League.

Irvine and Krake forced a 3-3 tie by the midway point after Grenier and Backstrom shot the Canadiens ahead early in the game.

The only other minor penalty called by referee Brian Lewis, to Butch Goring late in the second period, led to the third Montreal goal, by Lemaire.

After Ferguson's winner, Rochefort finished the scoring for Los Angeles with 35 seconds remaining.

Minnesota's North Stars checked into Toronto for tonight's game with the Maple Leafs, one of five on the schedule, and practised under new bench boss Charlie Burns.

Wren Blair, Minnesota's general manager-coach, appointed Burns as his assistant coach "for at least the next three weeks," after medical advice to cut down Blair's work load.

Burns, 33, a veteran of 11 professional seasons, never in the NHL, is not concerned about the apparent temporary nature of the job.

"I know all this stuff about three weeks and everything," Burns said Tuesday, "and the idea of us having a meeting at the end of this month to decide if I'll continue.

"But, the way I look at it, the job's mine."

In other games tonight, New York Rangers visit Pittsburgh, Boston is at Oakland, Chicago Black Hawks are at home to Detroit and Philadelphia Flyers are in St. Louis to tangle with the West Division-leading Blues.

The Rangers will be out to protect their three-point, first-place hold over Boston in the East Division without defenceman Jim Neilson.

The 30-year-old native of Big River, Sask., burned both his hands while rescuing his five-year-old daughter from a small fire Tuesday at his Long Beach, N.Y. home. The girl was not hurt.

Neilson will be missing from the Rangers lineup for at least four days. His place will be taken by Larry Brown, summoned from Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League.

Knew Gambling Suspect

Chiefs' Dawson to Testify

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Len Dawson, veteran Kansas City Chiefs' quarterback, says he had "a casual acquaintance" with a Michigan restaurateur arrested by agents of the Internal Revenue Service in connection with a country-wide gambling ring.

Dawson is here to take part in Sunday's Super Bowl game between the Chiefs and Minnesota Vikings—a professional football spectacular that is guaranteed a sellout crowd of 81,000 people.

NBC said Dawson, 34, was one of six football figures, including three other professional football quarterbacks, who will be subpoenaed to appear before a grand jury investigating sports gambling.

NBC said the other pro quarterbacks were Joe Namath of New York Jets, last year's Super Bowl hero; Bill Munson of Detroit Lions and Karl Sweetan of Los Angeles Rams.

The network also named as prospective witnesses Jet end Pete Lammons and Bob Devaney, head football coach at the University of Nebraska.

NBC said the men were not necessarily involved in gambling but would be questioned to fill in certain holes in the investigation.

U.S. Attorney James Brickley of Detroit was quoted by his secretary as saying after the NBC report "whatever NBC has on is not true."

Professional football commissioner Pete Rozelle said in a prepared statement issued at the Super Bowl site that he had "no evidence to even consider disciplinary action against any of those publicly named."

Dawson, the only one of the six who could be reached, issued a statement at the hotel where the Chiefs are housed acknowledging that he knew the restaurateur, Donald Dawson of Birmingham, Mich.

Donald Dawson, who is no relation, was arrested at a Detroit motel New Year's Day by IRS agents who seized gambling records and some $400,000 in cashier and business cheques.

Dawson, accompanied by his coach, Hank Stram, appeared at a session-filled news conference at 11:08 p.m. CST—five minutes after the club's curfew hour—and read a four-paragraph prepared statement with considerable feeling.

The statement said:

"My name has been mentioned in regard to an investigation being conducted by the Justice department. I have not been contacted by any law enforcement agency or been apprised of the reason my name has been brought up.

"The only reason that I can think of is that I have a casual acquaintance with Mr. Donald Dawson of Detroit who I understand has been charged in the investigation. Mr. Dawson is not a relative of mine.

"I have known Mr. Dawson for about 10 years, and have talked to him on several occasions. My only conversations with him in recent years concerned my knee injuries and the death of my father. On these occasions, he contacted me to offer his sympathy. His calls were among the many I received.

Hornets Sting Again

LANDSHUT (Reuters) — West Germany defeated Galt Hornets, Canada's Allan Cup champions, 6-3 in an exhibition hockey game Tuesday night.

It was the second victory over Galt for West Germany in three days. On Sunday in Garmisch, the Germans downed the Galt team 4-1.

Schloder scored two goals for West Germany with others coming from Voelk, Kink, Philipp and Egger.

Right-wing Howie Dietrich, left-wing Ron Smith and defenceman Mike Corbett scored for Galt.

PARIS (CP) — A peewee hockey team from Quebec is to return to Canada today after sweeping a 14-game exhibition tour of France. The team, with 28 players from Arvida and Montreal, won its final game Tuesday night with a resounding 13-0 decision over the Flying Frenchmen of Chamonix.

Neilson Rescues Daughter

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Neilson, New York Rangers defenceman, suffered burned hands while rescuing his five-year-old daughter from a fire at his home in Long Beach, N.Y., Tuesday.

A spokesman for the National Hockey League club said Neilson was treated at a hospital. He will be sidelined three or four days. Larry Brown was called up to replace Neilson from Buffalo of the American League.

Neilson's daughter, Darcy, was not hurt. The blaze was extinguished by firemen.

FBI Joins in Hunt for Murderers of Mine Union Official

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation have joined state police investigators tonight to solve the murders of United Mine Workers leader Joseph (Jock) Yablonski and his wife and daughter.

But as federal authorities entered the case Tuesday night on the orders of Attorney-General John Mitchell, the state police-man in charge of the investigation said the trail of the killers was cold.

"We are conducting a thorough, wide open investigation," said Capt. Joseph Snyder. "But we still have no solid lead or motive."

Snyder said his men were not pursuing any particular theory on the case, referring to charges by Yablonski's two sons that the slayings were linked to their father's unsuccessful bid for the presidency of the UMW last month.

"I wouldn't say the slayings had anything to do with union matters or that they didn't," Snyder said. "We are investigating every angle."

The pyjama-clad bodies of Yablonski, 59, his wife Margaret, 57, and their 25-year-old daughter Charlotte, were found Monday afternoon in bedrooms of the family's rural home in this southwestern Pennsylvania coal mining town 35 miles south of Pittsburgh.

Authorities said all three had been shot with a .38-calibre pistol—Yablonski five times and the two women twice—three or four days earlier.

Mitchell ordered the FBI into the case to "determine whether . . . the three deaths in any way involve federally protected rights of labor union members." Federal assistance had been requested by Yablonski's sons and Pennsylvania Gov. Raymond Shafer.

In a statement, the sons, Kenneth and Joseph Yablonski, charged the killings were the work of "professional assassins."

"There are no doubts that these horrible misdeeds are an outgrowth of our father's recent bid to win election in the presidency of the United Mine Workers of America," the brothers said.

The brothers, both lawyers, also said they sent a telegram to the UMW's Washington headquarters, requesting that no international officers or employees of the union attend the funeral.

Yablonski and his wife and daughter will be buried Friday in Washington, Pa., following a solemn requiem mass at St. Thomas Roman Catholic Church in Clarksville.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

Each winter, doctors treat cold infections with a wider range of medicines. Antihistamines and other decongestants cold-sufferers, but unfortunately they also can affect driving ability.

National Institutes of Health studies show that many cold remedies as well as tranquilizers and other prescription drugs, can reduce the alertness of a driver under medication.

Some antihistamine preparations and other remedies — depending on the individual — may reduce reaction-time and impair physical co-ordination, both of which are essential to safe automobile operation.

Because a driver is ordinarily unable to judge his reaction to a specific medication the Ontario Motor League recommends that drivers carefully read the labels on non-prescription medicines and interpret such phrases as "may induce drowsiness", as a warning against driving under medication. Specific advice of the doctor prescribing other medicines should be obtained as to possible effects on driving ability.

If, while driving under medication, the individual observes unusual fatigue or dizziness, or notices that he has made a series of minor driving errors, it is wise to ask a licensed passenger to take over the wheel. Or, if possible, stop and telephone for another driver's assistance.

When treating a heavy cold, it may be sensible to avoid driving altogether. The driver who stays home a few days to "rest up" is probably insuring a faster recovery, as well as his own safety and that of others on the highway.

Pedestrians can be a greater hazard to drivers in winter because those on foot are concentrating on their own problems of avoiding ice or deep snow, or managing an umbrella. The Ontario Motor League asks drivers to be especially watchful for pedestrians during bad winter weather.

Posted speed limits are for ideal conditions, reminds the Ontario Motor League. In winter, half the posted limit may be too fast. The real speed is your good judgment.

Keep the car tank filled as much as possible during the cold weather. A full tank checks condensation, and that means less risk of water in the gas, with possible tie-up if a bit of it freezes in the line.

Beware of "warm" or "wet" ice. Ice and snow are twice as slippery at 30 degrees, so be on guard when the temperature is just about freezing.

Should you find yourself skidding this winter, don't panic. Avoid braking and steer in the direction in which the rear of the car is skidding. As the car begins to straighten, carefully straighten the front wheel to avoid oversteering and another skid.

Use automobile headlights during heavy daytime snowstorms. Any stop a driver takes to "rest and be safe" during a snowstorm is a safety measure.

The safest way to slow down and stop on slippery, icy road surfaces is to lightly and rapidly "pump" the brake pedal. The "pumping" technique means brakes are applied for an instant and released for an instant, keeping control of the vehicle in the driver's hands.

While driving on ice and snow remember that any sudden movement can cause a skid. Don't speed up, turn or brake sharply on slippery roads. Slow down and keep plenty of distance back from the car ahead.

Any trip under unfavorable wintertime conditions takes longer. In winter, always allow extra time to complete any trip.

Don't take chances this winter. Clean the know and ice off all windows before moving from the curb.

Officer Once Charged with Discreditable Conduct

TORONTO (CP) — An inquiry into allegations of police misdemeanors was told Tuesday that one of the men who raised the issue once faced a charge of trying to extort $200 from an impaired driver.

Constable Ian Samuel, who has joined former constable Peter Lott with allegations that senior officers interfered with impaired driving charges against prominent persons, confirmed a statement made by Roy McMurtry, counsel for 31 officers implicated.

Mr. McMurtry told the hearing that Lott was charged last June with discreditable conduct but resigned from the force before the charges was heard.

Lott has not appeared at the inquiry through its first two days and Judge C. O. Bick, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission, has asked commission counsel to use all means possible to find him.

Constable Samuel told the inquiry he learned about the charge only after he got a brief summary of alleged misdemeanors of senior officers.

He said he figured over the document because he considered Lott a friend and because he thought Lott had access to organizations which might bring on a royal commission.

The only other witness who had seen the document, which he wrote three or four years ago, were David Lewis, opposition leader of the New Democratic Party, and Reuben Rodney, his lawyer.

The disclosure came as Constable Samuel discussed allegations against Insp. Robert Buchanan—a sergeant at the time, of the incident—and Insp. Harry Fielding.

Both were involved in an attempt to get him to accept an "adjustment" of his case, the resulting from arrests he had made, he said.

Described by counsel as a hard-driving policeman, Constable Samuel said he could recall the case only of Joseph A. Shopiro, whom he arrested March 13, 1963, for impaired driving.

"As a result of it I was called —by whom I don't know—to the office of then-sergeant, now-inspector Buchanan.

"He asked me if I would resist the case being adjusted. Those are not his words, but I distinctly remember the meaning. He meant "withdrawn."

"Either them or on the other occasions when I refused, he said 'I would only hurt myself' by resisting these things."

Constable Samuel said that after discussing the Shopiro case with Insp. Buchanan about the same time he was called into Insp. Fielding's office "because of my refusal to co-operate about the three cases."

Although nothing specific was mentioned, he said, Insp. Fielding criticized him for having "too much to say" and told him to "bend or break off like a tree in the wind."

Mr. Shopiro, subsequently fined $100 with a three-month suspension of driving privileges on the impaired charge, told the inquiry he did not attempt to have his charges withdrawn or reduced.

Insp. Buchanan said he could not recall Shopiro's case being brought to his attention and that generally he feels impaired drivers "are a menace and ought to be charged."

Insp. Buchanan described Constable Samuel as a hard-working but "over-zealous and officious" officer.

"My biggest conflict with P.C. Samuel was over his—I don't know what you'd call it, over-zealous or what. . . . He seemed to think he was always right."

Police Are Happy With Bail

TORONTO (CP) — Metropolitan Toronto police said Tuesday night they are pleased with the first day of operation of the new bail system, under which a police officer can release a suspect on his own recognizance.

Supt. James Henderson said two persons were charged with impaired driving and the other with failing to remain at the scene of an accident, were released on personal bail after the desk sergeant decided they were trustworthy.

Supt. Henderson said police will compile a record in the first week to see if any problems arise. "It should work out all right and a large percentage of those who now spend a night in jail before being bailed likely will get out."

The new discretionary powers of Toronto police officers were made possible by a recent amendment to the Criminal Code which erased the requirement that only a judge or justice of the peace could grant bail.

FBI Files Twelve Volumes Covering Four Years of Listening

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Widespread Mafia infiltration of New Jersey police and politics—to the point of allegedly influencing selection of a state police head—are portrayed in FBI transcripts of electronic eavesdropping filed in federal court here.

Twelve volumes covering four years of recording name dozens of public personalities including singer Frank Sinatra, Mayor Hugh Addonizio and Police Director Dominick Spina, both of Newark, State Police Supt. David B. Kelly and former Supt. Dominic Capello, powerful Democratic leader John V. Kenny, and state Democratic Chairman Salvatore Bontempo.

The transcripts, produced Tuesday in the conviction trial of reputed Mafia boss Angelo (Gyp) DeCarlo, tell of payoffs to public officials, bookmaking and gambling operations, skimoffs from Las Vegas gambling and influence of the telephone company and the Masonic Lodge.

The transcripts were made public by U.S. Judge Robert F. Shaw over defense objections. Shaw reserved decision on whether they could be used as evidence in the trial.

Among highlights of the documents:

State police—An FBI memorandum said: "It appears that Kenny and Capello appointed state police superintendent through Gov. Richard J. Hughes at DeCarlo's request. Kenny also has agreed to have Chief David Kelly appointed superintendent to succeed Capello at DeCarlo's request."

Payoffs—Capello and Spina are named as having received payments. The transcripts also talk of payments to Middlesex County police and David T. Wilentz, county Democratic leader.

Election—DeCarlo raised money for Addonizio before his election as Newark mayor in 1961 after 14 years as a congressman. The transcripts indicate DeCarlo and associates worked to get Michael (Mickey) Redding, brother of the state Democratic chairman, out of the race.

Sinatra—Harold (Kaye) Konigsberg, a bookmark now in prison, talked with DeCarlo about getting salary for a Jan. 20 date. He quoted DeCarlo as saying: "I'll see what Sinatra said and have a talk with him." Sinatra is fighting a subpoena and an arrest warrant from the state investigations commission which called him in its inquiry into gambling.

Addonizio—In one of many references to dealings with Newark's mayor, De Carlo is quoted: "Buddie helped us along. He gave us the edge." Addonizio was recently indicted on extortion and income-tax evasion charges.

Las Vegas—DeCarlo is quoted as saying Anthony (Little Pussy) Russo, a Mafia figure, as saying he had "a connection" at the telephone company who tipped him when law officials investigated possible bookmaking telephones: "This guy—I got him on the payroll—I give him $100 a month."

DeCarlo and four other men are quoted at length in talking of Marino who have joined the Masonic Lodge. "In two, three years, we'll have everybody in," the transcript quotes one participant. "We'll have two-second separation, 'click' to the Mafia-Mason Lodge."

At another point, the FBI quoted DeCarlo as asking a woman who was doing work in anticipation of the 1964 Democratic convention in Atlantic City to write down all telephone numbers called by Robert F. Kennedy, the attorney-general.

In another section, DeCarlo is quoted as saying of Addonizio: "If he ever gets on the outs with the Kennedys, he's dead. They've got enough on him to bury him."

District Attorney Wins Right to Question Kennedy Closely

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — District Attorney Edmund S. Dinis threatened to walk out of court unless Judge James A. Boyle gave him more latitude in questioning witnesses at the inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, it has been learned.

Rather than abort the long-delayed inquiry, Boyle told Dinis he could ask desired questions of Senator Edward M. Kennedy, driver of a car that toppled off a Chappaquiddick Island bridge last July, trapping Miss Kopechne inside.

But the 63-yearold judge did have the last word on the order in which witnesses would appear, two sources close to the case said.

Dinis, they said, wanted to bring the inquest to a climax by summoning as the last witness Kennedy and his two men the senator said aided his fruitless efforts to dive for the 28-year-old secretary—his counsel, Joseph F. Gargan, and a friend, lawyer Paul Markham.

But Judge Boyle, it was learned, ordered otherwise. He said he would not keep a United States senator waiting and ordered that Kennedy be brought forward as the lead-off witness in the inquiry that opened Monday.

At the outset, Boyle had announced that he would permit only testimony directly related to whether Kennedy or anyone else acted criminally concerning Miss Kopechne's death.

The sources gave this account of Monday's events:

When Kennedy took the stand in the nearly empty courtroom in the old Dukes County courthouse, Dinis began to question him. Judge Boyle, citing his earlier announcement, cut the district attorney off several times.

Dinis protested and Boyle asked Kennedy to step outside. In the subsequent conference with the judge and the district attorney, Dinis said he would walk out of the case unless Boyle let him ask his questions. Boyle reluctantly acquiesced.

When Kennedy returned to the stand, however, Dinis relaxed his questioning and tended to stay within the judge's original limits.

As far as the other of witnesses was concerned, both Gargan and Markham were in court for the end. They testified Tuesday. They were followed by perhaps a dozen of Dinis' young women who, with Miss Kopechne, attended the July 18 barbecue on Chappaquiddick which preceded the auto accident.

When all five have finished their testimony today, the inquest will hear Edgartown people involved in the case—police and townsmen who recovered the body and car, the undertaker who prepared Miss Kopechne's body for burial and the manager of an inn where Kennedy had a room.

After a report circulated Tuesday that Dinis had again decided to walk out of the case, he told reporters: "I am still in the case. I am not leaving. I'm right here. I'll be here at 9:30 this morning."

The 37-year-old Kennedy remained at home in Hyannis Port with relatives, painting selling scenes in oils, and waiting to see whether he will be recalled across Nantucket Sound for further testimony in Edgartown.

Kingston Girl Assaulted

KINGSTON (CP) — Two members of the Satan's Choice motorcycle club Monday were charged with intimidating prosecution witnesses before two of the members was convicted of assaulting a 15-year-old Kingston girl.

Jeffery A. Mason, 23, of Kingston, was convicted on the assault charge by Judge P. E. D. Baker and remanded in custody by Jan. 26 for sentencing. He also faces a common assault charge arising from another incident.

Both Mason and Douglas Griffin, 22, of Kingston, will appear Jan. 13 to face the charges of intimidation.

The 15-year-old girl and another teen-age witness told court they had been threatened prior to Monday's trial.

Separate Schools An Issue

TORONTO (CP) — Extension of financial assistance to separate high schools in Ontario is expected to be a major issue when the provincial Liberal party holds its annual meeting in Ottawa Feb. 19 to 21.

Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon will be called upon Feb. 20 to defend his party's caucus decision to support extension of aid to the end of Grade 13, a decision which was immediately denounced by Liberals in Metropolitan Toronto and the president of the Ontario Student Liberals Association.

The Canadian Press Monday reported erroneously that the caucus policy statement had been denounced by the president of the Ontario Young Liberals.

The denunciation was made by Student Liberal President Frank Cole of Toronto, in a letter to the caucus made public in Toronto.

Mr. Nixon will speak and reply to queries at caucus performance shortly before the association elects its new officers.

His new leadership test is not being voted on since the Ontario Liberal party does not contest provincial leadership again until after the next election, expected in 1971.

White Paper Proposals 'Unsupported by Data'

TORONTO (CP) — Several economic propositions in the federal white paper on taxation tabled two months ago by Finance Minister Benson are "unsupported by any data," the former chief general manager of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce said Tuesday.

In an address to the Sales Research Club of Toronto, Gordon Sharwood, now a financial consultant, said he finds this lack of substantiation "startling."

The white paper generally aims at "discouraging initiative, reducing risk capital pools and making it difficult for small companies to grow," he said.

"There is a clear implication that the small should remain small and the large grow larger. According to this thesis, Mr. Steinberg should not be content to remain in the small grocery store on St. Lawrence Blvd. in Montreal . . . It is a strange thing for a Liberal government to propose policies which favor the large corporate establishment rather than the small businessman and growth companies."

Mr. Sharwood said the proposals will discourage closely-held corporations from becoming public, thus slowing the number of securities available for Canadians to invest in. In addition, elimination of the low corporate tax rate on small profits will make it more difficult for small companies to do their financing internally.

The proposals will, as claimed, make it attractive for Canadians to buy back U.S. subsidiaries operating here, Mr. Sharwood said.

But, be ca se slow-growing companies — the backbone of more productive ones in the proposals, Canadians would be "buying back at the door."

"Foreigners will just increase their return on capital by applying it to above-average situations," he said.

Dutch Catholics Oppose Celibacy

NOORDWIJKERHOUT (Reuters) — The Fifth Pastoral Council of the Dutch Roman Catholic Church today approved by massive majorities five revolutionary proposals calling for the abolition of obligatory celibacy for Catholic priests.

But the council has no power to make changes in Dutch church policy, which can only be done by the bishops. All the bishops were attending the council abstained on all four proposals.

The 106 voting delegates resolved:

—That in future priests should no longer be obliged to take an oath of celibacy (90 for, six against, two blank ballots, eight abstentions).

—That married men should be allowed to join the priesthood (94 for, one against, two blank ballots, nine abstentions).

—That the religious community as such was in favor of severing the oath of celibacy from priestly office (93 for, two against, three blank ballots, eight abstentions).

—That council comprises elected representatives of the priests and laity in the seven Dutch dioceses be consulted on all religious orders, the Dutch bishops and a small number of volunteers nominated personally by bishops.

In the discussion preceding the vote, Bernard Cardinal Alfrink stressed that the meeting's decision was to be regarded purely as "representation" to the Dutch episcopacy and as guidance for its future policy. For this reason, the bishops decided not to use their right to vote.

Pope Warns Against Dangerous Deviations

VATICAN CITY (Reuters) — Pope Paul today attacked Roman Catholic extremists in both the progressive and traditionalist wings of the church and called for obedience to official church teaching.

The Pope said that if church authorities refused to exercise their pastoral functions freely, he was sure the church would be able to carry out its mission "in this critical hour of its history, and a grave hour for the history of the world."

Addressing pilgrims in Saint Peter's Basilica, Pope Paul indirectly says by which individual Catholics might help apply the teachings of the 1962-65 Vatican council, which opened a new era of reform in the church.

TORONTO STOCKS TODAY

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market moved into its third successive downward session with a small mid-morning loss today.

The slump follows a four-day rally.

On index, industrials were down .03 to 184.72, western oils .51 to 205.99 and golds .03 to 153.54. Base metals picked up .13 to 116.28.

However, gains outnumbered losses 129 to 116 with 206 issues unchanged.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 606,000 shares compared with 664,000 at the same time Tuesday.

Eleven of the 17 industrial components were lower led by steels. Four advanced while two were unchanged.

Among steels, Stelco lost ⅝ to 21⅝ and Dofasco ¼ to 22.

Locana did not trade but closes, Tuesday at $2.40, up .5 cents.

Anglo Scandinavian Investors Ltd. of Canada said today it has acquired shares of Locana on the exchange, bringing its holdings in Locana to about 20 per cent.

On index Tuesday, industrials fell .18 to 188.01, base metals .59 to 116.18 and western oils .23 to 206.50. Golds gained 1.19 to 153.57.

Monday's loss broke a four-day rally.

The market opened mixed Tuesday but lowered under pressure from Wall Street.

On index, industrials fell 1.66 to 188.19, base metals .29 to 116.18 and western oils .23 to 206.73. Golds gained 1.19 in 153.57.

Volume was 2,865,000 shares compared with 3,109,000 Monday.

Losses outnumbered gains 230 to 193 with 216 issues unchanged.

Thirteen of the 17 industrial components declined led by construction and metal and steel issues. Four advanced.

Funeral

THOMAS S. ASH

The funeral of Thomas S. Ash was held Monday afternoon, from the MacKenzie Funeral Home at Madoc to Madoc United Church, where services were conducted by Rev. D. W. Heard.

The L.O.L. memorial service was held in the funeral home Sunday evening, under the direction of Lodge No. 625, Crookston.

Bearers were Maurice Ash, Wilfred Ash, Gerald Ash, Dalton Holmes, William Ash and Thomas Bruce.

Interment was in White Lake Cemetery.

Co-ops Protest

Milk Truck Controls Fought

TORONTO (CP) — The Federation of Co-Operative Milk Transports Tuesday asked the Ontario government to prevent the Ontario Milk Marketing Board from regulating the routes travelled by the trucks which carry milk from the producing farmer to the processor.

"Many recent decisions of the . . . board affecting trucking policies . . . threaten the existence of trucking co-operatives," the organization said in a brief to Agriculture Minister William Stewart.

"Does the government foresee any future for milk trucking co-operatives or will there be a gradual phase-out of co-operatives?" the brief asks. "And if so, what competitive factors will remain?"

The federation represents 16 Ontario co-operatives engaged in the transportation of milk.

The brief says that of Ontario's 8,000 Group 1 milk producers only about 800, or five per cent, are members of trucking co-operatives.

However, "although the percentage is small, the competitive effect on milk transportation rates has been very significant."

Hydro May Unite Districts

BARRIE (CP) — Administrative staff of the Georgian Bay region of Ontario Hydro have been told the region will have to be moved to Toronto, a union representative said Tuesday.

Carl Mason, acting chief steward for the Ontario Hydro Employees Union at Barrie, said that at a recent meeting Hydro told the men the decision had been made following a study to investigate possible administrative reorganization and amalgamation of the central and Georgian Bay regions.

The Georgian Bay region covers Simcoe County, Dufferin County, Grey County and the Parry Sound district.

The Central region forms a ring around Metropolitan Toronto taking in Oakville, Oshawa, Newmarket and Richmond Hill.

The move is expected to affect 108 employees, including 46 members of the union, excluding maintenance staff, linemen and the Barrie rural Hydro office.

Mr. Mason said the 46 union employees will have to sell their homes and will be given costs of moving plus a $200 allowance. He said non-union employees who cannot sell their homes will be able to sell them to Hydro.

An Ontario Hydro public relations officer in Toronto said the payroll for the administrative staff of the region is about $1,-005,000 yearly.

However he would not confirm or deny that a meeting had been held and he said the study on administrative reorganization is only a week old and has not been completed.

Some Barrie employees said if an amalgamation is necessary, it would be more logical to move the regional offices in north Toronto to Barrie where housing costs are lower. They hope to gain the support of Barrie Mayor Les Cooke, his city council and local members of the legislature to put pressure on Ontario Hydro to reconsider.

FASHION AID

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) — The new style maxi-coat is a great boon to shoplifters, Deputy Police Chief Joseph Rusinko says. Rusinko told 200 merchants attending a fraud prevention clinic that police departments generally were delighted with the introduction of the miniskirt mainly because miniskirts "barely cover what they're supposed to cover, let alone hiding merchandise."

THEATRE

Theatre Through The Ages by James Cleaver. Have you ever wondered how modern day theatre began? James Cleaver traces theatre from its early beginnings in Greece up to the present in a comprehensive study of the act. He discusses plays, playwrights, costumes, stages and the various types of plays and how specialized forms of theatre came into being, such as the early mystery play and the modern musical comedy. The book is illustrated throughout with drawings which greatly enhances its value as a reference work.

A Stage Crew Handbook by Ed Corsaro and Emanuel L. Gabauer. The first performance of a play, the finished product - a star is born, but what of the behind-the-scenes people who help make the play go smoothly - the stage crew. The job of the stage crew basically is to create atmosphere through lighting, sound effects, stage sets and design, this book which has recently been revised deals with each aspect of the stage crew's work in detail.

The Story Of America's Musical Theatre by David Ewen. Who doesn't enjoy a wonderful musical play such as "Sound of Music" or "My Fair Lady"? Musical comedy as we know it, is truly an American vehicle, having evolved from an English Ballad Opera performed in Charleston, South Carolina in 1735. The author tells how burlesque and minstrel shows helped develop and wrests the traditions of today's musical theatre. The stories of the most famous composers and lyricists from Sigmund Romberg, to present day team of Lerner and Lowe, and their contribution to the American musical theatre are all covered in this highly enjoyable book.

CHILDREN AND DRAMATICS by Richard Crosscup

It is said we learn through play, and such is the theme of this book. Richard Crosscup suggests that dramatics for children do so much more than produce actors and actresses, as help to enrich the lives of nurses and lawyers. He discusses the various age groups and the type of play suitable for them, he believes that at an early age "made-up" plays based upon the children's own experiences are most useful. There is a chapter on lighting, costume, make-up and stage design, the technical side of dramatics, which can nevertheless be creative and unusual, and help the children involved develop their abilities and discover more about themselves.

DIRECTING A PLAY by James Ronce-Evans

The author, himself a successful director, with a number of West End productions to his credit, including An Ideal Husband and Under Milk Wood, writes this book with a complete understanding of the problems that beset an amateur director, and he helps the director to foresee problems before they arise. He shows how those with limited financial means can improvise with the simplest 'props' to create settings, many of his points are illustrated with photographs, and examples from his own productions. A thoroughly fascinating book for avid theatre-goers and amateur directors alike.

MAGIC OF MAKE-UP by Harold Melvill

An essential part of the theatre is stage make-up, the magical ingredient which transforms a youth into an aging villain. Clearly and in detail the author discusses every aspect of make-up from character to old age make-up, with numerous diagrams showing how to apply the various types. An invaluable book for those interested in learning the art of theatrical make-up.

PRACTICAL PUPPETRY by John Mulholland

The art of puppetry is an ancient one, and particularly in Europe, a highly specialized form of entertainment which delights both young and old. In this book the author covers every step of the puppet theatre from making the puppets to constructing a stage and writing plays. His chapter on visibility, of which he has made a particular study, is illustrated with numerous diagrams and helpful tips.

Airplane Crash Victims Found

ORILLIA (CP) — A lone snowmobile rider Tuesday afternoon discovered the bodies of two Ontario men on the ice of Lake Joseph beside a wrecked single-engine airplane.

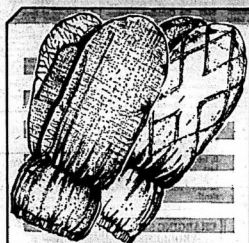
The men were identified by provincial police as George Johnson, 65, of Cannington and George McPhaden, 67, of Port Perry. Neither had been reported missing.

Police said the small plane apparently crashed in a raging snowstorm the previous evening, bounced off the thick ice and skidded about 110 feet.

There were no reports of a plane missing in the Sunland area...about 40 miles northwest of here, police said.

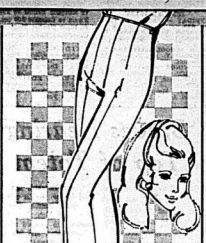
The accident was discovered by Jack Woodruff of RR1 Macey who was out checking cottages.

Man Won't Leave Jail at Pembroke



PEMBROKE (CP) — A man who was given lodging in the jail here for one night and then refused to leave was sentenced to another 30 days "lodging" Tuesday.

Victor Hilderbrant, 39, of no fixed address, pleaded guilty to vagrancy and was sentenced by Judge A. A. McLean.



Police Chief Bert Dickie testified earlier that Hilderbrant was given lodging for the night of Jan. 1. He refused to leave the jail next morning, saying he had nowhere to go.

Canadians No Longer Hockey Whipping Boys

By GEORGE H. CARVER

After nearly a decade of playing sparring partner to whipping boys, and the main attraction in the Greatest Hockey Show in Europe, Canada finally reared up on her puck haunches and told Bandit Bunny Ahearne and his Continental Commander to go take a jump in the World Hockey Lake.

The Ahearne - controlled (or is it now?) five-ring circus has been rescheduled for Stockholm, Sweden, but the centre ring always occupied by the Canadians will be vacant.

And we agree with the experts that the greater majority of hockey-minded Canadians will concur in the stand of their tournament representatives.

Canada's decision to drop out of the World Hockey Tournament this year will sound the death knell of the baby-face British travel agent.

His European commandos who catered to Ahearne, may now turn on the head man. "Fed them" simply because he could not live up to his boast of always having the Canadians eating out of his hands.

This was evident in 1959 in Bratislava when he called a conference at the request of the Russians, Czechs and Swedes to decide on a schedule change that would pit the Russians and Czechs against the Canadians in successive days at the end of the tournament.

CAHA president LeBel and McPartland manager Drury Denyes attended the meeting.

Ahearne evidently had promised the Russians and Czechs he could persuade Canada to agree. LeBel and Denyes stood firm after conferring with Coach Ike Hildebrand and assistant manager Billy Reay.

Little Finland settled the issue and drove the dagger into the heart of the well-laid plans of Ahearne, Russians and Czechs by casting the odd vote in favor of the proposed change.

Again, as of recently, the whole basis of refusal by Canada the right to use also professionals, mostly amateur, consisted of collusion between Ahearne and the Commandos . . . mainly between Russian and Czechoslovakian.

The Czechs, I believe would have no objections, but then the Czechs and Czetsels situation is well - known and as the ringmaster says, so goes the entire circus.

We know, and the whole world knows, that Canada has the best hockey players in the world. The Russians have made no secret of the fact they would like to meet senior any of our National Hockey League clubs any night of the ball - raising about a five minor pros in the Canadian national team.

What probably is bothering the Russians is the fact that Canada's current National team has been practising and playing together since last August and the Czech Nationals, who in my opinion are equally as good as the Toronto hockey aggregation, have not been on hand to visit their world "amateur" title to a team that is NOT composed of Canada's best.

I do not know how the average European hockey fan will take the news of Canada's withdrawal from the Games but from the time they played the first hockey game in Europe decades ago, Canadian teams have been the super-colossal attraction plums of the Belgian and continental aficionados.

Win, loss or draw, they always played to packed houses and I recall during the 1964 Farjeska junket that 90 per-cent of the 10 cities where they played, fans were turned away.

I do not think many fans will be shed this side of the Atlantic pond over our withdrawal from world hockey. As was noted the majority of dyed-in-the-wool fans will back the boys powers-that-be on their refusal to continue to be the hockey fodder for Ahearne and Company.

After all we have some national pride left and have assisted very comfortably, sportswise, long before Ahearne and his continentals became engrossed in a sport that was spawned, raised and developed in a country that still boasts the best players in the world and if any future Ahearne and cohorts dared it, let them prove it with their best against the best Our Lady of the Snows produces be they "amateur" or professional.

Braves Nearing Top of Totem

Bata Braves continued their winning ways last night as they handed Newcastle an 8-2 pasting in Eastern Intermediate 'C' hockey action.

Seven unanswered goals in the final two periods iced the game for the Bata crew, after Newcastle briefly enjoyed a 2-1 lead.

Chuck Howard, Dan Dixon and Roger Smith chipped in two goals apiece. Ray Wellman and Bob Burtch completed the Braves scoring.

Witheridge and Mather replied for Newcastle. The win left the two points behind second-place Sunderland in the four-team league, with two games in hand.

SOUNDED LIKE BOY

"My friends laughed and I sometimes really got embarrassed, but it was too much fun to stop," says 19-year-old Canadian actress Belinda Montgomery, speaking of her childhood acting days when she frequently played little boy parts on Canadian radio. At the age of eight, she says, she had a huskier voice than most boys that age.

Cure Not Simple For Bad Breath

When thousands of dollars are being spent for advertising products to overcome bad breath, in TV commercials, newspapers, magazines, one can be certain that the focal point of all this commercial commotion is a large body of people who complain of bad breath. It is a larger problem than some realize.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am in my mid-30s, considered quite pretty, an affable companion, have a degree in art from on of the leading universities — yet where boys are concerned, I'm left alone, sitting on the shelf.

Some girls, similarly bypassed, do not know the reason for their, unpopularity. But I do. It seems such a commonplace reason. In the face of all the advertising we see these days, but I'm sure the trouble is my breath.

It's bad. For some reason, when I'm out with a boy, it gets worse. I've had my teeth checked; my bowels are regular. I try to keep healthy by not smoking, drinking, and I get a full night's sleep.

What else is there to do? For those of us who really suffer from it, I can vouch for the fact that bad breath is indeed no minor discomfort.—Miss Y.

Comment: I know it is a widespread problem. I receive hundreds of letters from readers who, as you, ask: "What can I do?" Unfortunately, the answer is the same, but the results vary.

One writes "It cleared up miraculously when I took your advice about brushing my tongue thoroughly twice a day." Another says the dentist found the trouble in the gums or teeth. Still another improved after treatment of tonsils or sinuses.

Occasionally it seems to be worse when people get anxious and tense. It seems like a circuitous route, but I have helped some patients by prescribing tranquilizers.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've heard recently that low calorie sweeteners and sugar substitutes — such as those in diet drinks — have been suspected of causing birth defects, due to chromosome injury. Is there any truth to this? — Mrs. M.

Comment: Some studies are being conducted to determine if there's any harmful connection. From what I hear from obstetricians I have talked to, they do not feel there is yet sufficient evidence to point an accusing finger at these sugar substitutes. Nevertheless, I believe each patient should get the information directly from her own obstetrician — for peace of mind and safety. Recent government restrictions indicate that cyclamates can't be taken indiscriminately.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In my family, grandfather, father, one uncle and a son have died before 50 years of age because of heart attacks caused by calcium deposits in their arteries. A friend told me it is caused by diet and that I should give up such foods as beans (string, lima, navy) and spinach. Do you agree? — Mr. A.

Comment: With such a family history, I suggest you have a complete physical and an estimate of your blood cholesterol level. If it is high, it will be more important to lay up on saturated fats (butter, cream, fatty meats) rather than just eliminating beans and spinach. In some cases a bad family history prolongs the life of the individual because it gives him sufficient warning on how to live sensibly to prevent such heart attacks.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have a bad habit of eating coffee-grounds day in and day out. I suffer from heartburn. Do you think there is a connection? — Mrs. Mc.

Comment: A simple experiment will give you the answer. Try going without the coffee-grounds for a week. If the heartburn disappears I think you can label them guilty, especially i the symptoms return after resuming the habit.

'Doped Driver' Feared If 'Pot' Is Legalized

OTTAWA (CP) — An Ontario provincial court judge says legalization of marijuana would only result in the creation of a new driving hazard—the doped driver.

Judge Thomas Swabey of Ottawa told a service club Tuesday use of marijuana was a "new form of alcoholism" which society is not equipped to handle.

"There is no instrument similar to the breathalizer and no test of the blood or other body fluid which will reveal the presence of marijuana in the system," he said.

"Marijuana may then become the driving man's drug replacing the more easily detected alcohol, and years of effort in trying to bring under control the incidence of accidents caused by impaired driving will all be for naught."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 8

Your birthday today: Material success becomes somewhat more of an issue in your life in the coming year. You develop much ingenuity for getting the best out of business and commercial opportunities. Social and romantic interests become stronger this spring and summer. Today's natives tend to have intense emotional qualities which find few channels for expression and thus produce moody spells.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You can't get away with anything today, so make a straightforward effort. See that your appearance is first-rate.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Travels are hindered somewhat today. Catch up on the loose ends of your work projects, correspondence. Friends are full of bright ideas and suggestions. Do a good turn for somebody this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Some extra money should be coming your way, although you will have to earn it. Check signals with associates so as not to miss anything. New investments are under good influences now.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Put in your application for new positions if you are entitled to them. Expect visitors on short notice. If your mate has a sudden whim, cater to it.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): While helping somebody else find the way up, ask for understanding and co-operation in your own career effort.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): In today's planetary pressures keep your own estimates up. Aggressive people around you can be very useful if you will cope with their pressures.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your subtlest approach is the one to use for greatest leverage in turning matters around. Your career could stand promotion. Friends may tell secrets they have held for years. Get an estimate on repairs and maintenance for your home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Contracts and agreements are settled more easily today. Business travel is likewise favored. Extend your regular work for better results. Think positively and toward the future.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Chance meetings can bring interesting fresh views and potentially profitable ventures to your attention. Sentimental interests thrive. Family co-operation seems to be improving.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Negotiate changes in your work schedules; ask for raises where you've earned them. Put your energy into presenting your optimum personal appearance. Renew social connections, answer inquiries and invitations. Relatives have cheerful news.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Make a fresh start today with some new arrangements. Investment matters may change suddenly with a chance to improve your situation. Find time to study and meditate this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Friends and relatives now come back with their reactions to the way you've treated them.

Recount Defeats Bancroft Wets

'Tick' Ballots Disqualified

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

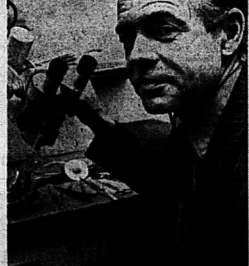
BANCROFT — A recount of ballots from the Dec. 1 liquor referendum has settled the question vexing this village's citizens for over a month — Bancroft is still officially dry.

The recount, conducted by Judge J. C. Anderson in Belleville, has shown the affirmative side to be 12 votes short of the 60 per cent majority needed to permit licensed dining lounges in the village.

According to Judge Anderson's ruling, 272 yes votes were polled, and 401 no votes.

The recount was called by Rev. Roy Campbell, manager of the negative side, after the wets won the referendum by a majority of one vote on the first count.

Judge Anderson said today 65 ballots were questioned by Mr. Campbell, Daniel Griffiths, manager of the affirmative side and his agent, M. J. McAlpine, when the sealed ballot boxes were opened in their presence in the judge's chambers.



After ruling on the 65 ballots questioned, Judge Anderson said the election act may have to be changed to allow tick marks on ballots.

"Either that, or voters will have to receive more education on how to mark a ballot," he commented. "The cross has always been the only permitted way to mark any ballot, but even after all these years people are still marking ballots with a tick. According to my interpretation of the act, ballots so marked must be disallowed."

The judge added that some voters had marked their ballots by circling either the yes or no printed on the ballot, and one person had made a cross with the intersection exactly in the middle between the yes and no spaces.

The Dec. 1 referendum was the third held in the village on the same question within the last 14 years.

Although Bancroft has a Brewers' Retail Store and a liquor store, it has no licensed lounges, or beverage rooms. Those seeking an affirmative vote in the referendum cited the incentive the liquor outlets would be to the tourist trade.

James Ray Is Denied New Trial

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The Tennessee Supreme Court rejected today an appeal by James Earl Ray for a new trial in the slaying of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

In a unanimous opinion, the court said Ray "willingly, knowingly and intelligently and with the advice of competent counsel entered a plea of guilty to murder in the first degree by lying in wait."

Ray pleaded guilty last March 10 to the 1968 slaying of King in Memphis. Criminal Court Judge W. Preston Battle sentenced Ray to 99 years in state prison.

Governor General Michener Will Visit Here in March

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Governor General Michener will visit Belleville for two days in mid-March.

The vice-regal visit now has been officially confirmed by Ottawa.

During his stay in the Quinte city March 13-14, the governor general will:

Most officially with city council, by a ceremonies for Loyalist College's first permanent campus building and present the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment with Queen's Colors.

He also hopes to meet with district school children.

Confirmation of the visit came yesterday in letters to city hall and Loyalist College.

It was announced by the college, where officials first conceived the idea of inviting the governor general for the cornerstone ceremonies. Simultaneously, city council decided to petition Governor General Michener to also make the event an official visit to Belleville.

As yet, it is not known what arrangements will be made to accommodate the governor general and Mrs. Michener during their overnight stay.

Thus far, the calendar of events is scheduled like this:

Immediately following their arrival the vice regal couple will meet with civic officials about 10:30 a.m., Friday, March 13.

The Loyalist ceremonies are scheduled for 3 p.m.,

In the early evening the governor general and Mrs. Michener will attend a reception given by the city's Rotary Club.

Highlight of the second day will be presentation of the colors to the historic Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Other events — more personal.

Lebanon Names New Army Chief

BEIRUT (Reuters) — Gen. Jean Njeim took over command of the Lebanese armed forces today with a mandate to strengthen the security of the southern border area, menaced by Israeli reprisal raids.

The 54-year-old general was named Wednesday night to replace Gen. Emil Bustani, who signed the Cairo agreement last November with Palestine-Arab commandos after a national crisis over the question of their freedom of movement in Lebanon.

Informed sources in the Lebanese capital of Beirut said the switch in the military leadership does not herald a change in the government's attitude toward the Cairo agreement.

Stroke of Genius

Tradeau May Meet Peking Officials

HONG KONG (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau is hoping to discuss Canada-Communist China relations with Peking officials when he visits Hong Kong late in May, the China Mail says.

The English-owned and edited tabloid, quoting its "own political sources," says Trudeau is reported to have asked for the Hong Kong meeting as a follow-up to talks which the Canadian government has been having with Communist Chinese diplomats in Stockholm for several months aimed at recognition of the mainland government.

Both the Hong Kong government and Canadian representatives in Hong Kong said they knew nothing of Trudeau's plans in Hong Kong and both said his May 23-25 visit was a "private stop-over visit en route from an Australian-New Zealand tour to Osaka, Japan," where Trudeau is scheduled to formally open the Canadian pavilion at Expo 70.

In Ottawa an external affairs department spokesman said it is conceivable that the prime minister will make a brief stop in Hong Kong on his Asian trip but "there are absolutely no plans for political discussions of any nature."

Coyote Goes to Dogs On Montreal's Mount Royal

MONTREAL (CP) — She moved here from the Prairies more than a year ago, set up residence in midtown Mount Royal Park and began raising a family which held concerts on the mountain when the moon rose over the nearby downtown skyscrapers.

The family didn't bother anyone, and nobody bothered them until a collie dog was attacked and killed in the park.

The police were called and began hunting the Prairie coyotes living in the heart of Canada's largest city.

Police have shot and killed two coyote cubs, both eight or nine months old, in the past two days, but an SPCA official says the coyotes are innocent.

James St. Onge, Quebec director of animal welfare for the SPCA, said Wednesday in an interview coyotes are not "attacking" animals.

"Maybe there's a big dog with them who's the boss," he said.

However, he added, the coyotes are probably responsible for the disappearance of partridge and ring-necked pheasants with which the city stocked the park.

The coyote was first observed in the park more than a year ago, running with a pack of stray dogs.

The dogs probably sired her three cubs, Mr. St. Onge said.

That's funny. To guarantee a fair trial for me, they let the press in!

Turbotrain Resumes Its Tests

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's first turbine-powered passenger train crept out of the CNR's Central Station Wednesday for the first time in a year in an unpublicized cold-weather test.

The $10,000,000 turbotrain ran to Cornwall, Ont., a distance of 68 miles, and back in a test supervised by the train's designers, United Aircraft Corp.

Details of the test run were not disclosed, but results of Wednesday's run and other short runs in the future are to be studied to determine the effects of cold weather on the train's fresh water and air systems.

Both systems proved faulty under Canadian winter conditions after the train's inaugural run Dec. 12, 1968, and the trains were taken out of service last January for further tests and modifications.

Liz Must Pay $2,500 a Day To Wear Gem

SYDNEY — Three Australian insurance companies earn money each time actress Elizabeth Taylor wears her famous 33-carat diamond.

Insurance broker John Mills said here he had arranged for three per cent of the total insurance for the $1,100,000 diamond to be placed in Australia.

Under the all-risk insurance policy, Miss Taylor must pay a premium of $2,500 each time she wears the diamond, Mills said.

She is allowed to take it from the bank vault only 30 days in any one year.

Milk Price Will Go Up

TORONTO (CP) — The price of milk to consumers in southern Ontario will go up at least one cent a quart before the end of 1970, the chairman of the Ontario Milk Marketing Board said Wednesday.

George McLaughlin told the fourth annual meeting of Ontario dairy farmers that the board plans to raise the price it pays milk producers by 35 cents a hundredweight to $7. This increase will be passed on to consumers.

Senator Kennedy May Face Criminal Charges After Inquest

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (Reuters) — The inquest into the death of Mary Jo Kopechne is expected to end today, but further court actions could still confront Senator Edward Kennedy.

The four-day secret hearing into the circumstances surrounding the drowning of Miss Kopechne in the senator's car on Chappaquiddick, Island in July would toward its close amid indications that the last of the Kennedy brothers might yet have to face criminal charges.

Kennedy already has been convicted of leaving the scene of the accident—a charge to which he pleaded guilty here July 25 and received a two-month suspended jail sentence.

District Attorney Edmund Dinis, who ordered the inquest, and his staff were reported considering whether sufficient evidence had been obtained this week to seek a grand jury indictment against the senator for "driving to endanger the lives of others."

This charge under state law would constitute a misdemeanor, punishable on conviction with a maximum jail term of two years.

But a jury would convict on such a charge only if it were convinced by prosecution evidence that Kennedy had displayed a "negligent attitude" while driving.

Some members of the district attorney's staff are known to hold the opinion that the senator's failure to report the accident for eight or nine hours indicated negligence.

Kennedy was reported to feel that he would be vindicated by the inquest hearing and wanted the transcript of this week's hearings published as soon as possible.

But it may be weeks, even months, before the transcript is released by the state Superior Court and the full story of Chappaquiddick opened for public examination.

There were unconfirmed reports that Kennedy told the closed door inquiry before Judge James A. Boyle, when he testified Monday, that his failure to report the accident immediately was due to shock, bewilderment and confusion.

Much will depend on the assessment of his testimony by Judge Boyle who will submit a report with a full record of the inquest to the Superior Court.

But, the district attorney and the county grand jury which is still technically in session can, if they consider it necessary, proceed with an independent investigation and possibly bring charges against the senator.

New Brief Re-opens Issue

School Board Wasting Money Charge Tweed Residents

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Hastings county board of education's decision to close Tweed-Hungerford High School is "is not economically or educationally justifiable" a brief from the Tweed-Hungerford Ratepayers' Association states.

The brief, prepared for presentation to the board of education at the end of the month, was released to the press today by Laird Morton, chairman of the "save-our-school" association formed Oct. 9.

"The loss of a high school in any community — is a direct, tailspring, dehumanizing, cultural and economic disaster," the brief stated.

Following a 13-page argument, bolstered by a 19-item reference section at the end of the brief, the association asserts that "the conclusions are self evident"; that the high school is a viable economic unit, accommodation at Centre Hastings in the fall of 1970 will be insufficient to handle the students from Tweed and the new composite school proposed for Bayside "is not economically sound and is not justifiable from the standpoint of the ratepayers in Hastings."

The brief says that Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc will be geared to accommodate 1,200 students in September. Of these, 69 per cent will be vocational students and 31 per cent will be academic students.

"In this addition to Centre Hastings above accommodation for only 53 additional academic students, it follows that of the 284 strictly academic students (58 per cent of Tweed - Hungerford's 1969 enrolment) 181 students from Tweed - Hungerford High School will have accommodation in the fall of 1970," the brief reads.

"As the problems faced by the county board is an overloading of schools in the Belleville - Trenton area, which is a result of an influx of students from Prince Edward County, Bayside and North Thurlow townships.

"To solve this problem the Hastings County Board of Education is considering the building of a $3,000,000 composite school at Bayside.

"In the meantime, the Prince Edward County board of education has announced plans to erect a high school in Ameliasburg to accommodate the 370 high school students in that area who have been compelled to attend the Hastings school system.

"With the withdrawal of the Ameliasburg students and the retention of Tweed - Hungerford High School as a composite school (involving only a six-small vocational addition) plus the current addition at Centre Hastings Secondary School, it is more than evident that the spending of $3,000,000 for the proposed Bayside school is not justifiable."

The brief charges that in "details regarding closing of Tweed - Hungerford High School as presented to the board, certain statements are incorrect and facts mis-represented."

The association notes that there has been little research to assess the merits of large composite schools, such as Centre Hastings. In support of the statement it cites an address given by Vernon Ready, head of McArthur College of Education in Kingston.

"Furthermore, contrary to the statements made contending the idea that the new composite system is not feasible in the smaller county, Dr. R. McCarthy has stated that it is not only feasible, but can be readily adapted to larger and smaller schools," the brief adds.

This is backed by a statement in the reference section by Reeve Barbara Allen of Tweed, regarding a meeting with Dr. McCarthy in October. "In fact, it was suggested that the Tweed-Hungerford High School could be added to and the curriculum expanded," she said in her report of the meeting.

The brief challenges the per pupil cost of educating Tweed-Hungerford secondary school students, both the 234 academic students in the Tweed school and the 118 vocational students sent to Centre Hastings that year.

It suggests the figure of $1,119 given by the board as the cost of educating one pupil in 1968 is incorrect.

The figure given in the brief is $746 per pupil for 1968, excluding transportation costs. During the same year the per pupil cost, including transportation under the Bay of Quinte District High School (including Centre Hastings) was $830 and the cost at Trenton High School was $783.

Another factor in favor of the Tweed-Hungerford High School, the brief states, is its low pupil-teacher ration — 17.5 to 1.

The school has teachers available, capable of instructing in everything except Geography and art. An elementary school teacher at the adjacent public school is qualified to teach art to any high school student selecting the option.

"It would seem apparent from the background briefed that the logical decision would be to consider Tweed-Hungerford as a 'feeder school,'" the brief comments.

The brief adds that Tweed-Hungerford High School "has enjoyed the reputation attributed to it by educators of being the top academic school in Hastings county."

"The separate and public school supporters in the area enjoy the most cordial and amicable relations," the brief states in its introduction. "This can undoubtedly be traced to the fact that as young people, the students of both religious persuasions have been brought together at the secondary school level where life-long friendships and ties of mutual loyalty and tolerance are formed. This is the essence of the community spirit that exists in Tweed and Hungerford today."

The high school has been sold by the county board to the Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board. After closure in June the separate schools board intends to convert the school to accommodate its Grades 7, 8, 9 and 10 students in the Tweed-Hungerford area.

Winter No Longer Freezes Progress

Winter no longer is a stumbling block to building Canada as this Belleville-area scene shows. Well under way on the city's outskirts after breaking ground in mid-November is construction of $600,000 Gulf Oil service station. When summer comes it will reveal service centre that includes 98-seat restaurant on Macdonald - Cartier Freeway and Highway 37.

Sales and Ad Speaking Course Presented as Aid to Public

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

The Sales and Ad Club has decided that the art of public speaking need not remain elusive any longer — but be brought into the wide open spaces where it can be uncovered for what it really is — communication.

This is the idea organizers have adopted for what they call "a practical course in public speaking", which will commence Jan. 14 and run for eight consecutive evenings.

The course is broken down into six sections, planned with an uncomplicated approach for individuals who find themselves in front of an audience and just want to do the best they can.

"Their best may be good enough, but the problem with most people is that they don't know how to bring out the best of their abilities to come across to an audience", said Moira Principal, Linton Read, who will be spearheading the course.

"This is where the course comes in. To establish that all - important "ease", in the easiest and most direct method possible."

One of the course organizers explained Mr. Read's long - standing reputation as a speaker and a master of ceremonies as the club's reason for choosing the Moira principal to direct the project.

To Mr. Read, who will tell you he is primarily an English teacher, communication is the first concern.

"I taught public speaking for many years, although not recently. I found myself filling the bill on several occasions," he explained.

Of the eight course sessions, Mr. Read will conduct five, leaving the remaining three for guest lecturers.

Each section will be prolonged by an introduction, then the "students" will give practice talks, followed by criticisms of each effort.

Mr. Read stressed the necessity of practice speaking as essential to the course.

"We will keep it at a maximum level," he remarked.

He indicated that he feels the course will attempt to deal with the practical problems of speaking before an audience, "not turning out orators".

"Most people envy the ability of others to speak in public. In reality, it is not that difficult, but simply requires the ability to be gracious, to talk on your feet — all with a measure of self-confidence."

Mr. Read emphasized the importance of preparation, good organization, which all add up to confidence and effectiveness.

The Sales and Ad Club, explained club member William Prentice, is not a service club but composed of interested businessmen and professionals who organize various programs throughout the year.

Mr. Prentice termed the public speaking course as a "community service" available to everyone.

Response to the course, at the present time, has been good, he said, commenting that he hoped the quota would be filled before Jan. 14.

PE Asks $75 Bounty; Planning Wolf Hunt

PICTON — Prince Edward county council has petitioned the federal government to increase the bounty on wolves.

Spearheading the attack on wolves is South Marysburg's Reeve Allan Ralley, whose resolution, adopted by county council, will be sent to Hon. Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests.

The reeve told council the wolf population is increasing steadily and has increased menace to livestock. Large indemnity payments have been made to livestock owners.

Reeve Ralley is seeking permission from the government to permit county councils to set the maximum bounty on wolves at $75 for animals over three months of age. Wolves under three months of age would bring a $25 bounty to hunters. Present bounty rate is $25 an animal.

To keep the wolf from the door until council receives a decision on the petition, Reeve Ralley is relying on a hunt, to be organized in February by county constable, Earl Marvin.

Snow Hits Area Again But City, Trenton Escape

Belleville has once more escaped the full brunt of a snowstorm that hit the area last night and in some localities is still persisting.

According to CFB Trenton's duty forecaster, Belleville and Trenton escaped heavy snowfall registering only about an inch of snow.

However in areas west and south of Belleville snow fell in quantities from six inches to one foot.

Port Hope recorded 11 inches and duty forecaster out of here had readings that were similar.

"The snow is still falling there (Port Hope)", the forecaster said.

Picton and Prince Edward County reported snowfall amounting to at least six inches and this area reports snow plows out all over the county.

Picton itself reported that the town was covered with about a foot of snow. The snow fell there began early last evening and has continued steadily ever since.

In Athol Township driving conditions were further hindered by 25 mile per hour winds that caused heavy drifting.

The duty forecaster blamed Lake Ontario for the heavy snowfall explaining that the snow fell only in areas exposed directly to the shore of the great lake.

The hard hit areas could receive a few more inches before the day is out especially in Prince Edward County.

But again, the Belleville area should be protected from the stormy blast.

The snow will cause a small warming influence today, forecasters said the next few days the temperatures will gradually get colder until Sunday or Monday.

Skies will clear tomorrow in most areas, but again Prince Edward County may be in for some more snow.

IN MEMORIAM

WOOD — In loving memory of our dear mother, Barbara Ann Wood, who passed away Jan. 8, 1967.
Time may pass and years may fly
To speak my mother I will not try
Dear mother, you did the best you could
Your smiling eyes in a photo front of me
Your gentle hands I will not see
But memories
You leave your pain and broke my heart
To ease
You are beside me in all I do
And love you more each day
As time goes through.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by husband George.

WOOD — In loving memory of my dear mother, Barbara Ann Wood, who passed away Jan. 8, 1967.

Committee Toys with Evicting Smokers at City Arena

If members of the city recreation-arena committee have their way there will be some definite action taken to enforce the ban against smoking in the Belleville arena.

And if some members have their way smoking will be banned — even if it means eviction of the offenders.

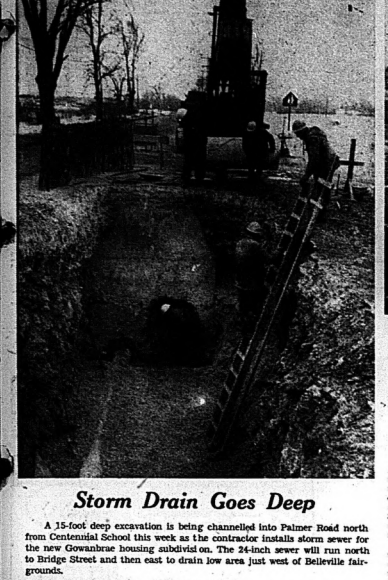
The matter of smoking came up for full scale discussion at last night's inaugural meeting of the recreation-arena committee and although no immediate action was forthcoming a special committee was set up to confer with the fire chief, city manager and arena management and come up with some solution.

Ironically, smoking is already banned at hockey games and signs to this effect are posted. But getting rid of the smoking seems to be a matter of enforcement.

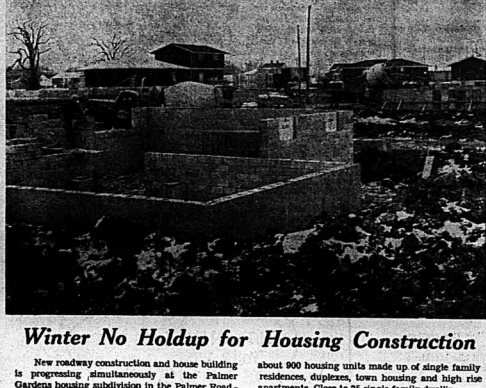
Ald. Robin Jeffrey was prepared to introduce a motion completely banning smoking in the arena except in specified areas — even if it means eviction of the offenders.

But Ald. Paul Russell was a bit doubtful whether such a motion could be rigidly enforced in view of present contracts and in fairness to season ticket holders to Senior A hockey games.

He said new tickets would have to be printed spelling out that smoking offenders would be evicted.



Committee chairman Donald Soutter asked if the no smoking edict could be enforced and whether the committee wanted to evict smokers.



"Some people don't like smoke in their eyes," returned Ald. Jeffrey who said these customers should also be given some consideration.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds observed that the city owned the arena and accordingly had the authority to enforce no smoking because of its fire danger.

Ald. Russell said that smoking in designated areas such as the canteen could be just as dangerous as smoking in the arena proper.

In the end a special committee of Ald. Soutter, recreation director L. S. Williams, city manager J. R. Reynolds, arena manager Robert Burrowes and fire chief Leo Culhane was named to investigate further and come up with a solution.

Winter No Holdup for Housing Construction

New roadway construction and house building is progressing simultaneously at the Palmer Gardens housing subdivision in the Palmer Road - Bridge Street area. Subdivision being developed by Gowanbrae Ltd. of Toronto will eventually have about 900 housing units made up of single family residences, duplexes, town housing and high rise apartments. Close to 25 single family dwellings are currently in varying stages of construction.

Storm Drain Goes Deep

A 15-foot deep excavation is being channelled into Palmer Road north from Centennial School this week as the contractor installs storm sewer for the new Gowanbrae housing subdivision. The 24-inch sewer will run north to Bridge Street and then east to drain low area just west of Belleville fairgrounds.

Four-site Study Prepared For Proposed Second Arena

City recreation - arena commission staff officials are not entirely satisfied that the suggested Coleman Flats site is the best location for the proposed Quinte Action Centre Arena.

The city last year offered the municipally owned Coleman Flats location as a site for the proposed covered ice surface, but a study has shown that two other locations might be more suitable.

Four possible sites for the proposed arena have been submitted to the recreation commission with recommendations as to choice. The study was prepared at the request of committee chairman Donald Soutter.

These areas are the Haig Road School Board site in the southeast corner of the city; an area off Rollins Drive, immediately south of Rimmanual Baptist Church; and St. Joseph's Church: the formerly proposed city property on Coleman Flats, and the Centennial Secondary School property in the western limits of the city.

The first choice of recreation director L. S. Williams for the proposed Quinte Action Centre is the area off Rollins Drive.

The reason for this property being given first choice is because of population density and accessibility, although it was admitted that the cost of acquiring this property might reduce this to fourth choice.

Second choice of Mr. Williams as the arena site would be the Centennial School and Sir John A. Macdonald school area. The desirability of this area is enhanced by the fact that there is park land available, it was stated. Housing development is taking place in this area and the site has good accessibility. It also ties in with a comprehensive plan still "at the drawing board stage to develop 14 acres as an integrated recreation site.

Third choice of staff personnel is the designated location on Coleman Flats. However it was stated this site had limited accessibility and would not encompass future development. Fourth choice for the arena site is the Haig road school property but here again limited future development potential.

If the Coleman Flats site is not selected, it was recommended that serious consideration be given to have a study made of this area as to the feasibility of development for a ski hill and toboggan area.

No action was taken on the report with the recommendations being tabled for later consideration at a joint meeting of the recreation arena commission and the board of parks management.

The proposal of the Quinte Action Centre Commission is to erect a minor hockey arena to cost an estimated $200,000. A walkathon staged by the committee last fall raised approximately $30,000 toward the cost of the arena.

Rec Centre Addition Delayed

The Belleville Recreation-Arena Committee last night tabled a staff recommendation calling for construction of a 30 by 48 foot two-storey addition to the Pinnacle Street recreation centre for use as a senior citizens' drop-in and additional office space.

Action on the recommendation will be held in abeyance until it is learned whether there is any possibility that the county health unit now occupying the ground floor of the recreation building, would move to other quarters.

If so the ground floor accommodation could be used for a senior citizens' drop-in centre.

The 153-member senior citizens' group currently use the second floor of the recreation building for evening get-togethers but there is objection to stair climbing and to the fact the accommodation is not available as a day time drop-in centre.

Other locations have been considered as a drop - in centre location near buses, parking space and nearby shopping available at the recreation centre locations.

The recreation committee was told that although the senior citizens' group has a membership of only 153 persons, there actually were more than 2,000 people in the city 65 years of age and over. Alderman Robin Jeffrey said that the community services organizations had arranged accommodation for senior citizens' drop-in centres at several of the churches and it was suggested there should be some co - ordination between the two groups.

Piasecki Conference Continuing

PICTON (Staff) — Walter Rummons, resident representative for Piasecki Aircraft, this morning reported that a conference here between Frank N. Piasecki and government representatives is "going very well."

One of the topics for discussion is the LO-1100 helicopter required for government use. Piasecki Aircraft entered the bidding competition for the contract several months ago.

Mr. Piasecki arrived in Picton with several company officials on Monday prior to yesterday's conference with Canadian Armed Forces officials and the department of supply and services personnel.

Mr. Symmons said that certain details of the discussions might be revealed tomorrow.

Brainwashed Public

Few ever take time to consider the fact, any more than they realize the extent of the brainwashing that is involved, but the broadcasting media is carrying out to a wide area of intellectual taste but to the lowest common denominator of popular appeal.

Harry Boyle, vice-chairman of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission charges that the concentration on ratings and popular appeal has ignored broadcasting's responsibility to "reveal society to itself."

In a speech to an Association of American Law Schools meeting in San Francisco, Mr. Boyle said there was a responsibility for broadcasting to be more than "an escape media." The North American broadcast medium had spent millions promoting the theory that anyone had a right to "continue at a mental level of ten years." He has a valid point.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation moreover displays an anti-American bias. By the same token a strongly leftist bias is evident in the views expressed by some CBC correspondents, as well as by guest speakers from universities and public life generally.

But the program content is not all bad, and the Communists are not always made to look as if they are about to inherit the earth. Some of the CBC's non-political documentary programming is excellent; where it is political though, particularly in an east-west context, the viewer must be careful not to put too much credence on material that is clearly biased or misleading.

This applies not only to affairs in Canada and the United States, but also to areas like Northern Ireland where recently film of the riots there and reports suggested the entire country was aflame whereas only a small proportion of the population was immediately involved. Newspapers also must share some of the blame for making the situation look worse than it was.

The public is entitled not only a wide choice in entertainment and in the cultural sphere, but to a balanced account of what is taking place in the world. Even in the Middle East there are areas of peace, far removed from the actual fighting, and in the world at large there are countries and millions of "silent majority" citizens living normal and reasonably happy lives. The news media has a responsibility to put its finger on that pulse too, one that beats far from strife and discord.

A Versatile Fellow

There was debonair Omar Sharif, professional gambler and card sharper getting along fine as husband of Barbra Streisand, in the role of Fanny Brice in "Funny Girl" — getting along fine that is, until he loses his shirt and pride compels him to ask his wife to divorce him.

But the story of the film aside, the interesting thing about Mr. Sharif is that he is an Arab and Miss Streisand is a Jew. Perhaps the politicians should step down, give up their futile efforts to bring peace to the Middle East, and ask Omar and Barbra to embark on a goodwill tour of the troubled lands where two peoples are in such tragic confrontation.

As one of the leading character actors of the day, Mr. Sharif has ranged from roles as Russian in Dr. Zhivago to a Latin — the suave and comical Mexican bandit in MacKenna's Gold, with Gregory Peck, and the legendary Che (Ernesto) Guevara in Che, the story of the Argentine who played a leading role in Fidel Castro's Cuban revolution and in 1967 was killed in Bolivia while trying to spread the revolutionary gospel there.

But Mr. Sharif has other strings to his bow. He is an international bridge player. He has captained the Egyptian team in the last two bridge olympiads and will be in Winnipeg of all places later this month, with a team of four, for the Manitoba Centennial celebrations.

The tour opens in Chicago January 12, and moves to Winnipeg for a week starting January 19. Subsequently, the players will appear in other American cities and finally, in London, England.

We trust the Manitoba bridge experts being pitted against Mr. Sharif's team will not be overawed by the actor's occasionally sinister screen image. Anyway, players doubtless will be asked to leave their pistols at the door, or place them on the table or whatever it was they used to do in the good old horse operas.

C. D. Howe Said It: Tax and Spend . .

And Promises Are Broken in Ottawa to Keep It That Way

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — You must have heard it said that speeches in Parliament do not much matter any more . . . that people are not listening or reading — and that the Daily Question Period is really the only time the Commons comes alive.

And there is some truth in this.

For there are too many dull and dreary speeches that get onto Parliament's word-by-word Hansard record, and nowhere else.

Of course, there are still big parliamentary days and Front Page speeches — the prime minister on the state of the nation, the finance minister with his budget, and even perhaps any member of the cabinet outlining her government policy decisions.

But comes on an MP dull-and, droning away on a bleak speech, and the Commons all but empties, spectators drift out of the galleries, and the Honorable Member finds he is talking to an audience composed only of the House chairman, the Hansard reporter, the staff around the clerk's table, and the page boys.

There are, though, thank your lucky democratic stars, some great performers who, far from dull, can zap it to Prime Minister Trudeau and his 39 cabinet ministers with zestful impact enough to set them squirming.

Among the more talented whammo artists is Lloyd Crouse, Conservative MP for Nova Scotia's South Shore, a pro, nicely conditioned through six Parliaments and 13 years.

Listen to him as he lets the government have the rough side of his tongue on the tax bill, extending that three percent surcharge on individual and corporation income for still another year.

Two years ago, he recalled, the then Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp, in initially proposing the surtax, promised — as quoted on page 7,304 of Hansard, March 7, 1968 — "it will apply for only the two taxation years."

And now here was the government, not merely extending it for another year, but proposing in the White Paper on Taxation, to perpetuate it.

"Is it any wonder," cried Lloyd Crouse, "that the cabinet has become the most incredible ever to afflict Canadians?

"When a finance minister stands in his place in the House of Commons and states, with no ifs, ands or buts that the tax will be limited to two years, and then 18 months later this same government has the gall to say it will be extended for a third, then I ask you, who in Canada can believe anything this promise-breaking people say?

"The sorry answer has to be no one.

"For the hard truth of the matter is that this surtax now never will be repealed. It is forever."

How could Lloyd Crouse say this? How did he know? Who had told him?

Easy.

Finance Minister Benson, in speaking in the Commons on the White Paper, had said it. In these words:

"The current general tax rate schedule, the old age security tax, the social development tax, the three percent surtax (all part of the income tax) will all be replaced by the new rate schedule."

So the surtax is to be built-in as part of the new "comprehensive" tax structure along with higher middle income rates and capital gains.

To call the surtax "temporary," as two Liberal finance ministers had done, each in his turn, was, in the Lloyd Crouse assessment of things, "a measure of government arrogance and of indifference to the public interest."

Taking Sharp and Benson at their words, taxpayers "had every right to expect an end to the surtax," went on the Maritime MP, "but now they find the finance minister with his hand still deep in their pocket, grasping, grubbing and groping for every last dollar to meet such extravagance as another $350,000 for the prime minister's retinue, and $1,500,000 for the Senate committees."

It was to be wondered that the government would seek to perpetuate the surtax, noted Lloyd Crouse, for this was the very thing on which former Prime Minister Pearson's last government had been defeated in Parliament; saving itself only by "cooking" the constitution that getting beaten on a tax bill no longer was for real.

The old dictator, "Trader" Howe, "CD" of the King and St. Laurent years, first said it: "Government business is to tax and tax and tax, and spend and spend and spend."

It since has been elevated to a political tribal rite, and will so remain until Canadians can fill the House of Commons with MPs like Lloyd Crouse.

Fire Hazard

Prevention Is Better Than Cure

Hamilton Spectator

Hamilton's fire department is one of North America's leaders in fire prevention and Chief Swanborough proposes another forward thinking scheme for the 1970s.

The department intends to pre-plan fires, hoping the plans never will have to be used, of course.

As an example, Chief Swanborough has conjured up a frightening vision — a fire in downtown's biggest department store. Under the scheme, fire prevention experts would map out procedures to be followed if a blaze broke out in the store or in other large buildings around town.

Pre-planning isn't new in Hamilton firefighting procedure. The department has organized plans, people and equipment to prevent, combat and control fires at fuel storage depots and other high-risk locations.

The same precautionary principles would be applied to a wider circle of industries and commercial complexes.

Chief Swanborough points out that the program has not yet been prepared. Considerable planning must take place before it opens even on a trial basis.

But the concept is sound and it should be pursued with vigor. And owners of commercial and industrial buildings should spare no effort to co-operate.

Willy Brandt Under Pressure

Free Democrat Coalition Partners Fear Leftist Bias

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Willy Brandt's West German government, which has given new impetus to efforts aimed at a significant thaw in relations with the Soviet bloc, is experiencing some headaches at home after less than three months in office.

Brandt, the federal republic's first Social Democratic chancellor, made a striking impression at the December summit meeting of the European Common Market, his initial appearance as a head of government at a big multi-national conference.

He won wide attention, too, with his fresh initiatives towards Communist Eastern Europe.

These were considered extra reason for hoping that barriers associated with the cold war would eventually become less constricting, in line with new patterns of commercial and political life affecting the entire Continent.

But the Free Democratic party, partner of the Social Democrats in Brandt's coalition cabinet, has lately been torn by internal wrangling about whether participation in the government has drawn the group too far left.

The Free Democrats, a minority party liberal in some policies but conservative in others, suffered a big drop in popular support at the September general election.

One of Brandt's major tactical triumphs was his success in persuading them to join the current coalition, after an election which saw their percentage of the vote fall to 5.8 compared with 9.5 in 1965.

Leading those Free Democrats critical of their party's present orientation is Erich Mende, a former head of the group.

Walter Scheel, the party's present chief and Brandt's foreign minister, has made stinging counter-attacks.

Whatever the immediate outcome of the feud, Free Democrats in general fear they may suffer further setbacks in provincial elections as a result of their party's divided state.

Any such weakening of the Free Democrats would spell trouble for Brandt, whose own party ended up trailing former chancellor Georg Kiesinger's Christian Democrats in votes at the Sept. 28 election.

The Christian Democrats, although saddled with internal problems also, emerged from the start that they would make life rough for Brandt's precarious coalition.

The stresses within the Free Democratic ranks may be an outcome of pressures exerted by the Christian Democrats, for years the governing party in West Germany and for part of that time a coalition partner of the party now led by Scheel.

Prior to a Christmas holiday in Tunisia, Brandt himself was showing signs of strain resulting from his heavy schedule of work as chancellor.

On his ability to ride out the home-front troubles seemingly in store for him depends the extent to which West Germany works to overcome the problem of official recognition for Communist East Germany and other chronic obstacles hindering better relations with the Soviet bloc.

Brandt's fate will also affect the prospects of continuing Market expansion as well as West Germany's chances for achieving a long-sought détente in the disorders that sporadically soared its streets during the 1960s.

Regional Recreation Plans Are Needed Now: Ring

PICTON — Where will "fun and games" fit into the proposed two-tier system of regional government? To answer this question, Picton recreation director, Wayne Ring has successfully petitioned town council for permission to hold a meeting of all interested recreation committees in Prince Edward County. Suggested topics of the meeting to be attended by a member of the Prince Edward County planning board, include a summary of present programs and activity attendance totals from each township or municipality.

Proposed cost breakdowns will be mentioned and communication between the county board of education and the director of recreation examined. The present recreation program receives operational grants from the Ontario department of education.

"Recreation's place in regional government has been repeatedly discussed at monthly meetings of the East Central Ontario Recreation Directors' Association and during the annual meeting," said Mr. Ring. "The general feeling was that each possible regional area should meet and discuss these matters so that we could make appropriate suggestions and put forth sound concepts when a move is made in this direction."

He explained that unless this concern is expressed when regional government decisions are made, it is felt that professional recreation officials will not be included in discussions and decisions will be made without giving them a voice, Mr. Ring said there has been a great deal of speculation concerning how and where recreation will fit into regional government. "We should discuss how it can fit in," he stressed.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market moved into its fourth successive downward session today, declining moderately in light mid-morning trading.

However, gains outnumbered losses 129 to 112 with 193 issues unchanged.

On index, industrials were down .48 to 182.83 and golds .27 to 127.20. Western oils gained .27 to 206.80 and base metals .19 to 177.68.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 766,000 shares compared with 686,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Nine of the 17 industrial components advanced while eight declined. All group movement was fractional except for general manufacturers which were strong, led by Ford Canada, up 3½ to 65.

Trading in shares of Mentor Explorations was delayed at the opening to match orders. The stock opened at 45 cents, down 30 cents.

Mentor holds a share-interest in Eagle Gold Mines which was advised by its consulting engineer to defer bringing into production its gold mining property in Quebec because of increased costs and the current price for gold.

Agnico, which also has a stock-interest in Eagle, was down 5 cents to 21.00.

On index Tuesday, industrials lost .70 to 184.31. Golds rose 4.31 to 127.86, base metals .72 to 118.90 and western oils .12 to 208.62.

Losers outnumbered gains 254 to 245 with 245 issues unchanged.

Volume totalled 2,331,000 shares compared with 2,865,000 Tuesday.

Thirteen of the 17 industrial components declined, led by steel and construction and material issues. Four advanced slightly.

Alberta Gas Trunk dropped 1¾ to 30¼. The company is offering $35,000,000 of 7¼-per-cent debentures which are convertible into common stock at $20 a share for the next 12 years.

than ceremonial — also are likely to be organized.

In the vice regal letter to city hall officials say the governor general would like to meet school children "provided they can be assembled in one central location."

On the morning of March 14, says the letter, he would also like to tour Belleville, if possible visiting children and veterans in hospital.

The vice regal information found Loyalist College officials delighted their invitation had been accepted.

"We are very happy that the governor general - - - has consented to officiate at this ceremony," reached Frank Rabel, newly-elected college board chairman.

Said Loyalist president J. K. Bracken: "I'm delighted that the first unit of the permanent (campus) structure should be honored by the significant fact the governor general has consented to lay its cornerstone."

Playground Leaders To Get Same Pay

The Belleville Recreation - Areas committee is going to end its wage discrimination against female employees which in the past has seen male playground leaders receive higher pay than the girls.

Commencing this year male and female playground leaders will receive the same pay.

The policy change and new schedule of pay was approved in principle by board members last night at their first meeting of the new year.

The new wage scale recommended by the committee calls for a starting wage of $80 per week for first year playground leaders ranging up to $90 per week for the third year and beyond. Supervisors will receive $90 per week in their first year increasing to $95 in the second year and playground co-ordinator $75, increasing to $80.

Waterfront lifeguards will receive $90 in their first year, increasing to $95 in the second year, and the waterfront activities co-ordinator will receive $70 per week, increasing to $75.

First year community school leaders will receive $60 per week increasing to $65 for their second year.

The recreation commission will operate 21 regular playgrounds this coming summer and will have lifeguards at four waterfront areas.

Two community school activities sites — Hillcrest and at Queen Mary School are recommended.

Total cost of the playground and community schools operation this year is estimated at $74,170 — an increase of $3,500 over last year.

Three Cars of CN Passenger Train Jump Track

TORONTO (CP) — A major derailment was narrowly avoided Wednesday night when three cars of a CNR passenger train westbound to Sarnia, Ont., jumped the tracks and came to rest in the fast diesel of a Toronto factory.

Fourteen persons were injured, four seriously, when the Tempo train, carrying 128 passengers, hit an open siding switch at the Facelle and Dominion Cellulose Co. Ltd. plant.

The derailment occurred about three miles east of the scene of a similar accident April 30, 1969, in which two men were killed and 36 persons injured on a Sarnia-bound Tempo.

That accident was blamed on tampering with a track switch.

John Noel, manager of CNR public relations, asked how the siding switch came to be open Wednesday night, replied:

"We don't really know yet. It could be just one of the wheels knocked it open."

One of the four persons seriously injured was identified as Laura Strain, 19, of Sudbury, Ont., struck in the abdomen by a piece of tubular fencing which pierced the floor of a coach car. It took police about 45 minutes to free her from the wreckage in 10-degree temperatures.

She was listed in critical condition with multiple injuries after a three-hour operation at Northwestern General Hospital.

In fair condition in hospital were Mrs. Grace Vandenberg of Strathroy, Ont., suffering from spinal injuries, Margaret Hyman of Toronto and Linda Scott of Port Elgin, Ont.

While the injured were removed to ambulances, other passengers were taken to cafeterias inside the Facelle plant where some of them were treated for minor cuts. About 45 passengers returned to Toronto to board a later train while others were picked up by chartered buses.

One of the derailed cars knocked over a tank of propane gas before coming to rest against the tanks containing about 20,000 gallons of fuel oil. The tanks are located near a natural gas pumping station supplying the plant's boilers.

Some passengers said they didn't immediately realize what was happening. Ray Leach, 21, of Brockville, Ont., a student at University of Waterloo, said it felt like "they were standing still."

He and a female companion were in another car at the time and "when we returned to our car we found her seat turned around and crushed."

"If she'd been in it—well, it would have been bad news."

The train, made up of a diesel engine, baggage car and three passenger cars, left Toronto's Union Station at 5 p.m. and was travelling an estimated 55 miles per hour when it hit the branch siding in the Facelle plant at 5:50 p.m.

Dairy Subsidy System May Collapse

TORONTO (CP) — The fourth annual meeting of he Ontario Milk Marketing Board was told Wednesday that Canada's system of subsidies to dairy farmers "may well be on the verge of collapse."

Ellard Powers, a member of the board executive, said the subsidy system could only be saved by extensive changes. He was supported by S. C. Barry, chairman of the Canadian Dairy Commission, which pays out the subsidies.

Mr. Barry told the meeting that producers can expect a reduction in subsidies this year to about 74 cents a hundredweight from 86 cents. The reduction is necessary to finance marketing of surplus milk on glutted world markets, he said.

Under the present subsidy program, producers of industrial milk—milk used for products other than bottled milk and cream—get $1.25 a hundredweight up to a certain quota. The commission holds back an average of 29 cents a hundredweight to pay for disposal of mounting surpluses in world markets.

Skim milk powder production in Canada last year totalled 380,000,000 pounds of which only about 180,000,000 pounds was used domestically.

Mr. Barry said the increase in each county. In some instances, the number of cases is extremely few; in others it is very great.

"Over the years the centres of population have changed quite radically. The county town is not necessarily a population centre."

He said this would suggest that certain areas could be regrouped, permitting a Supreme Court judge to sit for longer periods in areas where he is required, but is unable to do so at the present time because of the system.

Mr. Howland said Ontario's current system of county sittings "merits careful study and review, possibly by a royal commission. . . ."

Work Piles Up

Wishart Says Supreme Court Will Get More Judges

TORONTO (CP) — The Supreme Court of Ontario will be getting new judges, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Wednesday.

In a speech at the official opening of the winter assizes, Mr. Wishart said legislation had been passed providing for the appointment of additional judges and he hoped they would be named swiftly.

The attorney-general's speech came after Chief Justice Dalton Wells told the Supreme Court grand jury that the 36-member trial division faces steadily increasing litigation.

"At the present time the balance of cases waiting to be heard in Toronto, which in some ways is a barometer for the rest of the province, is 1,903 divorces, 508 non-jury cases and 126 civil jury cases."

Chief Justice Wells said that the number of serious criminal cases had decreased in the last year, but the increase in divorces had resulted in increased work for the court.

Some non-jury work suffered from a lack of attention in 1969, the chief justice said, because of the effort to clean up divorce cases.

Earlier an official of the Law Society of Upper Canada called for a review, possibly by a royal commission, of the system by which Supreme Court sittings are scheduled in Ontario counties.

W. G. C. Howland, society treasurer, said in a speech:

"The judicature Act now calls for sitting of the Supreme Court to be held twice a year in

Great Decade Ahead

FREDERICTON (CP) — Charles Lynch, chief of Southam News Services, said Wednesday that, despite problems facing Canada, he believes the 1970s will be the "greatest decade we've ever seen in this country."

Mr. Lynch, addressing the annual meeting of the Road Builders Association of New Brunswick, said he has never been so worried, so exalted or so challenged by a prime minister as he has been by Pierre Elliot Trudeau.

"I have great confidence in the guy," Mr. Lynch said, adding that he felt the key to Mr. Trudeau's success would be his handling of Quebec.

The Quebec people had turned their backs on separatism and were now looking toward Ottawa for a solution to their problems. The failure of Mr. Thatcher, a Conservative, at this stage in Canada's history "could well be a national disaster."

He described the prime minister as a revolutionary and said decisions such as defence cutbacks, constitutional reform, the government's foreign policy review and movement of the country toward a republic were "revolutionary stuff."

Mr. Lynch said one of his main concerns with the Trudeau government was the shroud of secrecy it was placing over its affairs.

The prime minister and his "hot shot whiz kids" had a general contempt for the press and regarded people such as "the likes of me as vulgarizers, politicians, know nothings, simplistes and distorters."

However, Mr. Lynch said, he was genuinely optimistic about the next few years and felt that historians would record that the coming of Pierre Elliot Trudeau, at the point in history when he did, was "almost a miracle and a great break for Canada."

Rochester Republican Holds Seat

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — An appeals court has upheld Republican Michael W. Roche's right to the controlling seat on the Rochester city council, but Democrats say the battle is far from over.

In a unanimous verdict, the appellate division of the New York State Supreme Court ruled that Roche was legally elected to the council in November.

Roche is the fifth Republican on the nine-member council, and under Rochester's council-manager form of government, the majority controls city hall. Democrats had been in control for eight years.

Democrats went to court after Roche's election, contending that he lived until just recently in suburban Chili and thus did not fulfil the residency requirements of a city councilman.

Lost Plane Lighted Way Home

HALIFAX (CP) — Powerful searchlights used by Canadian Forces tracker aircraft to identify shipping at night helped a lost civilian pilot reach safety Tuesday night.

The single-engine Cherokee aircraft became lost on a flight from Moncton, N.B., to Sydney, N.S., and when located by two tracker planes was over the Atlantic about 100 miles east of Halifax.

The military planes' flashing searchlights were spotted by the lost pilot at a distance of 70 miles, a CFB Shearwater spokesman said. The small plane was escorted to Halifax International Airport and landed with only 10 minutes fuel remaining.

Sub.-Lt. Bruce Sutherland of Okotoks, Alta., and Capt. Glen Johnson of London, Ont., pilots of the trackers, based at Shearwater, were commended by their squadron commander Cmdr. David Tate for their "initiative" in the search.

The civilian aircraft, recently purchased by the Gander, Nfld., Flying Club, was being flown in stages to Gander.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES FRANCIS HUGHES

Hughes – Bell

Rev. Father C. Gazeley officiated at the recent wedding ceremony in St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, when Georgina (Gena) Marie Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ross Bell, Belleville was united in marriage to James Francis Hughes, son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Hughes of Wilowdale. Sister Mary Avila was organist and accompanied the soloist, William Mann.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length wedding gown of crystal peau with the fitted bodice featuring a Mandarin neckline adorned with venise lace and long sleeves. The empire waist was accented with a self bow and highlighted at the back with a sweeping cathedral train edged with matching lace. Her venise lace headdress was caught to a four-tier bouffant silk illusion veil and she carried a cascade bouquet of two toned pink feathered carnations.

The maid of honor Miss Doreen Flunder wore a sheath type gown featuring a cranberry silk velvet full-length skirt with the deep pink crepe bodice featuring a high collar, long sleeves and Victorian ruffles down the front. Her headdress was a cranberry silk velvet bow. The bridesmaids Miss Pat Hopper and Mrs. Donna MacLachlan were dressed identically to the maid of honor and each attendant carried a white fur muff crested with pink carnations.

Murray Arnold of Willowdale attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were James Corbett and Barry Hughes.

The wedding reception was held at Club Canada where the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing an American Beauty shade ensemble consisting of pure silk worsted dress and matching coat. To complete her attire she wore a matching silk draped turban a corsage of white carnations and pink roses and shell sandals. The bridegroom's mother assisted, wearing a teal blue satin dress enhanced with silver braid, with silver mink hat and a corsage of white carnations and red sweetheart roses.

For the wedding trip to St. Adele, Quebec, the bride wore a brown crimplene dress and brown coat with mink wedding ring collar, brown accessories and a corsage of yellow carnations.

On return the couple will reside in Belleville.

Week of Prayer

'Consistency in Christian Living' Topic at Service

The Week of Prayer service Tuesday night in the Free Methodist Church, led by the pastor, R. Barclay Warren, featured congregational singing, and a message by Rev. A. Shell calling for consistency in Christian living. He said, "It is not good enough to pray the way we live. Somewhere along the line we must begin to live as we pray."

"The Five Virgins present an example of those who prayed as they lived. When the crisis hour came, they pushed the panic button. First they tried to borrow, and then to find a dealer open in the middle of the night. Many today, without half trying, just sit by and wait for things to happen. They are in a sea of crises. In the crisis they pray, 'Lord, help me.' It is like locking the door when the horse has run away or trying to bar entrance when the house is on fire.

Many of us are not sure what we want. We need a statement of purpose. Imagine a child saying, 'Mommy, I don't know whether I want to go out to play today or watch cartoons on T.V. or have a cookie.'

Praying the way we live may also refer to the universal disease in the church that is often called 'I trouble.' It can be a bit shocking if we analyze our own prayer and note how many times we use the first person singular pronoun, referring to self. But this kind of prayer merely reflects the life we live in 1970.

We are bombarded every day by advertisements and pressures from every angle that compel us to look out for number 1 — because if we don't, no one else will. We pray as we live, in panic, in uncertainty and inconsistency, and solidity.

It is not easy to live the way we pray. We remember in prayer the beauty of the land, yet we are destroying our natural resources at a rate that is hard to believe. We pollute the air and the water.

How concerned we are when we pray for world peace! Yet our nation, our community, produces materials that keep the war effort of USA possible. This is opening up a question that has no easy answer. But it is a question we fail to ask at our own peril. If we are going to live the way we pray, we are going to have to be concerned.

Some people don't like James because he stresses work so much. What he really asks is for actions that are consistent with one's faith. He points that though often we pray the way we live, we must begin to live the way we pray."

Mr. Sheil climaxed his message by quoting an appropriate poem which clearly dramatized the challenge.

The final service of the series will be held Thursday evening in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church with Dr. Harry Davis speaking.

MR. AND MRS. RONALD DURKIN

Durkin – Doyle

St. Michael's Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Mary Catherine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Doyle, Belleville and Ronald Joseph Durkin of Pointe Claire, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Durkin of Read. Officiating at the double-ring ceremony was Rev. J. MacGillivary. Organist was Miss Dorothy Grant and soloist was Michael Reed.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white floor-length silk velvet dress with long full sleeves and stand-up collar. The billowing skirt was caught up in a bow at the back and she wore a shoulder-length veil attached to a tiara headpiece. Her flowers were a cascade bouquet of red roses.

Maid of honor was Miss Maureen McAlpine, cousin of the bride. She wore an antique gold velvet dress trimmed with white lace with a matching hair ribbon and carried a velvet muff. Her corsage was yellow rose buds and bronze 'mums.

Bridesmaids were Miss Molly and Mary Beth Doyle, sisters of the bride. They were attired in green velvet dresses styled the same way as that of the maid of honor. Anne Brennan was flower girl and wore a similarly styled gown of antique gold and she carried a velvet muff with a corsage of yellow rose buds and bronze 'mums.

Best man was Peter Sheridan of Belleville. Ushers were Terry Durkin, brother of the bridegroom and Edward Durkin of Read, a cousin.

A reception was held at the bride's home where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a turquoise voile A-line dress with stand-up collar and long accordion pleated sleeves and matching hat. Her corsage was pink sweetheart roses. The bridegroom's mother wore a beige crimplene dress with brown accessories, mink stole and a corsage of yellow roses.

The couple will be residing at 67 Parda Ave., Point Claire, Quebec.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL ITEMS

Previous to her recent marriage, Mrs. James F. Hughes (nee Gena Bell) was honored at several miscellaneous showers including one given by Mrs. Frank Brookes with cohostess Mrs. William Lake; by Mrs. Grant Kells at Point Anne; by Mrs. Ruby Haney in Willowdale, and at another given by Miss Pat Hopper, a classmate of the bride, in Toronto. The bride was also entertained at a coffee party given by Mrs. R. C. Michaud and following rehearsal the bridal party was entertained at a buffet supper at the Tops Motor Hotel.

• • •

Previous to her marriage Mrs. Ronald Durkin (nee Mary Catherine Doyle) was honored at two showers. One was given at the home of Mrs. M. Durkin with Miss Sharon Brennan as co-hostess. Another was held at the home of Mrs. Jim Brennon with Mrs. McAlpine as co-hostess.

Mrs. Gerald Buzzell of Canberra, Australia is visiting with her mother, Mrs. Kay Hogg, 200 Victoria Ave., Belleville.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. William Kelsey, Belleville announce the engagement of their daughter, Susan Louise, to Cecil Harry Chase, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Chase, Carrying Place, R. R. 1. Marriage will take place on Saturday, February 14, 1970 at 4 p.m., in St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church, Belleville.

Many Courses Taught at OSD During Past Century of Teaching

By NANCY BARRIAGE
(Women's Reporter)

The Ontario School for the Deaf is celebrating its Centennial year. October 29, 1970 will be an important mile stone in its history.

In connection with the Centennial celebrations and a story featuring the educational activities provided for the girls seemed apropos.

Students from eastern and northern Ontario have been attending the school for 100 years. Here they learn to become largely self-sufficient and the necessary skills to prepare them for jobs in the outside world.

Levels 10 - 14 (ages 15-20) have half a day academic work. Vocational studies, involve home economics, food, sewing, beauty culture and laundry. The main area of employment, however, is typing and commercial skills. It, is important to realize that the girls attend the work of secretaries and stenographers which involves answering the telephone. Instead, they fill positions involving copy typing, filing, key punching and the operation of adding machines. Some girls get employment in dry cleaners and a few work in beauty salons.

A few of the classes do not divide into half vocational and half academic training. Those students with more promise academically may go to Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C., a special school for the deaf.

In home economics classes the girls learn to cook and get an opportunity to become familiar with the cooking terms so well known to hearing people. They also sponsor birthday parties as a school project. In sewing classes the girls learn the sewing skills similar to a period of hand sewing and knitting, along with rug making. In the second year all the sewing is done with machines. Mending, weaving and embroidery work is also part of the course. Then, in the third year, the girls knit sweaters and sew their own clothes.

Beauty culture involves hair setting and personal grooming. The girls involved contribute to the Christmas pageant by setting the hair of the participants.

By working in the laundry, the girls are learning how to cope with the less pleasant duties of housework.

The typing classes are quite popular. It is here that they must learn the skills that will take most of them into the outside world as potential job holders. They not only learn to type but also to use adding machines and key punch work. Office behavior is an important part of the course. Often a deaf girl will think she is being talked about when two people are conversing together, one of the teachers points out that it is important that she realize that this is not always true.

Finding a job after graduation is not such a difficult job as it might seem. The Canadian Hearing Society has its central office in Toronto has full time employees who are sent out to the schools for the deaf. These placement officers interview students several times a year in order to assess their special abilities. Once the student has been analyzed, a suitable job can usually be found. They also look for summer jobs for those students coming back to school.

Last year ten girls graduated from the school. Five of them have office jobs, two in the Department of Communications (Ottawa) and another two have factory jobs.

There are five full time and three part time teachers. In order to qualify as a teacher at the school, one must have a Teachers' College certificate (elementary school) or an O.C.E. certificate (secondary school).

Anniversary Buttons

Brenda Berkley, OSD student, pins anniversary button on school secretary Mrs. Jackie McFee. Buttons are being sold to raise funds to help offset cost of 100th anniversary celebrations. Belleville school has an enrolment of about 400 students.

Church Groups

CWL COUNCIL

MARMORA — Presidents at the January meeting of Marmora Council of the CWL held in the parish hall on Monday was Mrs. Joe O'Neill.

Routine business included a decision to begin card parties in the parish hall on Sunday, January 11. A new stove will be purchased at an early date for the kitchen.

Social action committee report was given which noted the need for funds for the work of the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace and discussed by convener, Mrs. Breen O'Connor. Each diocese in Ontario anticipates working on a particular project to help underprivileged countries in the world. One per cent of funds raised in parish councils, as well as the one per cent of individual members' personal expenditures has been voted for donation to the CCODP. Marmora Council will hold a card party on February 15, the first Sunday in Lent, with proceeds for this cause. A new series of slides explaining the work of the Organization will be shown before the card party.

Mrs. Paul Brady discussed the need for parents to check lyrics of records, and called attention to the emphasis on sex in records, TV soap operas and books. All communication media will be discussed in February, Catholic press month.

In a study concerning the attitudes about death, Mrs. Charles Brady pointed out the shifting of emphasis on the sad aspect of dying to a joyful attitude because it is the achievement of an ultimate goal in union with Christ. The use of white vestments at funeral Masses and funeral rites of a less mournful nature further emphasized this point. In the various stages of dying, the need for understanding friends to share in the experience, as well as spiritual support, was described in an article in the Sign Magazine.

Couple Celebrate 60th. Wedding Anniversary

BONARLAW — Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Burkitt of Bonarlaw recently celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary. They were married Dec. 29, 1909 by the late Rev. W. H. Clarke of Rawdon United Church.

More than 50 guests attended a family dinner at St. Mark's Anglican Church in Bonarlaw. The couple received many gifts including a money tree from the family and various presents from the grandchildren.

Hastings riding M.P.P., Charles Rollins arrived to congratulate them and presented them with a scroll on behalf of Premier John Robarts and the Ontario government. Present also was a sister, Mrs. Louis Green who was the bridesmaid at the wedding.

The couple have six children, William and Gerald of Bonarlaw; Reginald of Pethericks Corners; Mrs. Rena Dickie (Mabel) of Bonarlaw; Mrs. James Meneely (Margaret) of Oshawa and Mrs. Harry McAdam (Gladys) of Mt. Pleasant. .

The bride is the former Lena Reid of Harold. Following their marriage, the couple farmed until 14 years ago when they retired and moved to their present home on the 12th concession of Rawdon township, a short distance from the original homestead.

Tasty Fondue Sauces

By MARY MOORE

Yesterday I gave you some rules for using the fondue set which some fond friend or relative gave you for Christmas.

I promised to give you some sauces which I consider to be most popular to serve with Bœuf Bourguignonne.

You may use other meats with these sauces: raw pieces of lamb, pork tenderloin, chicken, scallops, shrimp or any meat tender enough to cook quickly in hot fat.

All of these sauces may be prepared one or two days in advance and stored in covered jars in refrigerator. (I used fancy little jam pots.) At mealtime each guest spoons a small amount of each onto his dinner plate.

SWEET 'N SOUR SAUCE
(Most popular)

2 tbsps. sugar
1 tbsp. corn starch
¼ cup cider vinegar
1¼ cups crushed pineapple including some syrup
1 tbsp. soy sauce

Mix all ingredients together in saucepan and cook stirring until thick. Store in covered jar or serving dish in refrigerator until mealtime.

CURRIED MAYONNAISE

½ cup genuine mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
½ cup dairy sour cream
1 tsp. curry powder.

Mix ingredients smoothly. Cover and store in refrigerator in serving bowl or jar until mealtime.

MUSTARD and CHUTNEY SAUCE

½ cup mayonnaise (not salad dressing)
3 tbsps. dairy sour cream
2 tsps. prepared mustard
¼ cup chutney

Mix ingredients smoothly. Cover and store in refrigerator in serving bowl or jar until mealtime.

MUSTARD and CREAM SAUCE

1 tbsp. dry mustard
1 tbsp. corn starch
1½ tbsps. sugar
2 tbsps. cider vinegar
½ cup hot water

Mix together dry in saucepan the mustard, corn starch and sugar until perfectly blended. Stir in remaining ingredients and cook stirring until thick and 1 min. longer. Cool and store in covered jar or serving dish in refrigerator until mealtime.

Be daring — create sauces of your own, throwing in such flavor boosters as horseradish, anchovy paste, Tabasco sauce, etc.

Dear Doris: In your reply to "No Justice" you suggest that the young vandals who destroyed the lady's garden and stole things from her basement came from broken homes; thus saying that the background excuses the offence.

Does extending love to children mean that a householder should accept amiability contained raids on his property?

The fact is, love is a two sided coin. Children should be taught that while they have their rights, the neighbors have theirs too, and if the parents can't understand it, then they should be made to understand, by police action, if necessary.

Make no mistake about it, children will respect the authority figure — parents, teacher, or whatever. Children are tougher than you think, boys and girls alike. — Boy Scout Leader.

Dear Leader: I couldn't agree more that discipline is a part of love children need. The too permissive kind is all too often the self-indulgence of a parent who is clueless about handling a shiftless more adequately.

But we know that when we encourage, we have a better result in the long run than when we keep slapping down an ill-adjusted youngster. This message seems to be needed so much more than anything about the importance of punishment, that I tend to stress it.

* * *

Dear Doris: I am 32 years old and am an X-ray technician, but I don't obtain any personal satisfaction from it. At present I am interested in teaching, especially kindergarten children, but would like your opinion. — Career Quandary.

Dear Quandary: It is a positive blight to be doing work you dislike. Work can be a tremendous means of self-expression, and you should be using your God-given talents.

If you have a yen to teach children, go ahead. You'll need a year of teacher training. If there is just no way you can manage this year out, there is work to be done with children outside of the actual school set-up, as in centres for crippled or retarded children.

Your next contact should either be with your department of education or the United Community Services of Belleville and District, Inc., 224 John St. N., P.O. Box 815.

Dear Doris: I, too, used to enjoy hearing "Albert and the Lion" and other like poems which were on our local radio years ago. I believe it was a well-known English actor who recited them; one, as I remember, being something about Anne Boleyn and her head.

I wonder if any of your readers remember it? I lost my copies of these and others to our 1950 flood. — Winnipegger.

Dear Winnipegger: I remember the song about Anne Boleyn — "With 'er 'ead tucked underneath her arm, she walked the bloody tower!" It was hilarious.

Can anybody come up with it?

Letters Give Versions On Cigarette Smoking

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Like millions of other decent, socially acceptable people, I smoke. Since I am a heavy smoker I am vastly uncomfortable if I must go for over an hour without a cigaret. You'll be glad to know that people who do not want smoking in their homes should not put out ash trays is absurd.

My wife does not smoke, but she has a kidney problem. We would no more go to a home where smoking is not allowed than we would accept an invitation from a hostess who locks the bathroom so guests can't use it. In my opinion, the principle is the same. Please be specific. — S.M.R.

DEAR S.M.R.: Your analogy is picturesque, but the principle is not the same. A guest who uses the lavatory in no way interferes with the comfort or the health of others.

I've never heard of a hostess who locked her bathroom so guests couldn't use it. Have you? It seems to me that if such a hostess exists, she would stand to lose a lot more than if she set out no ash trays.

The next letter might interest you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: On a flight from Cincinnati to San Francisco, I was seated next to a middle aged woman. When the "No Smoking" sign was turned off, I asked my seatmate if she would mind if I smoked. Her reply was, "I would prefer that you didn't." Her answer irritated me since I am a heavy smoker and felt she was interferring with my rights.

I pointed out that she airlines expects people to smoke which is why they have signs regulating smoking during takeoff and landing. She gave me a dirty look and snapped, "Well, you asked me and I told you!" I replied "If my smoking bothers you, I suggest that you find another seat." She did.

I was pleased with the forthright manner in which I dealt with this inconsiderate female. Friends to whom I related the incident said I was wrong. What do you think? — AMERICAN No. 47.

DEAR AMERICAN: I think you behaved miserably. Your right to smoke ends where the other fellow's nose begins. When the woman let you know smoke bothers her, you should have found a seat in another nicotine addict. The two of you could then hack and cough together all the way to San Francisco without offending anyone.

*

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You must be made of stone. You tell every wronged husband or wife, daughter or son, sweetheart, friend or neighbor to "forgive and forget." Did it ever occur to you that some people just can't? They are too deeply hurt — too badly damaged. Please pull your head out of the sand, or the clouds, or wherever it is, and use it to think with. It's preposterous to expect mere mortals to behave like saints.— MADE THE SCENE.

DEAR SCENE: For those who don't like my advice to forgive and forget, here's an alternative. Don't forgive and don't forget. Keep alive every agonizing, torturous detail of the past. Talk about it. Dream about it. Cry a lot and feel sorry for yourself. Lose weight and look haggard so friends will worry about you. Build an ulcer. Get a migraine. Break a leg. Anything to create pain and serve as a reminder of what the dirty hoss did to you.

If you follow this advice, you are sure to end up miserable, sick, bitter and alone.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm so worried about Danny. His fever is going up, but I hate to bother the doctor at this hour of the night. I can't tell if it's an earache or a sore throat. Something certainly is hurting him."

Mother: "I'm sorry to get you up, doctor, but Danny seems quite ill to me. These are his symptoms . . ."

Doctor: "His temperature isn't terribly high for a baby. Try this medication and treatment and if he isn't better in a few hours, call me back."

Young mothers find it difficult to know what is serious illness in a first baby. If you feel you need your doctor's advice, call him. This is what he expects you to do.

Author Says Children's Books Need Fantasy

TORONTO (CP) — The trouble with writing and illustrating children's books is the adults, said Maurice Sendak during a visit here.

The New York author and illustrator of about 80 children's books said adults blot out a child's emotionally charged world of fantasy; as a result, children's books today were mawkish and coy.

"Children have powerful emotions—I try to express them the way I know I felt when I was a child. I search for this child—turn in on myself to find him—and I know that children say outrageous things."

He said books children are expected to read today are "simply not valid."

"Alert children write me letters and stories. They say things and draw pictures that I wouldn't be allowed to publish.

"When I did my book on Jennie—my dog—critics dealt with it as a strange book about a dog. But the children—they reacted strongly. They read between the lines of the story and they knew that Jennie had died. They wrote me that they were with me."

Mr. Sendak said apart from trying to express a child's emotions, he is aiming to fill a long-neglected need—the need for fantasy.

He said children identified immediately with Max, the hero of his book Where the Wild Things Are, illustrated profusely with uninhibited creations. Adults—"they could see only the wild things and they were horrified."

Mr. Sendak said after publication of the book five years ago he was showered with denunciations by upset adults, even by some who profess to be experts on child behavior.

Yet he is writing another one apt to arouse as much controversy as Where the Wild Things Are.

He said the book will contain illustrations of a boy—naked. "A real boy; hopefully it will be published next fall."

If the book does not turn out a moneymaker, Mr. Sendak said, he is not concerned. He already has assured himself of a sound financial income.

Women Advised to Take Security Courses in Stocks

VANCOUVER (CP) — More and more women are dabbling in the stock market but they aren't doing their homework enough to make money at it.

That's the opinion of women in the business—and there is a growing number of them occupying offices above or near to Howe Street in Vancouver's financial district.

They say that with husbands dying off from business pressures at such early ages and with widows left to manage healthy estates, it's more and more necessary for them to learn what makes the stock ticker tick.

Ingrid Jaeha, an assistant sales representative in a downtown brokerage house, says women should take securities courses so they will know how to read annual reports and interpret Dow-Jones averages well enough that financial pages of the paper aren't just used to wrap garbage.

Miss Jaeha admits she'd rather deal with men customers than women.

"Men tend to phone their brokers more often than women do," she says. "I think women are too gullible, they worry less than men do.

"Once they've put their money into something they're content just to leave it there. They don't keep track of what's happening."

Research analyst Barbara McDougall says both men and women should give a thought to their emotional make-up before investing.

"Some people are totally disinterested in money management," she says. "And if so they need the guidance of a good investment counsellor.

"They should never try to beat the market on their own. But it surprises me that people who will invest their life savings are not prepared to invest some time to study the situation thoroughly. You just can't rely on blind faith."

Both Mrs. McDougall and Miss Jaeha scoff at the idea that women may find the world of finances a jungle.

They say men as well as women quickly forget the sex of a broker once the conversation turns to stocks and bonds.

Mrs. McDougall admits that "perhaps it is a bit of a help at times being a woman, and one uses whatever tools one has, I suppose."

Miss Jaeha says that she tries not to talk business after five.

"I don't like to come out and say what I do," she says. "But once in a while, it's useful."

WEDDING

SHANNON — SLAVIN

St. James the Minor Church, Stirling, was the scene of the recent wedding of Kathleen Leila Slavin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Slavin, RR 4, Stirling and Patrick William Shannon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Shannon, Marmora. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. William McGee, uncle of the bridegroom. Wedding music was played by John Francis and Timothy Campbell.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a full-length A-line white silk velvet gown gathered at the front to a high collar with long full sleeves gathered to a tight cuff with hood and train of French Chantilly lace. She carried a white velvet muff draped with pink feathered carnations and ivy.

Matron of honor was Mrs. J. P. Dyment, and Miss Elizabeth Slavin, both sisters of the bride. They were dressed alike in peacock blue velvet A-line gowns with matching hair bows and carried white velvet muffs draped with blue feathered carnations and ivy.

Best man was John Shannon, Marmora and ushers were Lou Wilson and Michael Newton.

For the reception held at IOOF Hall, Stirling, the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a street-length pink crimplene dress with matching accessories and a corsage of white mums.

The bridegroom's mother wore a street-length navy crimplene dress with matching hat and a corsage of white mums.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, the bride wore a brown tweed dress with brown accessories.

The couple will reside at 178 Bridge St. E., Belleville.

Ready to Refuel

Ontario Hydro engineers, directed by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. scientists, have set a Jan. 12 date to attempt to refuel this 200,000-kilowatt Douglas Point, Ont., nuclear generating station. The plant produced its first power in January 1967, but was shut-down for 11 months while scientists tested it.

Officer Denies Deputy Chief Shielded Brewery Official

TORONTO (CP) — An inquiry into the conduct of senior officers on the Metropolitan Toronto police force was told Wednesday that Deputy Chief John Murray once shielded a brewery official from conviction on a charge of impaired driving.

Assistant Crown Attorney John Kerr cited Constable Maurice Hodgson, who conducts breath analysis tests, as his source for the charge. Constable Hodgson immediately denied it under questioning from Roy McMurtry, counsel for the deputy chief and 30 other officers implicated.

The inquiry was called to investigate charges by Constable Ian Samuel and former constable Peter Lott that senior officers interfered with impaired driving charges against prominent persons.

Lott has not yet appeared at the inquiry. He was charged Wednesday with failing to obey a suppoena ordering him to appear as a witness.

Before Mr. Kerr made his statements about Deputy Chief Murray, the inquiry was told that all documents related to the case of brewery manager Donald McDougall, 36, now of Edmonton, have disappeared.

Mr. Kerr said Constable Hodgson told him late in 1968 or early in 1969 that chief Murray ordered him not to appear at prosecutions of three of five persons charged with impaired driving, among them Mr. McDougall, then Ontario sales manager for Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd.

He said Constable Hodgson told him he also had orders from the deputy chief not to appear at a hearing for Mr. McDougall Sept. 18, 1968.

Mr. McMurtry objected that Mr. Kerr's testimony was hearsay and, after an exchange with Austin Cooper, counsel for the Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission which is heading the inquiry, he ordered Constable Hodgson to the stand.

Constable Hodgson denied the story and said he did not appear at Mr. McDougall's hearing because he was ill at the time.

Mr. McDougall, who flew in from Edmonton for the inquiry at the commission's request, said in brief testimony that he went to court three times over the charges but each time found no police witnesses on hand.

MPP: Drop Charge Against Priest

TORONTO (CP) — A Liberal member of the Ontario legislature Wednesday demanded that police drop all charges against Rev. Ambrose McCabe, charged after a police raid on a church hall New Year's Eve party.

"The police have done great damage to the reputation of Father McCabe," said Dante De Monte, Liberal member for Toronto Dovercourt.

He also demanded a formal police apology for the priest.

Father McCabe and members of the Literary and Athletic Society of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church in west-end Toronto were charged when police found a banquet permit issued by the Liquor Control Board of Ontario carried the wrong street address.

No Protest from Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Radioactive fallout over central Canada following a United States nuclear test in Nevada in December 8, 1968 was reported by Canadian authorities to the U.S. government, but no protest was lodged.

Dr. A. H. Booth, chief of the radiation protection division of the federal health department said Wednesday that as far as he knows there have been no recent exchanges between the U.S. and Canada about the fallout.

After the test, four of the 24 stations in the Canadian radiation reporting network—Hamilton, Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal—reported an increase in radiation 20 times above normal levels for a 24 hour period Dec. 12-13.

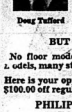
Canadian officials said the increased fallout from the test, held as part of a U.S. exploration into the peaceful uses of nuclear energy, was not at levels dangerous to health.

The Canadian data on the fallout was forwarded to Washington Dec. 20, 1968 with a request for "comment." An exchange of fallout data was later supplied by U.S. officials.

A U.S. state department spokesman said shortly after the test that the department was looking into the reports and had "been in touch with the Canadian government."

The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission said no investigation was planned into the test aftermath.

Mr. Booth said the only contacts which occurred following the test were a report to the U.S. by Canada on increased radioactivity at certain points, followed by an exchange of fallout data between the two countries.



"The U.S. had notified us in advance that there might be some small increases, probably in western Canada, but instead, a few days later, increased levels were reported in central Canada," he said.

Normal radiation levels are 0.1 picocuries per cubic metre of air. The post-test reading at Ottawa, which had the highest reading, was 2.1 picocuries.

The fallout over Canada following the 1968 test was raised in Washington Wednesday by Representative Richard D. McCarthy. The New York Democrat sent a letter to State Secretary William P. Rogers asking what steps the Canadian and U.S. governments took to investigate the incident.

The 1963 nuclear test ban treaty bans tests that spill radiation debris beyond the borders of the testing country.

Agnew Promises Malays Help

KUALA LUMPUR (Reuters) — Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew today assured Malaysian leaders that the United States would not leave Malaysia in the lurch if it were faced with aggression.

Prime Minister Tunku Abdul Rahman told reporters after his 75-minute meeting with Agnew that the vice-president said the U.S. "is prepared to spread some umbrella for the security of the region."

The vice-president arrived here Wednesday night from Afghanistan under strict security guard for a 37-hour visit. This is the seventh country he has visited on an 11-nation Asian and Pacific tour.

Deputy Prime Minister Abdul Razak, who also attended the discussion, said Agnew obviously was interested in Malaysia's hopes of combatting militant communism by economic development.

Afterward, Razak and Agnew had a separate half-hour session, which included a briefing on the state of emergency which has been in force in Malaysia since bloody Chinese-Malay race riots in May.

Razak, as director of operations, has been virtually running the country since the riots in which 2,000 persons died.

Before his talks with Malaysian leaders, Agnew placed a wreath at the cenotaph of the national monument.

On his arrival in Kuala Lumpur Wednesday, there was no welcoming ceremony because of the heavy security in force. An extra 3,500 police moved into the capital and 70 U.S. secret servicemen were flown in from Washington.

Streets near the airport were closed before his plane touched down and the 14-mile route in the city was lined with armed para-military police.

Lawyers Want County Judges to Hear Divorces

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario lawyers Wednesday recommended that county court judges be empowered to hear divorce actions.

W.G.C. Howland, treasurer of the Law Society of Upper Canada, regulatory body for Ontario's 7,000 lawyers, told the opening of the winter assizes that this extended jurisdiction, "subject to the right of either party to have the action tried in the Supreme Court," would reduce the crush of divorce cases now before the Ontario Supreme Court.

Shulman Alarmed

Amphetamines Out of Control

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic party member of the legislature for Toronto-High Park, Wednesday demanded "urgent action" to stop what he called the "out-of-control" use of amphetamines in Toronto.

Quoting from a paper prepared by two doctors from the Queen Street mental health centre, Dr. Shulman said in a statement that "the abuse of amphetamines has reached such proportions that it represents a medical and psychiatric emergency."

"Because of the widespread and unappreciated extent of this problem, urgent action is necessary," he said.

"The amphetamine abuse and danger in Toronto to date far outweigh those of LSD and all other drugs combined."

He said there is a cure possible for this aspect of the drug problem.

"It is essential that immediate leadership be given by the ministers of health on both the federal and provincial levels to institute controls on the manufacture and sale of amphetamines."

The paper referred to was prepared by doctors W. R. Clement, L. P. Solursh and Walter Van Ast.

Dr. Shulman said it "reveals the results of a study done by these physicians . . . and has pointed out the serious dangers and that the use of these drugs is very much out of control."

The doctors interviewed 43 persons selected at random in one downtown area and found that "30 had used speed in the past and six were using it at the present time."

The paper lists the serious effects on the health of persons who use the drugs classed as speed and notes the number of deaths directly attributable to its abuse.

Drapeau's Olympic Bid Package Includes Stadium Pledge

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal has pledged to build an 80,000-seat stadium, an Olympic village, a velodrome for bicycle events and a press centre if it is awarded the 1976 Summer Olympics.

Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, Wednesday received this pledge when Mayor Jean Drapeau visited the IOC president in Chicago to deliver a copy of Montreal's official bid for the 1976 Games.

Drapeau was accompanied by Gerry Snyder, vice-chairman of the city's executive committee, and E. Howard Radford, past-president of the Canadian Olympic Association.

The brochure is a simply-decorated, 63-page bilingual presentation. It contains letters of endorsement of this city's bid from all-government levels and specifically answers 14 questions as set out to all bidders by the IOC.

The official file was presented to IOC headquarters at Lausanne, Switzerland, by Drapeau last June, long before the Dec. 31 deadline for entries.

Montreal, Moscow, Florence, Italy, and Los Angeles all have bid for the 1976 Summer Games, while Vancouver, Denver, Sion, Switzerland, and Tampere, Finland, are in contention for the Winter Games the same year.

An official decision on the 1976 sites will be announced at the IOC's general meeting at Amsterdam May 13. Montreal's earlier bid for the 1972 games was defeated and the IOC selected Munich.

Montreal's presentation is prefaced by the reflection that the city is "confident of its ability to give Olympiad its true human dimensions of greatness, dignity and simplicity."

Endorsements include letters from Prime Minister Trudeau, Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, and the original motion issued by city council, June 13, 1968, which gave Drapeau the go-ahead.

The city's brochure says that new facilities in Montreal will include:

"The Olympic Stadium: This stadium, to form part of the existing Maisonneuve sports complex, will have seating for at least 80,000 spectators and will meet the needs of every sport to be presented there, including the track which will be constructed of the most modern materials. It will have all necessary accommodations. An extension of the subway is considered with a station on the site of the Stadium.

"The site of the proposed stadium will be on city-owned land, currently vacant, located in the city's east end at the corner of Sherbrooke Street and Pie IX Boulevard.

The presentation points out that swimming pools, capable of accommodating 10,000 spectators and conforming to IOC regulations, will be clustered as closely as possible to the proposed stadium.

Greater Montreal already has some 50 indoor and outdoor pools of which 30 are of Olympic dimensions. However, none is equipped to hold large crowds.

A cycle track, with seating for 5,000 spectators and a possible capacity of 10,000, is expected, shortly, the presentation says.

In addition, it lauds the fact that the city already boasts "three stadia, floodlighted for evening use and equipped with full facilities for athletics."

Espo's Loaded with Blanks

Brother Phil Does His Thing

Chicago Black Hawks turned the tables on Detroit Red Wings Wednesday night with rookie goaltender Tony Esposito collecting his eighth shutout of the National Hockey League season and a measure of revenge over Roy Edwards.

Edwards was in the Red Wings goal Sunday when they downed the Hawks 4-0 in Detroit with goaltender Dennis Dejordy taking the loss. Wednesday, the 25-year-old sensation from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., held the Wings scoreless while the Black Hawks poured seven goals into Edwards' nets.

Esposito's big brother, Phil, meanwhile scored two goals and assisted on another for Boston Bruins' 6-1 victory over Oakland Seals. In other games, New York Rangers downed Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, Toronto Maple Leafs tied Minnesota North Stars 3-3 and Philadelphia Flyers gained a 2-2 deadlock with St. Louis Blues.

The younger Esposito leads the league in shutouts and now is only five short of matching the modern record of 13 set by Toronto Maple Leafs great Harry Lumley in the 1953-54 season.

He stopped 25 Detroit shots Wednesday before a Chicago crowd of 18,666 while the Black Hawks pelted Edwards with 39 drives.

Dennis Hull and Stan Mikita each scored twice with single goals coming from Eric Nesterenko, Bobby Hull and Cliff Koroll for Chicago's first win in four games.

The Black Hawks now are six points back of fourth-place Detroit in the East Division.

Centre Walt Tkaczuk scored twice and earned an assist to lead the New York attack before a crowd of 4,671 at Pittsburgh. The win kept the Rangers four points ahead of second-place Boston in the East.

John Wiebing, Dave Balon and Jean Ratelle were the other New York marksmen with Ken Schinkel replying twice for the Penguins and rookie Nick Harbaruk getting the other goal.

It was the Penguins 19th loss in 36 games and dropped them into fourth spot in the West Division, one point behind Philadelphia.

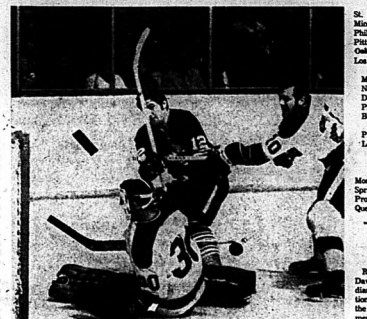
Goalies Ed Giacomin for New York and Al Smith for the Penguins each stopped 31 shots on goal.

The Rangers were without veteran defenceman Jim Neilson who suffered burns to his hands Tuesday morning while rescuing his five-year-old daughter from a fire at his home. The girl was not injured and the club said Neilson would be sidelined three or four days.

Left winger Johnny Bucyk also provided two goals, the second his 300th career goal, in Boston's victory over the Seals before 7,000 Oakland fans.

Scoring leader Bobby Orr assisted on both of Esposito's goals while Ken Hodge and Eddie Westfall each scored once for the hard-hitting Bruins.

Bill Hicke scored the single goal for the Seals who remain in fifth spot in the West Division after their 23rd loss in 37 starts.



St. Louis, meanwhile, kept its 14-point lead over second-place Minnesota with the tie before 16,018 home fans.

Bill McCreary and Gary Sabourin scored to give the Blues a 2-0 lead midway through the second period but Philadelphia's Bob Clarke came back with one goal each in the second and third the game at 9:55 of the third period.

Clarke's goal ended a shutout streak by St. Louis goalie Jacques Plante of more than 213 minutes against the Flyers in the last two seasons. Fleming's goal ended an 11-game winning streak by the Blues on home ice.

Third-period goals by Murray Oliver, Tim Horton and Bob Pulford brought the Leafs from behind for the tie before a crowd of 16,323 at Toronto.

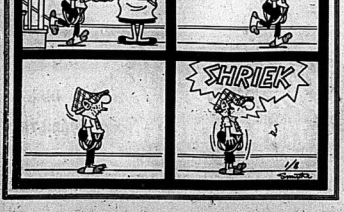
Mikita Gains Most Ground

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Stan Mikita collected two goals and two assists Wednesday in Chicago Black Hawks' 7-0 victory over Detroit Red Wings to gain the most ground in the National Hockey League individual scoring race.

With 19 goals and 20 assists for 39 points, Mikita climbed into a share of sixth spot with Frank St. Marseille of St. Louis Blues and Jean Ratelle of New York Rangers.



Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins and Walt Tkaczuk of the Rangers both scored two goals and one assist to stay tied for third at 43 points.

Bobby Orr of the Bruins earned two assists, raising his points total to 38 and increasing his lead over the Blues Phil Goyette, who was held scoreless, to nine points.

West Stacked with Blues For Jan. 20 All-Star Game

MONTREAL (CP) — Seven of 12 players picked to represent the National Hockey League's West Division in its Jan. 20 all-star game against East Division opposition are from the host city's St. Louis Blues.

The NHL today announced 12 of the 19 players who will represent the West. The dozen were selected in a poll among members of the NHL Writers' Association in the six West Division cities.

The remaining seven players will be named by Blues coach Scotty Bowman, who will announce the additional selections next week.

Following are the 12 players selected in the writers' poll. Points were awarded on the basis of five points for a first-place choice, three for a second and one for a third (point totals are in brackets):

Goal—Jacques Plante, St. Louis (67); Bernie Parent, Philadelphia Flyers (62).

Defence—Al Arbour, St. Louis (66); Barclay Plager, St. Louis (53); Bob Woytowich, Pittsburgh Penguins (52); Carol Vadnais, Oakland Seals (46).

Centre—Phil Goyette, St. Louis (72); Red Berenson, St. Louis (39).

Right wing—Bill Goldsworthy, Minnesota (73); Frank St. Marseille, St. Louis (43).

This will be the second year in which the all-stars from the West play their East Division counterparts. Last year, the two teams played to a 3-3 tie here.

Members of the winning team will receive $500 each and those on the losing side will get $250 each from the league.

The poll decides participants in the all-star game only and the results do not count toward the selection of the official 1969-70 all-star teams. These will be chosen in a poll among members of the NHLWA at the end of the regular schedule.

Despite the abundance of St. Louis players, five of the six West Division teams are represented by the 12 players. Only the last-place Los Angeles Kings failed to have a player named.

Dawson Has High Hopes

RIVERS, Man. (CP) — Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, has not given up hope that the 1970 world hockey tournament will be played in Canada.

Dawson created a stir at a meeting Tuesday by the Swedish Ice Hockey Federation that the Swedes would work toward a change of Olympic rules and open world hockey championships with the hope that the Swedes to initiate action to return the tournament to Canada.

In a telegram Wednesday to Helge Berglund, Swedish federation president, Dawson said the CAHA "deplores your insincere in your remarks" as quoted in press reports from Stockholm.

"We strongly recommend that you take the initiative to convene a meeting of the five European Group A federations and urge them to return the 1970 championships to Canada on the basis of the Evian decision."

It was at an International Ice Hockey Federation meeting at Evian, Switzerland, that a decision was given for Canada to use nine professionals for the 1970 tournament.

When that decision was reversed Sunday in Geneva, Canada withdrew from the 1970 championships, and the tournament, which was to have been played in Montreal and Winnipeg, was transferred to Stockholm.

Dawson said the Swedish federation's statements supported the Canadian stand on professionalism and he welcomed them, although he said they "came 48 hours too late."

"The only time we got support from Bergland was after the meeting," he said.

At the Geneva meeting, Canada had suggested first that the IIHF form its own eligibility rules as world hockey's governing body.

Alternately, Canada proposed the world championships be scrapped for an exhibition series, if European teams were worried about losing Olympic status by playing professionals.

Dawson said CAHA officials will meet with Canadian Olympic officials in Winnipeg Jan. 24-25, to prepare a strong case for next month's Olympic executive meeting at Lausanne, Switzerland.

Dawson said winning the point at Lausanne could open the door to Canada's re-entry to the world championships in 1971.

"If we lose our point," he said, "we'll wait for May for the full Olympic congress meeting, where we understand extensive recommendations are to be made on the whole subject of amateurism."

Fathers Really Flying

TORONTO (CP) — The Flying Fathers, a hockey team of Roman Catholic priests in Ontario who have raised more than $300,000 for charity in seven years, will play five games in West Germany later this month.

The team, led by former Toronto Maple Leaf player, Rev. Les Costello, pastor of Saint Patrick's Church at Cobalt, will meet Canadian Forces teams during their trip beginning Jan. 18.

Included on the team are Rev. Art Appleton of Trenton; Rev. Steve McLellan and Rev. John Caswell, both of North Bay; Rev. Brian McKee and Rev. Ted McLean, both of Sudbury; Rev. Bill Lee of Otawa; Rev. Bill Murphy of Kingston; Revs. Peter Valley, Bill Scanlon, Mike Brady, Paul Redall, Dave Currie and Steve McWilliams, all of Toronto; Rev. Rollie Richer of Timmins; and Rev. Alex Morris of Pembroke.

When pro football's superbowl is held Sunday in New Orleans, the two quarterbacks scheduled to call most of the plays on the field are Len Dawson (left and upper centre) of the Kansas City Chiefs, known for his passing ability, and Joe Kapp of the Minnesota Vikings (right and lower middle), touted for his running. (AP Wirephoto)

More Than Usual Pressure On Chiefs' Dawson This Week

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — What's It like to be in Lenny Dawson's shoes at this very moment, preparing for the Super Bowl Game while trying to forget about having your name associated with a nationwide gambling investigation?

Only Lenny Dawson knows for sure and, as is his nature, he is keeping it within.

But Tom Flores, Dawson's team-mate with Kansas City Chiefs and himself a veteran quarterback, is qualified to step into Dawson's shoes and take a guess.

"I'm sure all this week the thing will be on his mind," said Flores, "because no one will let him forget about it—the press, the fans.

"If I was innocent I'd be a little disturbed because of the implications. It would upset me a little. But I wouldn't worry about it because I'd feel clean. I'd I was guilty it would probably upset me more. But I'm sure Lenny isn't guilty.

"The thing that disturbs me is how open athletes are to this type of thing because we are so much in the public eye. If you even get your name mentioned in the same paragraph with a gambler or relative to gambling, there are a lot of people who will be biased against you from then on."

Dawson will have to carry that realization throughout the remainder of the week as he prepares for the Super Bowl Sunday that sends his American Football League championship club against the National Football League champion Minnesota Vikings—because his name has been mentioned.

It was mentioned by the National Broadcasting Company as one of four quarterbacks among players who may be questioned in a broad federal probe of gambling now taking place in Detroit. The other quarterbacks named were Joe Namath of New York Jets, Bill Munson of Detroit Lions and Karl Sweetan of Los Angeles Rams.

Pete Rozelle, commissioner of professional football, said in a statement that he had been advised by the justice department that no decision had been reached on summoning any professional athletes and he planned no disciplinary action.

Dawson himself added to developments by acknowledging a casual relationship to a Birmingham, Mich., restaurateur arrested recently in connection with the investigation.

Undoubtedly that has added to the weight on Dawson's shoulders, but Flores feels he can handle it.

"If he's emotional about it, it wouldn't be that evident," said Flores. "Lenny's a meditating type quarterback who controls his emotions very well. That's how he got the nickname Lenny The Cool.

"But a situation like this would add a little more pressure to any quarterback, but as a quarterback you're used to pressure and you react accordingly. The better the quarterback, the better you handle pressure. And Lenny's the No. 1 quarterback in history."

Dave Osborn Just Hopes for Roll When He Totes Ball for Vikings

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Dave Osborn is a rare athlete; a runner who made it all the way back from knee surgery to become the heavy duty ground threat of a National Football League champion.

"I'm not one of those fancy guys," said Osborn before a Minnesota Vikings' workout for Sunday's Super Bowl game with Kansas City Chiefs, the American Football League champions.

"I don't have those fancy moves. I just hit into a guy, hoping to slide or roll off him and spin."

For those who missed the Vikings' playoff victories over Los Angeles Rams and Cleveland Browns, Ozzie is the fellow who dived in for two scores against the Rams and romped 23 yards, shedding tacklers, for a clincher against the Browns in the NFL championship game last Sunday.

The former North Dakota University star from Cando, N.D., led the Vikings with 641 yards on 186 carries for seven touchdowns and also caught 22 passes for 236 yards and one score in the regular season.

He's the training campaign of 1968, following his brilliant 972-yard season in 1967 when he was second to Leroy Kelly for the rushing title, it appeared it might be all over for Osborn.

Interrupted to catch a pass for a two-point conversion against Denver, when they were experimenting with the two-point rule, he damaged his left knee. Ozzie caught the pass, and also ran a sweep on another conversion before he realized the extent of the injury. Even then, they thought it was minor and the operation was not performed until four weeks later, just before the season started. He was back in action in the last three games and two playoffs.

"It's a mental thing at first," he said. "You wonder what will happen when you get hit. In practice you make the full cut and wonder if your leg will buckle. You don't have time to worry in a game.

"I have no problem with it. I still lift weights with the left leg four or five times a week. I think it actually is stronger now than the other knee."

A 13th-round draft choice in 1963, Osborn sat behind Tommy Mason in his rookie year and finally moved in after Mason was hurt in 1966. In 1967 he took over when Mason was traded to Los Angeles.

In the early years he had trouble as a pass catcher. Norm Van Brocklin, then the coach, once said he had "ice picks for hands." Constant working with the backup quarterback helped him overcome the problem.

"We never had to catch many in college," he explained.

Osborn had no idea he would get a chance to play pro football until his senior year when he began to hear from Dallas and Los Angeles. He was surprised and delighted when the Vikings drafted him and Joe Thomas, then the personnel chief, negotiated with him.

"I like to block for Bill Brown and in pass protection," he said.

"Naturally, I like to carry the ball. But for defensive duty right now it is difficult to get outside with the sweep. We usually run inside, between the tackles and try to hit and slide to daylight.

"You know our slogan '40 for 60'. (40 men for 60 minutes.) That's really the way it is. At this point there is only one important thing—winning the championship. The money ($13,000) is big but, honestly, it is secondary. We want to go all the way."

Sutherin Wants In

Another Ex-Rider Joins Als

MONTREAL (CP) — Bob Ward, 42, line coach of the Grey Cup champion Ottawa Rough Riders last season, Wednesday was signed by Montreal Alouettes of the Eastern Football Conference as an assistant coach.

Red O'Quinn, former Ottawa general manager and who now holds a similar position here, also announced that Bob Geary, 36-year-old Montrealer, will return to the Als for his second season as line coach. Geary is the only member of the 1969 Als coaching staff to return.

No contract terms were announced, but it is believed both men signed for one year.

O'Quinn came here in December after Ottawa lawyer Sam Berger purchased the Alouettes. Sam Etcheverry, former all-star quarterback with the Als, replaced Kay Dalton as head coach shortly after the takeover.

In addition to the two coaches, O'Quinn said the Montreal club has signed Dick Irvin, five-foot 11-inch linebacker from Richmond University.

O'Quinn said the club still has one coaching position to fill and that Ottawa defensive halfbacks Don Sutherin and Gene Gaines have both applied for the job.

"Unfortunately, contractually they are both tied up with Ottawa until June," he said.

Gaines played out his option last season with the Riders, but he still is not free to deal with another club either as a player or a coach until June.

"Sutherin signed a one-year contract last season and he is not free either," the general manager said. "Until such time as one or both consent to their release from Ottawa we can't talk to them."

He said there is no question of tampering in the Sutherin-Gaines situation, because both men applied to the Als for employment.

Apparently the Ottawa club is reluctant to allow either player an out to allow them to move to Montreal.

Palmer's Comeback Talk of U.S. Pro Tour

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Arnold Palmer, the old master of the 1960s, goes gunning for his third consecutive triumph today against a rising tide of young players who have moved into dominant positions in pro golf.

"There are a lot more players now, and a lot more good players," Palmer observed after a practice round for the Los Angeles Open, first stop on the Professional Golfers Association tour this year.

The magnetic man from Latrobe, Pa., retained the favorite's role for the $20,000 first prize, however, but faced major challenges from such players as Ray Floyd, George Archer, Dave Hill, Lee Trevino and Bruce Crampton, all of whom have come into their own in the last couple of years.

Only a handful of the leading names are missing, and such older players as Gene Littler, defending champion Charlie Sifford, Ken Venturi and former Masters champions Gary Brewer and Bob Goalby could be factors.

Venturi, the hard-luck guy who won the 1964 United States Open then went into a slump when afflicted with a circulatory ailment in his hands, is on a comeback.

"I feel good now," Venturi said. "No troubles with the hands. I hope to play the full tour."

Goalby and Brewer, who have had their troubles since taking the Masters, both made mild comebacks late last season, with Brewer finishing second to Palmer in the final tournament of the season.

Mo-Hawks' Injury Hangover Persists As Flyers Hit Town

The New Year's hangover being suffered by Belleville Mo-Hawks is not one that a few aspirins could remedy.

Smack in the middle of their strong bid for second place in the eight - team OHA Senior A standings, the Mo-Hawks have been hit by sick list problems.

Only losing five times in their last 19 outings has kept the Mo-Hawks in a third-place tie with Oakville, however, and they hope to stay there at the expense of Barrie Flyers and Owen Sound Greyhounds this weekend.

Tomorrow night, the Flyers come into the Memorial Arena for a 8 o'clock attempt to even their season's record against the Mo-Hawks. A 8-2 Mo-Hawk win in Belleville and a scoreless tie in Barrie were the results of their first two encounters.

GEORGE GODSON
Back In Line-up

Playing - coach Davey Jones is busy trying to replace new players to ease the immediate injury problems and to shore-up Belleville's upcoming playoff bid.

Trenton product Rick O'Donnell worked out with the Mo-Hawks on Tuesday night in addition to the lucky junior. A graduate, Jones has also been talking with an out-of-town forward and defenceman in hopes of dressing a new face against Barrie Friday night.

The Mo-Hawks wound up Sunday's 10-3 loss in Kingston playing with only nine players in addition to goalie Steve Rexe, and at least three of the sick list platoon are doubtful starters tomorrow night.

Play - making defenceman Lou Kazowski's pulled back muscle injury again keep him on the sidelines. Jones added he was skeptical about starting forwards Ray Johnston (knee injury) and Ralph Plane (hip injury) if there were enough bodies to take up the slack.

Centre George Godson, who missed his first game of the season, Sunday due to the flu, will probably be back in action against Barrie.

Godson's one-game absence cost him the club scoring leadership as linemate Lorne O'Donnell's two assists moved him back in front. Godson led last year's Belleville point-getters with 15 goals and 34 assists in 38 games.

Sunday, the Mo-Hawks set out on the long Owen Sound road trip to try and bring home a pair of points from the fifth-place Crescents.

Hockey Neighbors to West Press Ellis B's for Fourth

Belleville's Ellis Juniors put it on the line Sunday as they face the Peterborough Don Byes.

Successive losses to Oshawa and Kingston, coupled with Cobourg's 4-4 tie with Kingston this week, has dropped the Belleville B's into a tie for the fourth and final play-off spot in the six-team Eastern Ontario circuit.

Cobourg and Trenton, now two points back, meet in a home and home series that could prove vital to the play-off picture.

The third-place Peterborough team should provide stiff competition for coach Floyd Crawford's crew. Belleville dumped them 4-2 in their last meeting here and the Don Byes will be intent on returning the favor.

JOHN McCONNELL
Makes Return

John McConnell will be in uniform for the game and this should boost the club's firepower considerably. McConnell missed Tuesday's tilt against Kingston because of work commitments. Rugged defenceman Dalton Lambert will be back after sitting out a one - game suspension and team scoring leader Terry Meagher's injured hand will not keep him out of the Ellis lineup.

Sunday will be OSD night, with free admission for all students of the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Game time Sunday is 7:30 in what shapes up as an exciting, and certainly important contest.

Russians May Be Fakes

Have Canucks Held Hockey Cup Since '55?

Punch Imlach, for 11 years one of the most successful coaches in the National Hockey League, looked over the Russian hockey team during its Canadian tour.

The way to stop them is to cut them off before they can get started," he said.

The former head man of Toronto Maple Leafs of the NHL looked over the pinpoint passing and magical stick-handling of the Russians and said:

"Break up their attacks in their own zone before they can get organized."

Now turn back the clock 15 years. The Penticton Vs had just defeated Russia 5-0 to win the World Cup.

Team captain Grant Warwick had just returned from Krefeld, Germany, site of the triumph. Someone asked:

* * *

"How did you beat the Russians?"

"I'm a firm advocate of forechecking," Warwick replied.

"European teams, and especially the Russians, the Czechs and the Swedes, need plenty of time in their own zone to get their formation plays started.

"Only with lots of time can they waltz up the ice throwing short lateral and long forward passes."

His theory was proven this year in the Russians' five-game exhibition series against Canada's national team. The Canadians won three games.

It was especially noticeable in the game in Toronto where the Russians stationed their best man, Anatoli Firsov, out near centre for a quick passout.

It seldom came as the Canadians swarmed in, breaking up the Russian plays before they could get started.

Echoes of the 1955 victory of Penticton Vs still ring in the hockey capitals of the world each year when World Cup time rolls around.

Warwick, with brothers Bill and Dick, brought the cup home to Penticton, B.C., with them, there to stand in isolated splendor in the window of the family restaurant.

When-it came time to ship the cup back, the brothers had a replica made as a keepsake.

Then the story began circulating that there had been a mixup—that it was the replica that had been sent back: that the Warwicks kept the original.

Grant has never confirmed nor denied the story. He just smiles.

Bourbonnais Claims NHL Stars Can Out-gun Russia

EDMONTON (CP) — The Canadian Nationals need established talent from the National Hockey League, but not necessarily super-stars, if they expect to regain their prestige in international hockey.

This is the opinion of Roger Bourbonnais, formerly of the Nationals and now an Edmonton lawyer.

"The Russians are to the point right now where it's going to take some players out of the NHL who can score goals, and before long a complete NHL team to skate with them," the 37-year-old Edmonton native said in an interview.

"The Nationals don't necessarily need a Bobby Orr or a Bobby Hull, although they would definitely help," Bourbonnais said. "They need the established players, not the borderline type, who can skate and score goals."

He added:

"The Russians can compete with the NHL now, especially expansion teams. They can play any type of game and are physically in better shape than any professional."

He is in favor of Hockey Canada, a non-profit organization, which has taken over the Nationals' affairs.

But he is against, at least for this year, the ruling that Canada be allowed nine reinstated professionals to play in the world tournament, unless they are top-calibre players.

"Some of the players with the Nationals now, who are reinstated pros, were with us a few years ago and they were not that good as scorers. We need players to put the puck in the net."

Asked how NHL players such as Frank Mahovlich, Rod Gilbert, Jacques Lemaire, Hull or Orr—all noted for their high-speed shots—would perform against the Russians, Bourbonnais said:

"Shooting is one of the Russians' weak points. I'm sure the NHL super-stars would score against the Russians, that is if they got clear to shoot. Don't forget the Russians are excellent checkers."

Bourbonnais, who graduated in law 2½ years ago and never tried out for a team in the NHL, said "it's going to take some time for the reinstated pros with the Nationals to adjust to the international style of play."

The Russians also are weak in goal, Bourbonnais said, but "you have to get close enough and get your shots away to take advantage of this fault."

Yablonski Allies Receive Telephone Threats

CLARKSVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Investigators say two close allies of the late Joseph (Jock) Yablonski have received threatening telephone calls since the murders of the United Mine Workers Union official, his wife and daughter.

State police said Wednesday the first report came from Marion Pellegrini, an official of UMW District 5 from nearby Canonsburg.

Later, Elmer Brown, a Delbarton, W. Va., coal miner who was Yablonski's vice-presidential running mate in the union's recent presidential election, said he had reported a threat to the FBI.

Pellegrini, who was questioned by four FBI agents, said his wife received a call from a man at 3:15 p.m. Tuesday. The caller simply said: "Warning, you're next," and hung up, he said.

"We don't know whether this is a crank call or not but we're keeping patrols in the area," said Capt. Joseph Snyder, in charge of the investigation.

Pellegrini said he was sure the caller meant the threat.

"I take this seriously," he said. "No job is worth a person's life, especially if it is a threat to a person's family."

Brown said he received a telephone call a few days ago "telling me to mind my own business." He described it as "more or less a warning," saying he didn't take it too seriously. In his report to the FBI, Brown asked that top officials of the UMW be given tie detector tests to clear themselves of the slayings, which were discovered Monday.

The request, similar to one made Tuesday night in West Virginia by Dr. Hawey Wells, a crusader for coal mine safety, was the latest in a series of inferences that the slayings were connected to the hotly contested December election which Yablonski lost to incumbent W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

Snyder called the request "unrealistic."

"Our investigations would have to point to someone before such tests would be valid," he said.

The initial claim that the slayings and the election were linked was made by Yablonski's son-in-law, Kenneth and Joseph Yablonski, now under FBI guard.

In a radio interview in Washington earlier in the day, Boyle discounted the sons' claims.

They are obviously emotionally upset," Boyle said. "I can well understand why they would be."

Representative Kenneth Hechler (Dem., W. Va.), an outspoken Yablonski supporter during the election, said he is convinced the events were connected.

"I am convinced the top leaders of the UMW did not direct the brutal murders, but the accord record of the union, the venom they spread during the campaign and the possible fear of some lower union officials that Mr. Yablonski might report illegal activities all contribute to the pattern which led to this hideous deed," Hechler said.

A funeral mass for the Yablonskis will be offered Friday morning at Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic Church in Washington, Pa., about 20 miles from Clarksville.

"I couldn't recognize him, but he was wearing a 15-denier seamless Dahlias Tan mesh-knit nylon stocking over his face."

Another Shulman Backs Dissident

TORONTO (CP) — A 20-year-old Vancouver girl, fined $100 Tuesday for throwing a stone through the window of the United States consulate in Toronto, received a $15 cheque Wednesday from Toronto architect Wilfred Shulman, brother of Dr. Morton Shulman.

Barbara Biley, graduate student in sociology at the University of Toronto, received a letter from Mr. Shulman which said:

"Although I do not agree with your political opinions, I must tell you that I admire your conviction and courage in a situation where many lesser people, probably myself included, would have backed down or submitted meekly."

Ontario May Get New National Parks

TORONTO (CP) — Rene Brunelle, Ontario minister of lands and forests, said Wednesday night he will meet next week with his federal counterpart, Jean Chretien, to discuss establishment of one or more major national parks in the province.

Mr. Brunelle said in an interview he will meet the federal minister of Indian affairs and northern development in Toronto next Thursday or Friday and discuss establishment of joint surveys to determine best locations.

At present, Ontario trails all provinces except Prince Edward Island in area set aside for national parks. There are three in the province—Point Pelee on Lake Erie, Georgian Bay Islands and St. Lawrence Islands.

The federal government last summer also took over operation of forts and park sites on the Niagara River from Niagara-on-the-Lake to Queenston.

Asked why there were not more parks, the Ontario minister said there had been major differences in the past.

"We hope to resolve some of the differences next week," Mr. Brunelle said.

He did not elaborate, but provincial sources said previous attempts to reach federal-provincial agreement have been stalled by Ottawa's insistence that Ontario pay full costs of the parkland, and Ontario's refusal to turn potentially valuable resources over to federal control.

Mr. Brunelle declined comment when asked what provincial areas he would discuss with Mr. Chretien, but sources indicated one of the leading contenders is a wilderness tract on the northeastern shoulder of Lake Superior near the Indian community of Pic Mobert.

A park in this area—roughly halfway between Sault Ste. Marie and Thunder Bay—could cover 500 square miles or more.

There are already three large provincial parks in Northern Ontario—Killarney, Lake Superior and Quetico.

High on Cognac, He Hijacks

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — A cold-sweating, 18-year-old Madrid student told police today he had attempted to hijack a Spanish airliner to Albania Wednesday night "because I had taken four cups of cognac and did not know what I was doing."

Mariano Ventura Rodriguez, toting a plastic pistol, ordered the Iberia Flight 622 from Madrid to Zaragoza to fly on to Albania about 10 minutes before the airliner landed here.

The pilot, Luis Arias Bernal, 38, said he would try his best to fly the plane to Albania "provided you do no harm whatsoever to the passengers."

Arias later told reporters the would-be hijacker vowed not to harm anybody. "All I want is to get to Albania and ask for political asylum there since I'm fed up with living in Spain," he quoted the frustrated hijacker as saying.

He nipped in the bud.

Soon after the twin-engined Convair airliner with 41 passengers and a crew of four landed, the entire Zaragoza police force — about 3,000 men—plus fire trucks and emergency vehicles surrounded the craft to prevent it flying on to Barcelona where it was due to refuel before proceeding to Albania.

Ventura, still holding the pistol threatened to kill everybody aboard if the plane did not leave Zaragoza. He stood by the entrance to the cabin holding the air hostess by his side.

Three hours after landing, Ventura allowed the passengers to disembark when police warned they would shoot him if "the slightest accident" befell any of those aboard.

Ventura finally surrendered

Studded Tires' Damage $12 Million a Year

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says a department of highways report to be released today estimates damage to provincial highways by studded tires will cost an average $12,000,000 a year for the next nine years.

This figure, the report says, is based on the use of studded tires at the present level of about 26 per cent of vehicles on the road.

The newspaper quotes the report as saying that in tests of traction of studded tires compared with regular snow tires, it was found that at zero degrees the advantage of studs declined.

Church Doing Too Much Navel-gazing

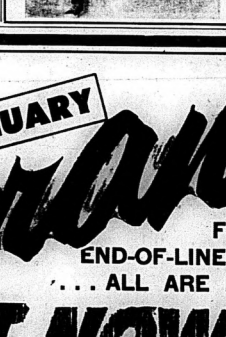
LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Roman Catholic church is too preoccupied with "evangelical navel-gazing," too "hung up" on right and wrong and too "maintenance-oriented," the head of the Redemptorist Order in Eastern Canada charged in an interview Wednesday.

"There will be a lot more difficulties before the church settles down," said Rev. Edward Boyce.

"It will get a lot worse before it gets better.

"There is certainly a crisis and we shouldn't hide our heads in the sand about that," said the provincial general of the Redemptorist community for Toronto province.

Father Boyce, who has been lecturing on the church in the modern world this week at the Divine Word Centre at London, said upheaval in the church was only a reflection of general social upheaval in the world.



"Right now the church is looking too much inward as if it was the only institution having problems when it's suffering the same confusion and is exposed to the same threats as the whole of society," he said.

He predicted more priests and nuns would leave religious orders "than we realize" but added it would be a danger to slow down renewal because of this.

"The more renewed a group gets, the more it will suffer. As you renew you're bound to get into greater tensions with the rest of the church. There will be losses, priests will leave but the biggest danger would be to panic and go back to the old system.

"If this was done there would be a real blowup."

TV Column

Cowboy Artist Good Subject

NEW YORK, (AP) — Charles Russell, the great cowboy artist of the Old West, was an ideal subject for the Project 20 treatment given him Wednesday night.

Available for the NBC documentary were the many paintings by the artist which formed a sort of diary of his long experience first as hunter and cowhand and, after his marriage in 1895, as a professional artist observing men, animals and mountain in his beloved Montana.

The paintings were laced with old photographs—many of them of Russell at various stages of his career—and highlighted with recent film shots of the Montana plains.

The subject, a St. Louis boy who went west on a stage coach when he was 16, sketched and painted all his own diversion for years. His first exhibits were in saloons for he sometimes traded painting for food or drink. When he died in 1926 he was famous, his paintings—of buffalos, Indians, cowboys and horses—were widely reproduced as calendar art. Recently a painting of his sold for $15,000.

The mood of the program, with a sensitive narration by Milburn Stone, was as nostalgic as Russell's own feeling that he was documenting a dying era of American history. It was an excellent program, perhaps a little loud-winded, but the sort of thing television doesn't do much any more.

There is a strong probability that Merv Griffin and company soon will move his late-evening CBS program to Hollywood.

CBS executives—not exactly ecstatic over Griffin's ratings about half those of Johnny Carson—are concerned over the scramble for guests in New York now that Dick Cavett also is in the field, Hollywood, whatever it may lack in non-theatrical personalities, has an endless supply of film and TV stars.

Joey Bishop was Hollywood-based, and the stream of stars didn't have his show.

It would be a big wrench for Griffin, who has a successful production company operating in New York—NBC's Jeopardy is a Griffin production—assorted financial interests and a farm in New Jersey. Arthur Treacher has an important piece of a new restaurant which has been given his nickname, Pip's Pub, in New York plus other business interest. CBS has the old Cort Theatre, expensively remodelled to suit the needs of the show.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"
By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Cigar Smoker, 80, Can Keep Puffing

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 80 years old and I've been a cigar smoker since I was about 15 years old. I never inhale. I smoke an average of 15 cigars a day, and have for years. I've always happened to have a job on which I could smoke. I've never smoked a cigarette. I've never had any trouble with coughing or sore throat or lip. I hate cigarette smoke. I'm in good health. I work in my garden, drive a car and am enjoying life very much.

I look for at least 10 more good years. What's your answer to this? — Mr. J. (And as you'll notice by the stamps on your envelope, I'm a stamp collector.)

Comment: My answer, Mr. J., is that if I were your doctor, I wouldn't eliminate one puff from your daily schedule of cigar-smoking. I believe that one who has thumbed his nose at the calendar so reverently as you have, has a right to continue this "bad habit."

I keep suggesting to my colleagues that we mustn't get into the habit of treating our patients by "the book." Each deserves special consideration. What may be a very bad habit for a youngster or for one in middle-age, may be a solace and joy for an oldster. I doubt that Mr. J. wants to be called a "senior citizen.") I disbelieve that the doctors would say to Mr. J.: "Tobacco is bad. Better quit."

* * *

Here is another side of the problem:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have had a vascular operation on my legs. I have trouble with the artery circulation. I have smoked for 40 years. I enjoy it a lot. But my doctor says I must quit. That is the hardest thing I've ever been asked to do. — L. G.

Comment: If, at 70, you were symptomless like Mr. J., my answer would be the same: Keep on smoking. But in your case I am just as emphatic as your doctor that you should quit.

In many cases I allow the elderly to enjoy their bad habits only when they are in good health and symptomless. With any history of artery trouble, smoking is strictly prohibited. Sorry I can't be as kind to you as I am to 80-year-old Mr. J.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am engaged to a hale and hearty guy 6-feet-3-inches, 175 pounds. But I am merely 5-feet tall and weigh 95 pounds. How my mother-to-be has a petite figure and when she was to deliver my brother, the doctors asked how big was her husband? Fortunately my father is only 5-feet-6, and she had no trouble.

My fiance's mother is a big woman and she recently had to have an operation caused by the birth of her children who averaged nine pounds. I am afraid I may have complications, being so small. Are my fears unfounded? If it should be necessary, how many children may I have by cesarean?

— Miss A.

Comment: What determines the ease or difficulty in delivery is not the inches in length of the patient so much as the measurements of the pelvic outlet through which the baby emerges. You may not require a cesarean, but if you do, you may have several babies by that route.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Do you have a good reducing diet? I must lose 25 pounds. I can stay on a diet for about a week, then I just go hog wild. I lose all control and eat until I bust. I feel like jumping into a lake. I have to start dieting all over again. I go up and down like a Yo-Yo. — Mrs. E.

Comment: The only solution is your own will power and a sympathetic doctor to hold the reins to keep you from running away with yourself as you do dietwise.

* * *

For Mrs. M.: Here is a definition of laparotomy: Any operation in which the incision is made through the abdominal wall and into the abdominal cavity.

Thoughts at Noon

With China being refused a place in the UN for the 20th year in a row, one wonders how long it would have taken the United States to get in if we had come as a UN in 1776 and thereafter, ruling that it was an "illegitimate" government created by "revolution," and not supported by a majority of the inhabitants — all of which was perfectly true.

* * *

Those who act only after long reflection are just as prone to error as those who act impulsively; the difference customarily being that the errors of reflection are not as hastily regretted, even if they are just as calamitous.

* * *

One of the chief sins of old-fashioned theology is the preachment that God "sends" some people to hell, even the true spiritual (and psychological) fact is that hell is a place reserved only for those who insist on going there. As C. S. Lewis wisely and wittily put it, "Hell is locked only from the inside."

* * *

A fanatical faith in science is the most dangerous superstition of an "enlightened" age.

* * *

To dislike learning is to dislike living, and children who reject education are complaining more about their lives than about their schools — although both may be bad.

* * *

The trouble with words like "peace" or "crime" in general discussion is that we use them "univocally"—as though they have only one fixed meaning — whereas there are at least four distinctly different kinds of "peace," and just as many forms of "crime," which we fail to distinguish from one another, turning communication into confusion and controversy by our intellectual laziness and ignorance.

* * *

(Incidentally, the highly-touted Random House Dictionary, in its 1966 Edition, does not list the important word, "univocal," which has no synonym, but the new American Heritage Dictionary gives it.)

* * *

The same people who complain about "too many laws" when they feel their freedom is impinged upon are the ones who demand "more laws" when they feel that others are infringing on them.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: In the coming year it is not so much what you do as how you do it. This is the time to unload outworn belongings and personal habits. You will find many relationships waning, but not many new ones coming on. Simplifying your whole way of life is much more important than starting new ventures now.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Take another look at what you have and what you offer. Many problems resolve themselves readily if seen from a constructive perspective.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You are promised encouragement and, for some, vindication today. People you'd never expect to help will be tacitly backing your side of the issues. Just avoid brooding.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Entertaining visitors may be your most important activity. There should be news, letters from friends, too. Preliminary sketches are solid subjects for discussion, but decisions or agreements should wait a while yet.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Promises, contracts made today should be worth the need reconsideration later. Find hidden flaws and get corrections started. Expect minor surprises in people's behavior.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Your luck may include some rare coincidences, perhaps lead you into odd places before the day is out. Follow your intuition; be willing to break habits and precedents. An unusual career opportunity may appear, but get more details before you respond.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You should speak up loud and clear if you have checked your facts thoroughly. Take the initiative; be prepared to adjust where others may have some of the story that you have not seen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): This is one of those wild days when you feel just fine but get swamped with swarms of confused people. Take it in stride ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You are apt to trade one sort of advantage for another supposedly better, without results. Letter matters, group interests clamor for your attention; for the moment, however, there's little to be done. Seek light entertainment this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): There is no point in argument today; by tomorrow the pressure of events probably will support your side of the issue. Study and research are strongly favored, but not final decisions or contracts.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Even with an early start, schedules may be complicated. Permanent arrangements are not made today; what seems settled may change that way. Noted and respected for patience, you are helpful to all.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Take the initiative, advertise, but don't settle now. Emotional situations pop up and must be met wisely. The evening requires change to a lighter frame of mind.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Nothing is quite what you expected it to be.

U.S. Court-martials Soldier Who Complained of Censorship

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. Army served court-martial charges today on one of the two soldier newscasters in Vietnam who accused it of censorship. But the army chose an incident in which censorship was not involved.

Specialist Robert Lawrence, 27, of Atlanta, Ga., told a news conference that the charges were based on his refusal Dec. 29 to obey a sergeant's order to stop preparing his nightly newscast and drive some soldiers to their quarters.

Five nights later Lawrence ended his news broadcast on the Armed Forces Vietnam Network by accusing the U.S. command of suppressing unfavorable news. The command suspended Lawrence and marine Cpl. Thomas M. Sinkovits, 21, of Harrisburg, Pa., who began his sportscast that followed by endorsing Lawrence's charge.

The U.S. command is investigating the broadcasts and has ordered the two soldiers not to discuss the case.

The court-martial charges allege that Lawrence was "disrespectful in language" to Sgt. Robert MacArthur and failed "to go at the prescribed time to his appointed place of duty."

Lawrence said he refused to take an administrative punishment and asked for a court-martial. He said now that he is involved in two cases, he is seeking "the legal aid of several prominent U.S. attorneys." He mentioned no names.

Lawrence said MacArthur, who was in charge of the network staff at the time, asked him to drive the soldiers home about 8:05 p.m. Dec. 29. He said the sergeant insisted that he drive and refused Sinkovits's offer to substitute, even though Lawrence told him he "did not have time to drive the truck and fully prepare my television newscast, which had to be completed by 10 p.m."

Lawrence said: "I asked Sgt. MacArthur, 'What is more important, my being duty driver or doing the 11 o'clock newscast?'

Sgt. MacArthur replied that driving the truck was more important. Sgt. MacArthur then vowed twice that he would see me in Long Binh jail if it's the last thing he ever did, for refusing his request to drive the truck."

Lawrence said his "assigned duty that night was to deliver the television broadcast" and he considered MacArthur's order unlawful because it "would interfere with that mission" and "would possibly have resulted in a charge of negligence in the preparation of my newscast."

Lawrence asked whether he thought the court-martial was the result of his censorship allegations.

"I would rather that you draw the conclusions yourself on this," he replied. "It probably would be best that I didn't say anything."

A spokesman for the U.S. command said the two incidents "are not directly connected, less he (Lawrence) says they are."

In Sacramento, Calif., the chairman of the House of Representatives subcommittee on government information, Representative John E. Moss (Dem. Calif.), said his committee probably will hold hearings in Vietnam in the next three to six weeks on the censorship charges.

Weekly Vietnam Toll Is Low

SAIGON (AP) — Sixty-five Americans were killed in combat in Vietnam last week, the second lowest weekly toll in three years.

This sent the total of U.S. combat dead in the war to 40,044 since Jan. 1, 1961, but at least 30 more Americans have been killed in action since Saturday.

The U.S. command's weekly casualty summary also reported 477 Americans wounded in action last week, the smallest number in more than two years. This raised the total American wounded to 263,003.

The Saigon government reported 304 of its troops killed in action last week, an increase of 81 over the week before. Government wounded totalled 788, the lowest in two months.

The U.S. command said southern allied forces killed 1,909 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong last week, compared with a revised toll of 1,888 enemy reported slain the previous week.

Lotteries Will Run Under Local Option

Municipalities To Get Control

TORONTO (CP) — An announcement that regulations to license lotteries in Ontario for charitable and religious purposes will be ready shortly drew mixed reactions from religious and charitable organizations Thursday.

Leslie Rowntree, Ontario minister of financial and commercial affairs, announced the regulations would be ready in about a week, adding that the province would not hold a provincial lottery because "it is not a solid basis for taxation."

A program for the licensing and control of lotteries, made legal by a recent amendment to the Federal Criminal Code, was prepared by Mr. Rowntree and approved by cabinet Thursday.

The Criminal Code amendments permit charitable and religious organizations to conduct lottery schemes if they have been licensed by the province or, a jurisdiction given authority by the province, and if the proceeds are used for charitable or religious purposes.

Mr. Rowntree said the cabinet decided to give municipalities control over religious and charitable lotteries and this will mean "a situation parallel to local option" under the liquor laws.

He said on general permission would be given to municipalities to hold their own lotteries, although they may, on application, be licensed.

"Although we are giving a broad definition to 'charity' it is not our intention to see lotteries used to lower the general municipal tax rate," he said.

Some welfare programs and hospital financing might, however, be approved as charitable purposes for municipal lotteries, he added.

The minister estimated that there are about 200,000 lotteries of various types conducted annually in Ontario now, including bingo games and raffles.

Although the Criminal Code amendments permit the licensing of lotteries at an agricultural fair or exhibition, Mr. Rowntree said there is no present intention to do so in Ontario.

Canada To Aid Biafra

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will contribute an additional $3,250,000 to Nigeria-Biafra relief, including $1,000,000 to Canairelief, Acting Prime Minister Mitchell Sharp announced today.

Canairelief had requested $1,300,000 for three months. It operates night mercy flights into Biafra to which Nigeria objects.

The Nigerian rehabilitation committee will receive $500,000, the Nigerian Red Cross $500,000 and the international committee of the Red Cross $250,000.

The contributions bring to more than $5,000,000 Canadian

Should Scrap Separate Schools -- Redemptorist

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The head of the Roman Catholic Redemptorist Order in Eastern Canada said Thursday that the Catholic separate school system is out of date and should be scrapped.

Rev. Edward Boyce told an audience at the Divine Word Centre here that separate schools "do not equip people to live in the world as it is.

"I feel that if a school is doing a good job, you should keep it," he said. "If it is not doing a good job, you should close it."

Father Boyce said efforts by Ontario separate schools to gain provincial government financial aid is "a matter of trying to keep something just because we have it."

Derailment Blamed On One Bolt

TORONTO (CP) — A single faulty eight-inch steel bolt apparently caused the wreck Wednesday of a CNR passenger train westbound to Sarnia, investigators said Thursday.

Fourteen persons were injured, four seriously, when the train's four cars were derailed by a partly open switch. Investigators said one of the three controlling bolts snapped, allowing the switch to open.

U.S. and China Arrange New Talks at Warsaw

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — The United States Thursday night announced it will resume ambassadorial-level talks with China for the first time in a year, and government sources today said the American envoy in Warsaw is expected to spell out hopes for more relaxed relations with Peking.

The meeting will take place in Warsaw Jan. 20, the first anniversary of President Nixon's assumption of office.

The state department said arrangements for the session—the 135th at ambassadorial level between China and the United States—were completed in Warsaw Thursday. The last formal talks were Jan. 8, 1968.

U.S. Ambassador Walter J. Stoessel and China's charge d'affaires, Lei Yang, participated in the preliminary round, will be the principal representatives at the formal meeting later this month.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Bitterly cold weather, compounded over many sections of the province with winds up to 30 miles per hour, continues over Ontario. Early morning temperatures ranged from near zero to 10 below in all regions with snowflurries and snow squalls to the lee of the open lakes. Only gradual moderations in both temperatures and winds are expected for Saturday.

State department officials said the agenda would be open-ended, meaning that both sides would be free to raise whatever subjects they wanted to discuss.

Government sources indicated that Stoessel would seek to allay Chinese fears that the United States wanted a permanent military presence in Asia or was trying to encircle China with bases.

The U.S.-Chinese exchanges began in Geneva in the mid-1950s and switched to the Polish capital in 1958.

Both Hanoi and Saigon Expect War Will Continue for Years

Dien Bien Phu Victor Writes Essays

By Peter Arnett

How does the North Vietnamese hierarchy view the Vietnam war today? In late December, Hanoi's leading military theoretician, Defence Minister Vo Nguyen Giap, published seven essays on warfare. In the following dispatch, an Associated Press reporter analyses the essays and discusses their relationship to events in South Vietnam.

SAIGON (AP) — North Vietnam's 21,000,000 people, on a war footing for nearly 30 years, have been told by their military leader that victory is still not near and that the war can be expected to continue indefinitely.

This unusually sobering view of the war was presented in a series of seven essays published in a Hanoi newspaper in December. They were by Defence Minister Vo Nguyen Giap, the victor of Dien Bien Phu, senior strategist for the war in the South, and a comrade for the power seat in Hanoi left vacant by the death of President Ho Chi Minh last year.

Gen. Giap's pronouncements are rare. Experts in Saigon compare these seven essays with Giap's famous "people's war, people's army" speeches of the 1950s that became a sort of textbook for guerrilla warfare. They also compare them with his "big victory, great task" articles of 1967 in that they are a major formulation of Communist party military doctrine in the Vietnam war.

But whereas Giap's previous two works rang with confidence and were flavored with the taste of ultimate victory, the December essays are low on patriotic fervor, promising more of the same grinding conflict that has already cost the lives of 300,000 North Vietnamese troops, and asking for even greater sacrifice.

"There exists a great imbalance of numerical strength and population, and also a great imbalance of technical equipment," Giap wrote about the deficiencies of his forces in the South in relation to the United States.

"Under these circumstances we must have time to gradually exterminate and weaken the enemy forces, to restrict his strength, and aggravate this strength and develop our forces and to overcome our deficiencies. . . ."

The entry of American ground troops into the war in 1965 snatched victory from a Viet Cong people's army that all followed all Giap's maxims for insurgency. The Tet offensive launched in February, 1968, by the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese forces badly battered American resolve.

But two years after that major effort, the United States still has large numbers of forces in Vietnam and in addition is attempting to build the Vietnamese armed forces into a formidable military machine.

The Viet Cong are being pushed into the hills and across the borders. The North Vietnamese troops deployed along the frontier are bloodied every time they move from their base camps.

Giap's December essays give a hint of this reality to his people, and he seems to be telling them of the new situation, but in carefully worded phrases.

Americans to Stay Many Years

SAIGON (Reuters) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today it would be impossible to withdraw all U.S. combat troops from South Vietnam by the end of 1970—and added it might be "many years" before all American troops could be withdrawn.

"We pursue our policy of regularly replacing the U.S. troops in 1970 and the coming years," the 46-year-old president told a news conference.

But he said he never believed that all American combat troops could leave the country by the end of this year.

Combat troops would be needed to provide protection for U.S. logistics and support troops in years to come, he said, but added under further questioning he hoped South Vietnamese forces could prove this protection if his country received the aid it needed.

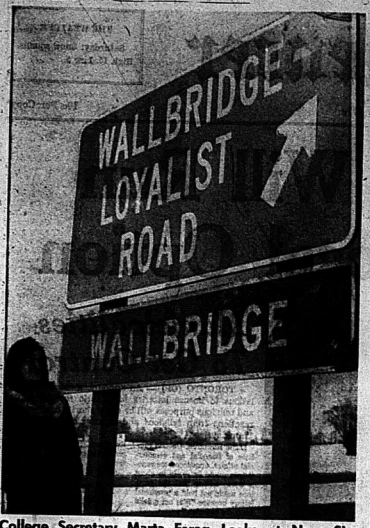
On the battlefield, U.S. and South Vietnamese forces reported killing nearly 200 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops in a number of clashes Thursday. American casualties were seven men killed and 46 wounded.

Attacks on Laos and Thailand Likely

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The North Vietnamese, aided by pro-Communist Pathet Lao and rebel Meo tribesmen, are expected to launch a major offensive against northeastern Laos and Thailand early in the new year, diplomatic and official sources in this Laotian capital report.

Both countries are waging battles against the Communists. In Laos, a civil war has been raging spasmodically since 1948, and in Thailand government forces have been fighting Communist guerrillas for several years.

Diplomatic sources say that more than 1,200 North Vietnamese have infiltrated the strategic Plain of Jars in northern Laos. The crack 312th Division, equipped with modern Russian weapons, is believed to have reached the eastern edge of the plain, the sources say.



At the same time, in neighboring Thailand, officials are expecting a big attack in the northeast of the country by 2,000 guerrillas led by Viral Thamthavorn, a Bangkok University graduate in his 40s trained in subversive tactics by Peking.

The official New China news agency said recently that the chief of Peking's general logistics department, Chang Tien-Yun, has visited the Chinese border province of Yunnan to make final arrangements for turning the province into a big strategic base for guerrillas in Vietnam, Laos, Thailand and Burma.

The agency's report coincided with another report by the United States that about 7,000 Chinese, including guards and anti-aircraft troops, are working on a new road system in northern Laos.

College Secretary Marta Farag Looks at New Sign

Madoc Slabs Cover Steel

The project that originated yesterday's confirmation of a governor general's visit to Belleville is now suddenly visible on Loyalist College campus.

Construction of the college's first permanent building on its Wallbridge Road property is now well advanced with no apparent wrinkles from the grip of winter.

Currently, some 100 men are working on the site where Governor General Michener will lay a cornerstone March 13.

The project inspired college officials to petition the governor general's participation in its ceremonial unveiling. The two-day official visit to Belleville originated from that invitation.

The building was launched Aug. 13 when Education Minister William Davis pressed a symbolic detonator on the site. It didn't work — and experts scurried to seek out the fault.

However, the delay apparently has not been typical of the project.

College officials report the building is "proceeding daily" despite the weather.

On the building's first storey section temporary plastic covers areas where the walls are not yet in place.

Temporary heating is being provided to allow inside work to proceed on schedule.

A feature of the finished project will be the exterior of the college's technical wing.

It will be composed of concrete slabs — each weighing several tons — with a distinctive rock finish. Some are so large that a special flat-bed port was required to haul them the 240 mile under provincial police escort.

The Toronto area firm manufacturing the panels has its rock quarry north of Madoc. Loyalist officials say the college is the first in Ontario to have its building exterior mined in its own area.

The building is scheduled for student occupancy by September.

A College Takes Shape

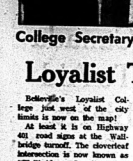
Loyalist College's first permanent building now is well under construction on its Wallbridge Road campus site. Here hefty concrete slabs facing ita exterior are lifted into place as work crews ready site for mid-March cornerstone ceremonies with Governor General Michener.

Loyalist Turn Marked on 401

Belleville's Loyalist College just west of the city limits is now on the map!

At least it is on Highway 401 road signs at the Wallbridge turnoff. The cloverleaf intersection is now known as "Wallbridge — Loyalist Road" and new highway signs have been erected bearing the name.

The move to get Loyalist College identified on the Highway 401 turn-off sign at Wallbridge Road was started some months ago with Sidney township council making the official request to the highway department's regional office at Kingston.



But the request was turned down at Kingston and was greeted only after representation had been made to headquarters in Toronto by Quinte riding member R. T. Potter.

This week the college received a communication from Highways Minister George Gomme advising that the request for Loyalist identification at the Wallbridge Road turnoff had been granted and yesterday the new signs

Frank Rebel, new college board of governors' chairman gives full credit to the Quinte riding member and Sidney Reeve Jack Bush in getting the sign changed.

In the past strangers to the Belleville area were frequently missing the Wallbridge Road turn-off from Highway 401 a sobey sought to find their way to the college.

It was a bit of a nuisance," commented one official.

Junior Farmers to Attend Conference at Toronto

Junior Farmers from Prince Edward county will participate in the annual conference at the Junior Farmers' Association of Ontario at Toronto this weekend.

Twenty-five counties and districts will be represented in the public speaking, music and square dance competitions on Saturday.

A new event in this year's program will be the vocal solo competition and Jim Barber, RR7, Belleville and Don Ward RR2, Bloomfield will compete in the event.

The talent hunt, introduced last year, is being continued. This year Linda and Roger Elliott, RR1, Bloomfield, Richard Fox, RR2, Bloomfield, Noreen and Daryl Osterhout, RR2, Consecon, and Don Ward of Bloomfield will participate doing their barnyard stampleer act.

During the conference, the four junior farmers who will visit the U.K. on the department of agriculture and food travelling scholarships, will be announced.

George Black, RR7, Belleville has been nominated by Prince Edward county for this award.

More than 100 junior farmers from across Ontario will attend the day long conference to be held in the King Edward Sheraton Hotel. The program will conclude with a dance in the evening.

Three Hastings county juniors, John Murray and Ned Wilson of Stirling and Jim Wallbridge Sidney township, will also attend the conference but will not take part in the entertainment events.

Dental Care to be Considered By County Health Unit

A preventive dental care service for Hastings and Prince Edward counties will be viewed in coming weeks by local health authorities.

But institution of the program will depend on availability of professional personnel.

The report comes from Ald. Enos David, outgoing board chairman of the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties' Health Unit.

The board yesterday gave approval in principle for a dental care program — after hearing an outline from a department of health official of dental services provided by 28 other health units in Ontario, said the chairman.

Such a program would involve school students and children of pre-school age.

However, it would also call for a dentist trained in public dentistry and dental hygienists. One solution to the staff problem could be a cooperative program with a health unit adjacent to the Quinte area — possibly Kingston, said Ald. David.

In his final address as chairman, the alderman stressed the need for preventive programs to offset the "exploding cost of hospital care and medical services in general . . . "

He believed the board had a responsibility to "investigate every avenue" of such programs.

It's a "proven fact," he said, that every dollar spent on prevention can save "thousands — not to mention millions" spent on additional hospital facilities.

"I know that our unit is comparatively new as compared to others in the province. I believe it's time we started to look at the new programs that have been carried on by some of the progressive health units," said Ald. David.

He also briefly reviewed the makeup of the board's membership.

Prince Edward County has three representatives on the board, he said. Belleville, with nearly twice the population and "many times the assessment" has only two representatives.

"I trust that it may be possible to rectify this inequity in board representation," added Ald. David.

Naturalist Writes Book On Prince Edward Birds

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County naturalist Terry Sprague expects to see his first book, Birds of Prince Edward County, in print next month.

Nicknamed the "Birdman of Big Island", Terry is a prominent birder (the swinging term for bird watcher) and columnist in the Quinte area.

In his column, Outdoors with Terry, featured weekly in the Picton Gazette, he has attempted to amend the bird watcher's image.

"Most people think of bird watchers as being namby pambys, old maids, or girl guides," lamented Terry.

He stressed that people from all walks of life and from every age group become ardent birders.

Terry, now in his early twenties, has been an avid birder since he saw his first robin.

Terry, who does much research travelling by motorbike or snowmobile as the season dictates, has proven locally that birders are rugged contemporaries.

Commissioned last year by the Prince Edward County Conservation Authority to write "a history of the bird species observed locally, Terry tackled the project eagerly.

His book is based on records dating from the late 1800s to the present day. Containing over 200 pages, the book is illustrated with photographs by A. G. (Jack) Austin, Wooler.

Covered in birds of Prince Edward County are 290 bird species observed here in the last century. Copies of the book will be available at the Prince Edward County Conservation Authority office in the Armory mall.

It is expected that there will be other sale outlets chosen, too.

Appointed to Hospital Board

TRENTON — Two new appointments to the Trenton Memorial Hospital Board of Governors, to fill vacancies were approved at a special meeting of board members Wednesday evening.

The new members, whose terms of office will run until May of this year are Mr. J. E. Gummo, manager of the Trenton branch of the Royal Bank, and Mr. M. F. James, vice president and secretary of the Trenton Cold Storage.

The vacancies filled by the new members were created by the sudden death in December of S. O. Graham, board chairman for the past 16 years, and the resignation of O. M. Newton, also a long time board member.

Snowy Roofs of Winter

This pair of bird houses was not the only evidence of snow-covered buildings in Picton and Prince Edward County as every structure felt the brunt of heavy snowfall yesterday.

Snowplows Order of Picton Day

Street clearing was a pressing problem for Picton municipal workers and officials as snowplows took to the streets to clear away 22 inches of snow that fell in the area Wednesday night and Thursday.

Belleville, Trenton Unflurried

Picton Area Snowed Under by Quirk of Winter

Although Prince Edward County has been literally "snowed under" by the heaviest snowfall in five years — a total of 22.8 inches — the Belleville and Trenton areas have continued to escape with only a few flurries.

The situation in the county has been termed "a most unusual one" by weather forecasters at CFB Trenton.

"Both Belleville and Trenton are "protected" by Prince Edward County from the brunt of snow squalls that have dumped the phenomenal fall on the area," explained the duty forecaster at CFB Trenton.

"The problem," he said, "is a southwesterly wind that is blowing cold air over the warm water of Lake Ontario."

"Prince Edward County is directly exposed to these winds, which have carried snow about five to 10 miles inland", explained the forecaster.

The situation will improve tomorrow, however.

"The wind that is causing all the problems is gradually shifting to become a northwesterly wind. What is happening now is that we must bear the wrath of strong winds — 32 to 35 miles an hour — which have compounded the whole situation," the forecaster added.

The Port Hope and Cobourg area were also affected by the "local phenomenon" with more than 11 inches of snow.

Nine plows worked continually last night and the night before, to clear Prince Edward County roads.

Picton Police reported no accidents in the past 24 hours despite slippery road conditions.

A spokesman for the Picton Detachment of the OPP noted that county roads are well plowed and visibility seems good in most areas.

No accidents were recorded during yesterday's storm. Traffic is lighter than usual in Prince Edward County since the onset of the two-day storm, added the spokesman.

It is still snowing at South Bay, Point Petre, West and East Lake, Cherry Valley, Wellington and Consecon.

Drifting is reported in Wellington and other parts of the county and in Picton light winds are springing up at intervals.

At Glenora a crew member of the Quinte Loyalist reported ferry operations unhampered by the storm.

"The visibility is good and we have a good channel," he remarked.

Elementary schools were closed throughout the county this morning with the exception of Queen Elizabeth Public School in Picton, Wellington Public School and Keele School in Ameliasburg.

Prince Edward Collegiate Institute was closed today also.

Postmaster Ross Greenfield said this morning that yesterday's snowfall stayed several mail carriers from their appointed rounds in Prince Edward County.

While all contractors attempted to deliver the mail some were forced to turn back because of road conditions and impaired visibility.

The forecast for tomorrow calls for variable cloudiness, with only a few snowflurries and colder temperatures.

The forecaster indicated the weather would be improving, "increasingly, as the winds shift to the northwest".

Thurlow Clerk Joins City Staff

EARL DAFOE

The increasing volume of business being carried on in the clerk's department at Belleville city hall has resulted in the hiring of a deputy clerk.

He is Earl Dafoe, clerk-treasurer for Thurlow township for the past 22 years who will take up his new position at the middle of February.

The appointment was made early this week and will be confirmed by bylaw at Monday's regular meeting of council.

A life resident of the Belleville area, Mr. Dafoe has long experience in municipal business. He first worked in the Hastings county road engineer's office and before going to Thurlow in 1947 worked for four years in the accountancy office at Stewart Warner-Alemite. He acted as secretary treasurer of the South Hastings High School District board from 1949 to 1952 and was treasurer of the Belleville Fair for four years.

In announcing the new appointment Mayor J. Russell Scott said he was pleased that Mr. Dafoe was coming to Belleville.

"He is well qualified and I am sorry that Thurlow is losing such a good man," he said.

Mr. Dafoe's duties will mainly be land valuations — a function formerly performed by the city assessment office — and acting as clerk of the committee of adjustment.

Thurlow Deputy Reeve Borden Forsythe said the township would have to advertise immediately for a new municipal clerk.

"We are sorry to see Mr. Dafoe leave," he said.

Canoe Trip Seen on Film

The Quinte International Club will hold its regular meeting at the Family Y on Saturday, Jan. 10 at 8 p.m.

Slides and lecture on an Ontario West Hinterland 400 mile canoe trip by the Voyageurs will be presented. All are welcome.

Lottery Rules Ready

considered for the operation of casinos, Mr. Rowntree said "there will be no Las Vegas type operations in Ontario."

A committee with representatives from the departments of revenue, treasury, justice, agriculture and municipal affairs has been formed to work out procedures and guidelines for Ontario's licensing program.

Ray Auld, executive director of the Ontario Society for Crippled Children, said the society would be very interested in looking into the possibilities of running lotteries as a means of providing further funds for their work.

Archdeacon H. B. Snell, however, said lotteries are against the rules of the Anglican Church and added that "we are not in the gambling business."

Somewhere between those two views stood Rev. Paul Lannan, associate director of the Catholic Information Centre, who predicted the legislation would lead to limited use of lotteries by Roman Catholic parishes.

"I think there will be some use but it will not be too widespread," he said, adding that it seems if you have a really worthwhile project that's providing a needed service, there are better means than having to go out and sell tickets and push articles."

Metropolitan Toronto Chairman Albert Campbell said any lottery run for public charitable purposes should be run by the Metro government and not by the cities and individual boroughs in Metro.

He said in an interview any lottery large enough to attract the interest would have to be Metro-wide.

"For lotteries to be useful to a municipality they have to produce a lot of money, something like $1,000,000," he added.

Picton Cabs Too Busy

PICTON — Cab stands in Main Street stood vacant yesterday as taxi drivers struggled to keep pace with in coming calls.

A survey of several Picton taxi services showed that business doubled for at least one driver, and rated substantially for others.

Most of the increased business centred on town calls. All cab companies refused to accept country fares after 3 p.m. yesterday because of hazardous driving conditions.

Cheaper Than Mailing

Kiwanians Deliver Phone Books

It appears that a new bestseller is making its way into Belleville's homes in the next couple of weeks, but except where reference is necessary, it makes very boring reading.

In the next few days, the 1970 telephone directory will be delivered to the doors of over 15,000 residences.

But this year there will be a new twist. Instead of being mailed to Bell Telephone customers, the directory will be delivered by the Belleville Kiwanis Club. Mailing costs have prompted Bell's change in method.

And that's no easy chore for the club members.

Yesterday afternoon the directories arrived in Belleville, all six tons of them, approximately 20,000 books in all.

Kiwanians lined up at the Bridge Mission and Garage headquarters where they received the directories and prepared to take them out to members of the club who will pass them out by hand.

The new way of delivery of the directories has been forced upon Bell Telephone by high mailing costs much to the benefit of the Kiwanis Club which will earn approximately $2,000 for dropping the books off house to house.

But Kiwanians have the project well organized. Project manager, Roger Harvey, and committee chairman, Gerry Keenan, co-ordinated shifts last Friday, Saturday, Sunday night and Tuesday night, to outline preparatory delivery information.

Area captains were picked, as well as dispatchers. Kiwanian's cars were loaded yesterday with an allotted amount of directories and were sent off to deliver them.

Yesterday was the first delivery day and the Kiwanians hope to have the mission completed by the end of next week. However, Bell Telephone has said that customers should call Bell only if they have not received their directory by Jan. 21.

Bell manager, George Thompson, said over $2,000 have been printed in all.

Belleville will receive approximately 24,850 directories and Trenton and Picton will receive 11,800 and 5,200 respectively.

Change's in this year's directory are listings of new service numbers. For Belleville, repair service will be listed as 611, formerly 4104.

For Picton repair service will be listed as 4104, formerly 114. Directory assistance in Picton is 411, instead of 113. The number changes will become effective Jan. 9.

The directory's cover design is rich in reds, greens and blues. The word "telephone" is computer type-face and is repeated in square design that funnels to infinity.

There are 132 white pages in this year's directory with yellow pages for Belleville totalling 72. Picton has 24 yellow pages and Trenton 52.

Inside the front cover, the popular emergency number finder has been retained. There is also a page for frequently called numbers.

Tweed Students Help Produce Film

TWEED — Last June, (1969) before school ended, several grade 13 students from the Tweed - Hungerford District High School participated in the filming, in color, of a geology series for the educational television branch of the Ontario Department of Education.

Jane Barnett, Brenda Deshane, John Hunt, Evan Neugebauer, Murray Spencer and Paul Woolfrey spent a week from school with a film crew of six and three geology professors from University of Toronto, filming a typical geology field trip in the Tweed area.

Local sites included an abandoned mica mine near Sulphide, an abandoned quartz mine in Kaladar, Stirling's Bridge, near Actinolite and rock cuts along Highway 41.

The filming in Tweed area comprises the first three programs out of a series of ten which are scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 15, 22 and 29th at 9.40 a.m. on channel 11 Kingston, 12 Peterborough and 6 Toronto.

Obituaries

FRANK HOUSTON
Toronto — Tweed

Frank Bowell Houston, the 75 - year - old grand nephew of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, former Conservative Prime Minister of Canada, was buried in the family plot in Tweed, (Victoria Cemetery) on Tuesday morning, January 6th. Death occurred at his home, 80 Sorauren Avenue, Toronto, on Thursday, January 1st. He was the son of the late John W. and Alice Houston.

Mr. Houston was a well - known musician in the Toronto area, and a former president of the Toronto Gilbert and Sullivan Society. His annual presentations of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas drew enthusiastic audiences as well as most of Toronto's music critics.

At the time of his death, he was Director of Music of the Simpson Avenue United Church, in Toronto. He was the former director of music at Pickering College, and was active with the Clarkson Operatic Group, which he founded thirty years ago.

A 150 - member choir sang at his funeral service held at the Simpson Avenue United Church, Toronto, where Mr. Houston had been director and choirmaster for more than 35 years.

A few hours before his death, he had been host at a New Year's party after directing a carol festival at the church. Mr. Houston had never married.

MISS LYNN RAY BARRETT

U.S. Tanker In Trouble

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported a tanker with 41 men aboard and loaded with jet fuel was in danger of sinking in high seas today about 250 miles west of Los Angeles.

The Connecticut's master, who was not identified, radioed the coast guard here that his Japan-bound ship was taking water through its driveshaft tubes and he did not know whether it would stay afloat much longer.

Communication Needs

In this decade of the seventies one of the essential elements of progress will be improved communications, and it is good to see this need being recognized by area municipalities.

Prince Edward County's new warden, Gordon Lloyd, for one has urged county council's co-operation with Picton Mayor H. J. McFarland in "doing something" about the Bay bridge at Belleville.

Mr. Lloyd points out that the load limit on the bridge is insufficient to the traffic needs of today. And of course there is that other prickly problem of traffic tie-ups every half-hour/in summer as the bridge swings open to permit boat traffic to pass.

The Hillier reeve does not offer any suggestion as to just what action may be taken, but the fact that someone officially recognizes the problem is a step in the right direction. Belleville and Hastings county are also involved; whatever is done will require a co-operative effort by municipalities on both sides of the Bay of Quinte.

Mayor McFarland meanwhile has made further mention of his suggestion of a bridge link between the county, Amherst Island, Wolfe Island and New York state.

"It may only be a dream right now," he observed, "but dreams do come true."

How right he is. In this context we recall the marvel that was Expo which came about largely through the faith and determination of Montreal's Mayor Drapeau; backed by other men of vision and of administrative and creative skill.

The same kind of foresight, drive and energy will transform the Quinte area in the years ahead. Such progress is inevitable in the changing circumstances of our day.

Give Up on UFOs!

So the United States Air Force, after 22 years of study, is giving up its investigation of UFOs — unidentified flying objects — or in popular parlance, "flying saucers".

Announcing its decision, the air force said it had found no threat to national security in the imagined presence of this phenomenon of outer space.

Meanwhile, the subject has been discussed in Boston by the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Among the skeptics present was Dr. J. Allen Hynek, Northwestern University astronomer, who said scientists of the 21st century would look back on UFOs as the greatest nonsense of the 20th century.

Somehow we doubt if either the U.S. Air Force's decision to end its study or the word of those who say it is a lot of baloney will convince the host of people all over the world who claim to have sighted UFOs, even talked with "crew members", and believe the authenticity of published photographs purporting to be UFOs, as well as pictures of burned areas of earth where UFOs may have landed. And what about the reports of electrical interference: UFOs bringing autos to a halt and their presence striking fear in the hearts of both man and beast? Animals for instance have been reported reacting in startled fashion to the apparent presence overhead of UFOs. And what about the Biblical references to phenomena similar to this kind of activity?

What does lead to a measure of skepticism among laymen is the fact that despite all the evidence no one has yet pinned down one of the brutes, shot it down or whatever. It is all too inexact and inclines one to agree with Dr. Hynek when he says: "I can't walk around the block without seeing at least one and sometimes several of the basic stimuli that people have reported from time to time as a bona fide UFO".

Be that as it may, as long as some element of mystery remains, controversy is bound to continue. Of the many books published on the subject, one of the most recent is Harmonic 33. Its author is Bruce Crathie, a pilot with the National Airways Corporation of New Zealand, and he claims half-a-dozen UFO sightings.

An analysis of these and other confirmed sightings led him to the discovery that they occurred in a regular pattern that conformed to a systematic grid pattern. Further research, he claims, proved that this grid was part of a worldwide grid and that UFO sightings are inter-related with other natural but hitherto unexplained phenomena.

Where then do we go from here? Whether one is a skeptic or a believer you have to admit it is a fascinating subject.

Tasmania

Scenery—and Shades of Errol Flynn and Convict Life

Robert Turnbull in
The Globe and Mail

The man in the Sydney - to - Melbourne plane lifted his eyebrows in surprise. "Why on earth," he said, "would anyone want to go to Tasmania?" His reaction was typical of a goodly number of mainland Australians met, who never have visited their island state. Which is the pity, because Tasmania, 180 miles south of the mainland (30 minutes by jet from Melbourne) is a wonderfully scenic place.

It has everything: high, rugged mountains (a third of the island is thus virtually unexplored wilderness); placid farmland; a spectacular, rock - ribbed coastline; gentle rivers and lakes; wide, pleasant valleys; and fine harbors. A fascinating early history, too, in large measure living the story of convicts transported from Britain (and a few from the Upper Canada Rebellion of 1837) in the Nineteenth Century.

So far, tourism in Tasmania is light, but if and when Pacific air fares are reduced, the island will deserve more than a passing nod from North Americans (who could easily get further away from home).

Hobart, the capital, with its multitude of red-roofed, white houses between the base of 4,165-foot Mt. Wellington (snow-capped in winter) and the lovely Derwent River. A half-day trip ($2) to the mountaintop provides a splendid panorama of Hobart (population 126,000) and surroundings. By the by, that swashbuckling movie actor, the late Errol Flynn, was born in Hobart in 1909; and actress Merle Oberon (born Estelle Merle O'Brien) in 1911, is also Tasmanian.

Many of the stout buildings of Georgian architecture along Hobart's waterfront were built by convict labor, as the granite gates of Tasmania's convict history lies in Port Arthur, at the tip of the nearby Tasman Peninsula. It's about a full day ($4.50 a head by car) to Port Arthur, the region with sightseeing en route.

The road from Hobart to Port Arthur spirals up and down hills and through lanes of tall gum trees and thick bush, until at length the seashore, where the terrain is much like parts of Nova Scotia.

At the fishing village of Dunalley a memorial commemorates the first landing, close by, of Europeans in 1642; sailors from two Dutch ships commanded by Abel Janszoon Tasman, who visited the island the Dutch named Van Diemen's Land, in honor of the then governor of the Netherlands East Indies.

Next comes Eaglehawk Neck, where the peninsula broadens into a narrow isthmus. During convict days between 1830 and 1877 this strip was guarded by three dogs trained to kill. Only in the night with sightseeing en route.

Only in the night with sightseeing en route could pass between a pair. The barrier was so effective that no convict was known to have escaped, and fear of sharks deterred attempts to swim the mile-wide strait.

En route the hamlet of Tarrana, where one of the most picturesque Tasmanian legends, true, however, is an aboriginal girl named Mary Mungarra. The fine railway in Australia was built between Tasmania and Port Arthur — a 6½-mile tramway which cars of passengers or cargo were pushed by convicts.

Port Arthur has dwindled to a population of 200, but during its 47 years as a penal settlement about 12,000 convicts passed through its doors. With wide lawns, cricket grounds, flower beds and sub trees surrounding the roofless stone walls and towers of an abandoned convict-built church, the place has a decidedly English countryside look.

During the years since the settlement closed in 1877, both fires, weather and general neglect have taken their toll of buildings, but enough remain to make Port Arthur worth a visit. What stories those stones could tell.

East German Scientists Ordered to Toe the Line

German Features

BERLIN — East Germany's dogmatic Reds have won another battle against a glimpse of liberalization. They have ordered that computers and the sciences of cybernetics are fine—so long as they begin from a base of absolute Marxist - Leninist principles.

The tussle, which has largely been carried out behind the scenes and must be ferreted out of heavy, tedious Red lingo, began five years ago when the East Germans launched their new economic system. That system was designed to decentralize management and planning in east Germany's economy in hopes of hauling the old system from sluggishness, goof ups and lethargy.

For the first time, party leaders found themselves dependent on computers and cybernetics to do the job — plus, of course, the highly qualified personnel necessary to handle them. It was hoped planning mistakes in central planning could by and large be ruled out.

The system has doubtlessly had many good effects and east Germany's economy is functioning more smoothly than before. But one of the side effects was not the type to please Communist dogmaticians: the computers and cybernetics began to mould a human intelligentsia with more flexible thinking and behavior than stubborn ideologists could bear.

The battle line was soon drawn up and launched in the usual, verbal tactics with east German party boss, aging Walter Ulbricht carrying the ball. Ulbricht subtly noted that opponents of the regime were claiming that the computer and cybernetics corps was not being guided by the principles of Marxist - Leninist dogma. In the same speech he carefully noted that party set the tone in technical and scientific areas as well as in non-exact sciences.

The meaning was fairly well clear: a mere liberal attitude among the electronics crowd was not desired and it would be best to drop such an attitude — immediately. The dogmatic elements of the party are definitely in control and the battle was decided before it began.

Busy Schedule Ahead For Quebec Liberal Party Chief

Quebec L'Action— . . . The elected leader (of the Québec Liberal party) will not subsequently have much time to waste. He will live under the constant threat of an election. He will have to sound the bugle, he will have to keep his party alert. Then, when he will have to leave his home to move to the attack, plunge into battle—a battle about which predictions are unusually tough to make, since the opposition will include, besides the Union Nationale, the Parti Quebecois and perhaps Creditiste and NDP candidates. It appears, as Mr. Lesage has been saying since August, that the Liberals will submit to the voters not on one program, but 11. Let us understand each other: one general program related to general questions and to others closely concerned with each of the economic regions of Quebec division of diplomatic agreement.

Communism's Violent History and Its Threat to the West

Letter to the Peterborough Examiner

It would seem I am not alone in dodging a point, for Wendy Butt completely distorted and evaded my point (letter, Dec. 27).

What she says Communists are atrocious but "let them worry about that" she is dodging the point I am trying to make. The reason for my strong anti-communistic stand all these years is that the Communists are trying to impose their system on us.

If I sincerely believed, as Wendy Butt apparently does, that communism would be contained in the countries where it is now in control, I would not be so vocal in my opposition to them.

However, I cannot accept that view, and no sane-thinking person will ever again cry "Mc-Carthyism" when an individual dares to stand out against communism, gives a real commission, appointed by the government has even mentioned communism as the major threat to national security in Canada.

The recent charges of subversive activities by the Company of Young Canadians also proves my point. All student agitators are not Communists but many are and I have noticed that they carry placards and shout slogans from the writings of Mao Tse Tung; and particularly he fore his death Ho Chi Minh seemed to be their hero. It is not necessary for radicals to be a majority to overthrow a government. In every case where a government is communistic it has been the result of minority activity.

From Communists we have the word that they fully intend to conquer the world by 1973 and have a dictator in both Washington and Ottawa within the next decade of the 1970s. Krushchev is reported to have said that 25 million people in America and Canada will be executed in order for Communists to impose communism on the U. S. A. and Canada. This is in line with communist policy in other nations. It is estimated that 18,000,000 died at the hands of Stalin to establish Russian communism. An estimated 55,000,000 died in Mao's purges in China and about 20,000 non-communists were exterminated during the Tet offensive in the city of Hue, Vietnam.

My point is, the history of communism is a history of violence and bloodshed, and masacre of innocent victims whose only crime was that they were not communists and refused to be indoctrinated.

The history of America is the very opposite and when a small group of fanatics . . . commit atrocities when engaged in conflict with an enemy, they never hear the last of it. I do not condone what the Americans did, but I for one would 100 times rather have their political system than the Communists' and I say that students or any other dissenters will be denied the right to dissent under communism. Therefore students and all young people should be in the forefront giving leadership in movements which resist the spread of communism.

Senator Wants Mine Union Probed as Kennedy Did Teamsters

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP) — Union reformer Joseph Yablonski, his wife and daughter were to be buried today as the labor department prepared a full-scale investigation of the bitterly fought United Mine Workers presidential election that claims led to the slaying of the three.

Coupled with the labor department's announcement Thursday were a request for a Senate investigation of the UMW by Senator Robert P. Griffin (Rep., Mich.) and a UMW offer of a $20,000 reward for the arrest and conviction of the killer or killers.

The slain man's lawyer, Jesse Nash, said in Washington, D.C.:

"What is required now is a joint justice-labor investigation of corruption and violence in the United Mine Workers, of the massive expenditures of union funds during the election campaign as well as the election-day frauds.

"This only hope for ever cleaning up this union is the type of task force that Bobby Kennedy used against the Teamsters."

The director of the investigation by Labor Secretary George Shultz came after days of allegations and denials that the contest was rigged in favor of Boyle in the election which Yablonski lost to incumbent W. A. (Tony) Boyle.

The initial assertion that the murders and election were linked came from Yablonski's two lawyer sons, Kenneth and Joseph Jr., after the bodies of the victims were discovered Monday in their rural Clarksville home 35 miles from here.

But as they prepared to bury their father in the coal mining centre where he rose from the mine pits to top union office, the brothers declined comment on either the investigation or the union's forward effort.

Nash, state police and FBI agents said the trio's car was sold last, began a zone-to-door canvass of Clarksville hoped to find witnesses who provided clues. The FBI said agents also had focused not into nearby towns and across the border into northern West Virginia.

Capt. Joseph Snyder, the state trooper in charge of the investigation, said at least 30 federal, state and local officers had been working on the case since the gruesome-clad bodies of the victims were found in bedrooms of their home. Funeral services for Yablonskis were killed either late Dec. 30 or early Dec. 31.

Canadian Indians 'Red Paper' Is Checked for March Release

TORONTO (CP) — The Indian's Red Paper, their answer to the federal white paper on Indian affairs—will be ready by March, says Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta.

The draft form has been completed by a committee of Alberta Indians and will go back to Indians across the province for approval before it is sent to the National Indian Brotherhood.

The contents are top secret, Mr. Cardinal said in an interview that Alberta Indians have unanimously rejected the white paper which proposed that Indian affairs be turned over to the provinces.

Mr. Cardinal, 24, is in Toronto on a promotional tour for his book The Unjust Society, The Tragedy of Canada's Indians.

Indians will never give up their opposition to provincial control, he said.

He said, the provinces have indicated, and rightly so, that they need an answer of responsibility to fulfil treaties made between the federal government and the Indians because the provinces were not parties to the treaties.

Mr. Cardinal said the Indians hope their Red Paper will make such a strong case for the Indians that they will gain support of the non-Indian population. As a first step, the Indians plan to present their case through the news media and then at a series of meetings. They want to make alliances with different groups such as labor, farmers, territorial governments in the north and residents of federal parks.

"If that is not enough to convince the Canadian people we are sincere, we will have to become armed students of Gandhi and Martin Luther King," said Mr. Cardinal.

His book, published in Edmonton, has sold a first printing of $25,000 and will go into second printing in several months.

In it, he traces the history of the Indian-white relationship until last August. He emphasizes that Indians must overcome their tribal differences enough to present a unified voice.

Mr. Cardinal consistently names the goals of the Canadian Indian: Enough money and resource people to enable the National Indian Brotherhood to become an effective body with a national voice; creation of strong provincial groups; securing federal recognition of Indian rights; introduction of new concepts of education to bridge the gap between Indians and modern society; and broad economic development to free the Indian from his subservient role.

Mr. Cardinal said Indians do not know yet how much expropriation they can expect for the lands they gave up under treaty and much of this should depend on the type of claims commission set up.

"There's no way we're going to get our counsels back," he said. But if Canada follows the precept of international justice it will have no choice but to honor the rights offered in exchange for the land under the treaties.

Mr. Cardinal said the federal government's recent appointment of an Indian claims commissioner was made without consultation with Indians.

"We don't believe we can get justice from a man responsible to the minister of Indian affairs. The new government policy gives the commissioner too much power," he said.

They had threatened that the most important claims we have will be stifled," he added.

Shake-up Recommended

Trois-Rivieres Police Inquiry Report Made

QUEBEC (CP) — The Trois-Rivieres, Que., police force—of 143 men the fourth largest in the province—should be completely restructured, the provincial Police Association inquiry commission recommended in a report made public Thursday.

The commission, headed by Judge Roger Gosselin, found that the force's vice squad and city squad had ignored since January, 1967, a flourishing prostitution business.

Some of the officers knew the prostitutes, their clients and their pimps but no police action was taken against any of the procurers until Aug. 12, 1969, when government-ordered inquiry began hearings.

Other abnormalities mentioned in the 100-page report to the provincial department of justice included police tolerance of bawdy houses and cases of bribery.

The inquiry was called after a Trois-Rivieres alderman charged last March that officers in the city 80 miles northeast of Montreal were connected with prostitution.

From time to time, the report said, police arrested a prostitute who was not quickly released on $100 bail. In most cases the prostitute did not make a court appearance and the bail was forfeited.

If the prostitute did appear in court and was found guilty, a fine of $40 was imposed.

The report also noted that nearly all the city's prostitutes had in their possession a medical certificate which was renewed every few months. Upon arrest, a prostitute was asked to show this certificate.

Members of the Trois-Rivieres force were unfamiliar with the use of firearms, the commission found, and their evaluation ranged from Grade 5 to Grade 11.

The report recommends that the force be restructured from the top down, that specialists be grouped in three main categories: General police work, security and youth assistance.

Also, the force should take effective measures to clean up the prostitution racket, the report said. Measures to date had been ineffective.

All police constables should have at least a Grade 11 education and police and fire-fighting services should be separated for greater efficiency.

At commission hearings last year, Police Chief Amedee Dubois replied to charges that his officers were implicated in prostitution by saying he did not know what was going on within his own force.

Two Trois-Rivieres men said they knew of policemen taking bribes and a young woman claiming to be a prostitute said that policemen had laid down the regulations under which other prostitutes operated.

She also said the officer had asked for a share of her earnings, but she had refused.

Kinsmen and Kin-20 to End Backing for Drop-in Centre

The Belleville Kinsmen Club and its youthful suborganization, Kin-20, have decided to withdraw their support from By Word of Mouth, the Front Street drop-in centre across from Belleville City Hall.

The decision following a recent decision of the Kinsmen Club was announced yesterday by club spokesmen, Rod and Belanger and Bill Christie.

Two Kinsmen, Mr. Belanger and Byron Casselman, will take over the responsibility of the drop-in centre themselves, as free agents, having nothing to do with the service club.

Mr. Belanger told The Intelligencer that the Kinsmen had decided their many other community projects were forcing them to make the decision about the centre.

He said the Kinsmen found the centre and some of its activities sapped too much time from the club.

"In the future, problems with the drop-in centre will not be associated with the Kinsmen Club," he said.

However, the centre will continue to operate under the responsibility of Mr. Belanger and Mr. Casselman.

Meetings between the two men and some of Belleville's young people have showed that the youth element is still interested in having the drop-in centre.

Approximately 60 young people attended two recent meetings to help organize the drop-in centre with a board of young directors.

Mr. Belanger felt that the teen-agers had a sincere desire to be considered one group at the centre and would make an honest endeavor to work together on the various management aspects of By Word of Mouth.

The meetings also saw the setting up of committees for repairing the centre, redecorating it and changing its atmosphere.

As a result of the renovations, the centre will be closed for 10 to 14 days.

Mr. Belanger said the present hours of operation would probably be relaxed when it re-opened. There would be, however, hopefully, a pair of new supervisors.

The young people have expressed a desire for adults to come down and drop in at the centre with them.

Mr. Belanger is also looking for a person to run a canteen in the centre thereby looking after it and also selling food.

"He's going to have to be responsible for the rent," he said. "He can't take away our revenue. We want someone who understands kids."

By Word of Mouth originated for opened at its present location in April.

Funeral

MRS. MATTHEW WEIR

The funeral for Mrs. Gertrude Weir, 63 South John Street, was held from the George O'Brien Funeral Residence to St. Michael's Church this Friday morning. She died in Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday.

Rev. P. Carey celebrated the Requiem Mass, while Rt. Rev. J. P. Sullivan said the graveside prayers at St. Jacios cemetery.

The bearers were James Zakaw, Robert Cummings, Richard Way, Patrick Cornell, Harry Abbott Jr. and Harry Bedford.

Mrs. Weir was born at Desoronto, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Meda Kimberley and was in her 79th year. She had resided in Belleville most of her life.

She was a member of St. Michael's Church.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. Clarence (Isabel) Hunt and one sister, Mrs. Kathleen Brandt, both of Belleville. Her husband, Matthew Weir, died in 1961.

Snowmobile Safety Rules Proposed After Inquest

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury investigating the death of two Sault Ste. Marie women killed in a snowmobile accident, attributed death to internal and brain injuries and made five recommendations concerning use of such vehicles.

Suoma Kauppinen and Biena Nenonan, both 43, were killed when their snowmobile was struck by a car last month.

The jury recommended:

—That safety helmets be made compulsory;

—That snowmobile manufacturers be advised of safety features which could be incorporated into the vehicles;

—That tests be administered to all snowmobile operators prior to granting licences;

—That all such vehicles should carry a five foot aerial topped by an orange pennant.

—That advertising show the recreational aspects of snowmobiling rather than stunt driving.

Director Of Safety Appointed

TWEED — Mr. Stanley C. Courroyea, has been appointed co-ordinator of safety, effective January 1, 1970.

In this function, Mr. Courroyea will be responsible for developing and co-ordinating safety programs at all A.C.C.L. locations; for maintaining liaison with corporate safety and loss prevention; and for ensuring compliance with all government ordinances which relate to the safety function.

For the past five years, Mr. Courroyea has been supervisor of safety at the Jenkersburg, Ontario plant, prior to which he held various production supervisory positions with Allied Chemicals. He will continue to be located at Amherstburg, Ontario.

Mr. S. Courroyea, formerly of Sulphide, Ontario, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Courroyea, of 427 North Victoria Street, Tweed.

Microwave Leaks Feared

BOSTON (AP) — Dr. Albert Frechette, the state commissioner of public health, says there is a possibility of leakage of energy used in microwave cooking ovens which could lead to "subtle biological effects."

Microwave ovens, used in homes and business establishments, use high-energy fields to cook food by electronic means.

Frechette made the announcement Sunday after a survey which he said showed that 18 of 24 ovens tested in Massachusetts leaked energy above the recognized safety limit of 10 milliwatts a centimetre.

Sharp Announces Relief for Biafra government aid to relief in Nigeria and Biafra.

Rev. Edward Johnston, executive secretary of Canada Relief, told reporters his organization is very encouraged by this "first step."

He said the government contribution will provide $200,000 a month for four months. Canada relief needed $800,000 a month to operate four planes and carry 2,000 tons of supplies a night into Biafra.

Rev. Eoin MacKay, chairman of Interaid, said the organization's request to the government was made Nov. 1 in specific terms. A general request for help had been made to Ottawa more than a year ago.

Mr. Sharp, external affairs minister, said Nigeria is disappointed because the government is not handling directly to Biafran relief.

However, he did not expect Nigeria to make any diplomatic protest. Mr. Sharp had a meeting with Dr. Johnston, Dr. Mackay, Rabbi Gunther Plaut and Hugh McCallum, editor of the Anglican Churchman, all of whom have visited Nigeria and Biafra.

Mr. Sharp said in a statement that careful studies had proved the feasibility of dropping relief supplies into Biafra from Canadian Armed Forces planes.

Detailed tests of such airdrops had been conducted in Canada.

However, the Nigerian government had turned down Canada's proposal for such an operation.

Mr. Sharp said Canada has also taken the lead in attempting to arrange daylight relief flights into Biafra, but the Biafran authorities had rejected this proposal as well.

Mr. Sharp's statement added: "Means must be found to increase substantially the flow of relief supplies. In the absence of such measures, it is clear that, however, it is imperative that existing channels be supported, in order to save lives that these may be in the amount of relief they can move."

The Canadian Labor and NDP had maintained in the Commons the government should support existing channels and bring down payment of other and better means of delivering relief.

The government, however, had rejected this proposal until today.

"The Canadian people and their government have viewed with deep concern the loss of life in years in Nigeria with the most distress and concern," said a joint statement issued at the same time as Mr. Sharp's announcement.

"The continued starvation of the non-combatant population is inevitable in war and is compounded by the narrow margin of subsistence that exists at the best of times in that area."

The statement said that Canada cannot intervene politically or militarily in the conflict "but ... has supplied every possible opportunity to urge the parties to meet and settle the dispute peacefully."

"The suffering of the innocent in Nigeria can only be brought to an end when the conflict ceases, but it can be alleviated by the provision of medical supplies and food supplies to the civilian population on both sides of the fighting lines."

The government says it is channelling aid through the Red Cross because it has been the principal agency engaged in this humanitarian work on both sides" and because it believes strongly in preserving the vitality and effectiveness of the organization.

French Hijacker Forces Plane to Fly to Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (Reuters) — A young Frenchman today hijacked a Trans-World Airlines Boeing 707 to Beirut and riddled its cockpit with rifle fire after touchdown in a virtual carbon copy of a hijacking to Damascus five months ago.

"I did it for Lebanon," said 26-year-old Christian Rene Belon as he surrendered his weapon—a rifle and two pistols —to Lebanese security men who boarded the plane after the passengers had made an emergency evacuation by chute.

Official sources said Belon told interrogators: "I could not tolerate the injustice done to you," an apparent reference to a raid last weekend in which Israel seized 21 Lebanese prisoners in reprisal for the capture of a night watchman by Palestinian Arab commandos.

The hijacker boarded the plane during a stopover at Orly Airport in Paris, where it landed from Baltimore late Thursday night.

The aircraft left the French capital shortly after midnight, but it was not until about 15 minutes before it was scheduled to land in Rome that Capt. Marks radioed news of the hijacking.

He told Rome control tower he was being ordered to Damascus.

Legion Branches to Sponsor Public Speaking Contest

Arrangements for the annual Royal Canadian Legion public speaking contest, to be held locally January 24 and 25, highlighted discussions at the regular meeting of the Col. Fhay Wills Branch 82-service-men Tuesday evening.

The competition sponsored jointly by the Belleville Branch 99 and the 82-servicewomen is open to both public and secondary school students. In turn this will be divided into four categories, according to grades.

First competitors on the Saturday morning will be the younger group from grades one to six, to be followed by the grades seven and eight in the afternoon. High school students will compete on Sunday evening.

Each group is to be judged separately with judges appointed for the different categories. Top winners will receive $10 and the opportunity to speak at higher levels until eliminated through zone, district and provincial finals. Second place winners are to receive $5.

Luncheon and refreshments for the two days will be provided by Branch 527 with Branch 99 contributing the prize money.

At this time branch president Mrs. Ina Rollins thanked the members for gifts and cards she received while a patient in the hospital. A motion was approved to donate $50. to Branch 99 in appreciation for the use of the hall.

A 50/50 draw was won by Mrs. Velma Walker.

Conservative Dressmaker Shows Younger Set Styles

NEW YORK (AP) — "Yes, it is a Davidow, ladies," said the commentator when a model appeared in an untypically Davidow ensemble of slacks, tunic top and long scarf at the dressmaker's fashion show Monday at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The firm, mainly known for its conservative, well - made suits, has put on a new look to lure younger customers. This doesn't mean teenyboppers, but young matrons around their early 30s.

"These last two collections were the first times my wife has been able to wear our clothes," says Steven Davidow, vice-president. "And she's in her 20s."

"But we're not giving up our older business," he adds. "We are trying to maintain our loyal followers."

It's doubtful that the Davidow styling will shock anyone. The older customers should stick and younger, conservative clients may come running for spring. The look was comfortable, elegant and country club posh. It was shown during the New York Couture Business Council Inc.'s fashion week.

Colors were bolder, with rich ice cream pastels and smoke that were woolier and frothier. There were more French fabrics and fewer Scottish wools. Coat and dress combos were strong.

"In the past, our coats had no shape, whatever. They just went over suits," said Davidow. Now they are more shaped, some smartly belted and fitted with interesting buttons.

Auxiliary Member Honored

Mrs. W. W. Shand, a member of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary for 20 years, was presented with a certificate of appreciation for her services, yesterday. She is at present a patient in Belleville General Hospital.

Presenting the certificate were Mrs. B.E. Burley, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary and Mrs. C. A. Campbell, one of the four chairmen of the opportunity shop group. It reads "This volunteer has given 20 years service to the W.H.A. Opportunity Shop," and is signed by the president and the administrator of the hospital, Phillip Rickard.

Mrs. Shand was treasurer of the opportunity shop for most of this time. However, she resigned from this position in the summer of 1969, due to illness. She commented that she has always found her work with the auxiliary to be "interesting and rewarding."

The opportunity shop has been running for 22 years in Belleville. The W.H.A. collects old clothes which are sold at discount prices and the proceeds go to worthwhile causes within the hospital. Over 105 women volunteer their time and services in order to run the shop. There are two lunches on each floor of the hospital and all have been furnished from the revenue of the shop. It is the major source of revenue for the auxiliary.

The annual luncheon of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary will be held on Tuesday, Jan. 20 in Education Hall with an interesting speaker scheduled. A limited number of tickets is available and may be purchased by calling Mrs. E. S. Fairman, 238 Charles Street, at 962-7326.

Congratulations Galore

Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, and Mrs. C. A. Campbell, one of the four chairmen of the Opportunity Shop Group, present a certificate of appreciation to Mrs. W. W. Shand, a member of the W.H.A. for 20 years.

Handbags for '70

Vertical and horizontal Spring '70 handbags are bigger and softer. Left, Mastercraft's black conventional patent bag is edged with gold. Centre, their bright red krinkle patent pouched type, and in the hand at right, a softly gathered satchel with gold hardware trim. Coret's over the shoulder bag in rich black krinkle with strap and buckle effect, and below, their navy blue krinkle oblong design, with gold ornamentation.

Little Bigger Handbags Predicted for Spring

Leather handbags created by Canadian manufacturers for the ILGWU's Spring '70 National Collections are a little bigger, very light and mostly very soft, says the Leather Bureau of Canada.

The new handbags will often be seen slung over the shoulder or designed with convertible handles, frequently sporting belted and buckled trims.

Both daytime casual and dressy bags show great variety in shape and dimension. Taller and narrower vertical bags complement dropping hemlines, but the horizontal look is also important, too. The new shoulder bags go well with long tunics worn over pants, skirt or dress.

Tote bags in all sizes, single or double handled, are more than ever a part of the casual and sportswear scene.

The belted look is strong in all types of bags. Belts go round the middle, up and down front and back, using beautifully designed gold or silver buckles. The big chunky buckle accents sporty bags. More delicate, hardwear trims, predominantly gold, such as corners, edgings, and scroll work designs are seen on dressy bags. These have a look of fine costume jewellery.

The shiny, extremely soft crinkle leathers, as well as the conventional patents that symbolize the wet look, polished calfskin and smooth leathers that have both softness and shine, including reptile prints, share the spotlight this spring. Even the crinkle patents are of major importance.

Handbag colors — white, black, navy blue and bright red have a sparkling new look because of their softness and shine. Bone continues to be popular and the tawny tans, copper or beige shades in deeper browns are also important.

WEDDING

ERWIN — HAMMOND

St. Joseph's Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Beverly Anne Hammond, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Alfred Hammond, Belleville and John David Erwin, son of Mrs. Gertrude Erwin and the late Bernard Erwin. Officiating at the ceremony was Father C. H. Gardey and organist was Phil Kirby.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style street - length gown in off - white brocade with matching long sleeved jacket, a white floral headdress and a corsage of pink 'mums.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Bob Beal, sister of the bride. She wore a pink laminated dress with silver thread, a matching lace coat, black accessories, a floral pink headdress and white 'mums.

Best man was Robert Beal.

For the reception, held at the home of the bride's mother Mrs. Hammond greeted the guests wearing a two - piece blue suit, black accessories and a corsage of yellow 'mums.

The couple left on a wedding trip to points east.

They will reside in Belleville.

Daring Necklines for Tennis Wear

LONDON (Reuters) — Tennis dresses with necklines that plunge were introduced Thursday be designer Teddy Tinling in what seemed to be an attempt to keep spectators' eyes off the game.

As if the daring necklines weren't enough, Tinling, whose dresses are worn by many players on the international tennis circuit, added see - through panels of flesh-colored nylon here and there.

But if bosoms are bare, legs tended to be covered. Tinling pursued his trouser suit theme which made a tentative attempt to invade the conservative Wimbledon tournament last year.

To show it off, she picked lean knits, jerseys and terries plus crochets, meshes and transparencies, all obviously bra-less. And there are opaque versions merely cut lean. Some of the best 'of these are in fine, nearly weightless coats.

The closer-to-the-elements wet looks take the same shapes in shiny vinyls and prints.

Then there's the closer-to-the-past sequence which lets you be Garbo in a wrap dress, Chanel in a cardigan suit and shirt, Carmen Miranda in a bare midriff and platform soles or a Second World War bride in a calf-grazing checked suit and snowy cloche.

Closer-to-each-other covers the hippie looks dripping with fringe as well as all the ethnics: folk-prints, kaftans, patchworks, shawls and Osaka-inspired kimonos, obis, kabuki sleeves and cerebral prints.

In addition to oriental prints, there are geometrics, art nouveau inspirations, Byzantine designs and borders in every possible fibre. Adult colors are mostly glowy, gem shades or ladylike pales.

Ladies' Garment Workers' Union Presents Canadian Fashions

TORONTO (CP) — The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union has perfected a way to present a coherent Canadian fashion image.

It is presenting the National Collection—a selection of garments made in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver—in a show for the fashion press of Canada.

Reporters for this year's show, the 10th, gathered here from Newfoundland to Victoria Tuesday as guests of the union. They started with brunch with Trade Minister Stanley Randall as host. Lunch was sponsored by the Footwear Bureau of Canada, then the writers toured the garment district and were received at city hall. Dinner and the show were set for the Science Centre.

The show's only aim is to promote the union label, a dime-sized bit of tape that proves the garment was made in a union shop.

The selection for the show was done by Joan Sutton who picked 150 outfits from 307 factories. She travelled twice to Vancouver, seven times to Winnipeg, six to Montreal.

Skirt lengths are just as varied as they were in the fall; whatever length you choose, someone's on your side. The same is true of silhouettes; you can be hyper-stylish in everything from a knit as skinny as a singlet to a coat that swings almost full circle.

The show is split into four parts.

The first trend is closer-to-the-body which, Joan explains, means emphasizing fashion's most important accessory: A young, lithe figure.

Rules Guaranteed To Break Up Marriage

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am not quite a writer but considering experiences can be your ingredients then I have put together eight rules which are guaranteed to break up a marriage. I hope you will print them. Here they are:

1. When a son or daughter lets you know they plan to be married, show hostility to the person of his choice. After all, marriage means less love and attention for parents and they have a right to resent it.

2. Expect your married children to spend every Sunday and holiday at your home. Act hurt if they have other plans.

3. If your married children have problems with their mates, encourage them to come home to you. Let them know your home is still theirs, no matter what. Listen attentively to all complaints and poke out additional faults which may have gone unobserved. Remember, a drop of water can wear away a rock.

4. If your married children are having financial problems, run in with the chequebook. If you are having financial problems yourself, borrow if necessary, but let them know they'll never have to do without anything so long as you are around.

5. If a married child has a drinking problem, keep telling him his mate drove him to it. It will make him feel better. Everyone needs someone to blame.

If your married child gets an opportunity for advancement which takes him to another city, tell him family is more important than money and if he leaves, God will punish him for not obeying the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

7. If there are grandchildren, smother them with gifts. If the parents object, tell them to keep out of it. After all, grandchildren are to spoil. Sneak money to the kids secretly, if you have to. They'll love you for it.

8. If your married child has a difference of opinion with his mate, get into the act and fan the flame. Family loyalty is a beautiful thing. Maybe you can turn a minor argument into a major hassle and break up the marriage.

Sign me — STAR WITNESS WHO SAW IT HAPPEN.

DEAR STAR: Thank you for a splendid set of rules guaranteed to break up a marriage. They appear to be foolproof. I recommend your rules for parents who want their children home - - - permanently.

Successful Living

Sometimes Hard to Realize Mother A Person

By DORIS CLARK

I have a mental picture that is cherished. It was created in my mind when I was a young teen-ager. As lady stood at a neighbor's door waiting for an answer to her knock.

She was trimly turned out in a suit and a pretty new hat, and I thought she was the most stylish lady I had ever seen.

Then I saw it was my mother! As home she wore a house dress and an apron; she was just a part of the house. I think it was from then on that I realized my mother was a person — an individual in her own right. What a novel idea!

Maybe today's mothers are less prone to bury personality under a load of responsibility — but I wonder? — Sally Hamilton

Dear Doris: I am 36 and a widow of six months with three school age children. I was a teacher and will have to return to work. I am studying, learning to type, and a substitute teacher this year.

I get so discouraged at the studying and sometimes wonder if I'll have the patience or nerves to return to teaching. The hours attract me and I used to like it.

Is there anywhere I can turn for encouragement? I have so many decisions to make alone. — My Second Career

Dear Career: Half a year is not much time to get your breath. I admire your pluck.

It's the sudden mountain of knowledge to acquire that floors you. Isn't it just keep nibbling away at it, and one of these days you'll be surprised at how much you have under control.

Organize your housework to give your children part of the load. Never feel in the least apologetic to them that they have no father now (which is a mistake) widows make), but rather grow closer to them by letting them see just how much you count on them. Widows have raised fine families.

Have a talk with your supervisor about your teaching problems. He wants you to make the grade as much as you do. Check on the courses that will help you most.

Finish up with the moon 3) wouldn't do to leave our own special satellite out of the landscape.

Dear Doris: I have a program coming up entitled "Nature's Landscape". Was wondering if you could give me any ideas on the subject. — Mind's a Blank

Dear Blank: The sky's the limit, isn't it? Get your librarian to find you a book or two on geology, just to show how Nature's Landscape has changed in the millions of years since the world began.

If you can commandeer a projector, the film 'librarian might also help you to find some well-known scenes as they are today. The Prairies, the Rockies, Niagara Falls, the Arctic, the Grand Canyon — and, of course, the ocean, which never seems to change.

May Teach Preparation Courses in Schools

EDMONTON (CP)—Schools need to extend their roles as consumer teachers, says the Edmonton branch of the Consumers' Association of Canada.

In a letter to the public school board, the association says:

"The school has a most important role to play in consumer education and at present there is very meagre emphasis on this aspect of preparation for living."

The letter said that courses on preparation for family living do not place enough emphasis on the role of money or enough understanding on how to function in today's sophisticated market-place.

Florence Elgaard, education chairman for the branch, said lawyers and social workers claim money mismanagement is the core issue in a majority of broken homes.

A broad general understanding of consumer affairs must precede a student's shift from economic dependence to independence, Mrs. Elgaard said.

"We observe that the 'image of consumer learning has been centred on girls. This is not enough. Both boys and girls need a broad understanding of consumer affairs . . .

"To place less importance on this aspect of learning than we place on training for careers and artistic development is to deny adequate background knowledge of the rights of consumers."

The letter outlined 30 areas as essential to everyone responsible for family money management, including budgeting, credit and credit ratings, tenant-landlord relations, costs of housing and property maintenance, costs of vehicle ownership, investment and real estate, rental versus ownership, and services and legislation for consumers.

Mrs. Craig: "I have the same problem, and if they bring their own toys, they don't seem to stay interested in them."

Ingenious grandparents don't need a "toy box" if they have a "fun box" filled with things grown-ups might think of as junk. Young children will be fascinated with anything from old magazines to discarded costume jewelry or items you can pick up for a small price at garage sales or Salvation Army stores.

Mrs. Marlow: "I keep this big box filled with things the younger children enjoy playing with. Tommy will have a great time taking this old alarm clock apart. I even found an old telephone that will fascinate the 3 year-olds."

Recipe for Refrigerator Doughnuts

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Kindly send me your recipe entitled "Doughnuts that taste as Doughnuts should" released May 10, 1968. I am interested in having this recipe for Refrigerator Doughnuts. — Ann S.

ANSWER: I was flattered. Several readers have asked for reprints.

REFRIGERATOR DOUGHNUTS

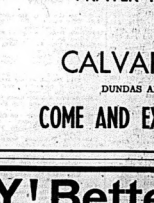
(Reposted from May, 1966)

1 cup sugar
2 eggs
7 tbsps. soft butter (⅛ cup less 1 tbsp.)
2 tbsps. (6 tsps.) baking powder
2 cups sifted all - purpose flour
1 tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. vanilla
1 cup milk

Into beater bowl measure the sugar, eggs and butter and beat until blended and smooth. Sift and measure the flour, add the baking powder, salt and nutmeg to it and sift again. Add to first mixture along with the vanilla and milk and beat until smooth. Scrape down sides of bowl. Cover snugly and refrigerate 4 hrs. or overnight. Cut dough into quarters, scoop out one-quarter with rubber scraper and roll out on generously floured board to ¼" thickness. (Keep remainder of dough in refrigerator.)

Cut out with floured doughnut cutter, transferring doughnuts and cut-outs to board on which you can carry them to the stove. Incidentally, this dough is highly satisfactory to handle. Heat fat or oil to 390 deg. Fahr. (or hot enough to brown cube of bread in 40 seconds). Fat should be at least 1" deep or deeper if you are using a deep-fat fryer. Lift doughnuts on wide spatula and carefully slip into heated fat without crowding. I tried three doughnuts and three hole cut-outs at a time. As soon as they rise to surface and show gold color on bottom turn over. Stand over them and do not overbrown. At once lift from fat with slotted spoon and drain on paper towelling.

Continue with all remaining dough until it is used up, piling leftover scraps up and rolling and cutting them out too. Roll doughnuts in sugar.



I had 48 doughnuts and 48 hole cut-outs.

Over-the-table Scholarships Work Out at Simon Fraser

VANCOUVER (CP) — When Simon Fraser University announced it would join Canada's first over-the-table athletic scholarships, critics pointed word pictures of bulging football bums majoring in basket-weaving.

At best, they said, the new campus in the Vancouver suburb of Burnaby would put the student body's priorities ahead of his mental speed; the playbook would be more important than the textbook.

SFU countered with this message: "At Simon Fraser University, you are a student first and an athlete second."

And athletic director Lorne Davies says the 5,500-student university has lived up to that.

There are, he says, no free cars for swimmers, no free room and board for basketball players, no generous "equipment allowances" for track and field men, no guarantees of cushy summer jobs for football players.

All these things have appeared in the athletic programs of many United States colleges and to a lesser extent still do. There has been some tightening, but U.S. schools still are more generous than SFU.

At SFU, financial aid is almost entirely limited to payment of all or part of tuition fees, up to $448 a year. SFU declines details but says about 70 of the 150 athletes receive this kind of assistance.

"One or two" get more. SFU's athletic budget comes from outside donors who want the money to go to only one person. Other donations, at SFU dollars, are split up and spread around among the athletes.

The money is handled by the university and SFU's student policy is that a student keeps it only if he maintains his athletic—and academic—grades. An academic C average (2.45 per cent) is required.

Coaches work with campus counselors to help athletes draw up and meet academic goals. "Easy work loads are arranged," said one coach-student, "but there is no sloughing off allowed."

In the student-first concept working at the university, which dates back only to 1963.

"Absolutely," says Davies. Of SFU's top three scholars last year, two were athletes: football player Ted Warkentin, a Rhodes Scholar candidate, and track man Jack Taunton.

Said an administration official: "Yes, they are doing well. They don't get an award unless they are good students and they are subject to the same entrance requirements as everyone."

Warkentin, now with British Columbia Lions of the Western Football Conference, had his full tuition paid. "It's not much but I think it means people will go to university who would not otherwise."

He praises the program, as does Denny Veitch, general manager of the Lions. The club helped get the program off the ground, now offers a $900-a-year scholarship, and some off-season jobs.

Said Veitch: "We're extremely pleased with the program. . . . It sounds altruistic as hell, I know, but we are really pleased with the idea that education is vital to the program."

Davies, also SFU's head football coach, adds: "One important thing is that we are not forced to pack a stadium or told to win or else. Pressure is off the coaches and so it is off the students as well."

SFU's football, basketball, swimming and track teams compete locally and nationally but generally against U.S. schools. The reason, says Davies, is geography and travel bills.

The Original Knight SOLUNAR TABLES When To Fish Or Hunt

The schedule of Solunar periods, as printed below, has been taken from Richard Alden Knight's Solunar Tables. Plan your days so that you will be fishing in your territory or hunting in good cover during these times, if you wish to find the best sport that each day has to offer.

The Major periods are shown in boldface type. These begin at the times shown and last for an hour and a half or two hours thereafter. The Minor Periods, shown in regular type, are of somewhat shorter duration.

'Where, Oh Where'

This could be your problem if your son is one of the 240 "tyke" age players in the Belleville Minor Hockey Association: trying to sort out junior from the Wednesday night melee. Memorial Arena ice time is so precious that ice surface is divided to allow three simultaneous games for tyke house league action.

Committee Brief Set

Arena Issue Not on Ice Monday

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Monday, the Quinte Action Centre Committee plans to present Belleville City Council with 13,000 reasons for assuming the responsibility of providing the city with a second arena.

Committee chairman Richard Hurst today unveiled a brief drafted by the Action Centre Committee to be presented at Monday's council meeting "to spotlight the urgent need of additional recreational facilities in the city and to make some recommendations."

But the brief gets far past the "spotlighting stage" in its principal conclusion: "... that the municipality must now step in to complete the project."

The Quinte Action Centre case rests largely on the 13 000 supporters — as walkers or sponsors — of the September-October Walkathon project to launch a fund drive for a second covered ice surface for the city.

To date, the Action Centre Committee boasts a $30,000 bank account, representing about 80 per cent of the total amount pledged in the 30-mile round - the - bay hike.

Regarding the walkathon success as their plebiscite, the Quinte Action Centre committee will, in effect, be asking council to budget for the remaining funds needed to erect a community-type arena. It would house an 85' x 200' ice surface, be capable of seating about 400, and bear a price tag "in the neighborhood of $200,000."

An Intelligencer poll of the major share-holders of the Memorial Arena's 75 hours of weekly ice time indicated that Monday's Action Centre Committee brief will, indeed, be speaking for them.

Foremost in the list of underprivileged ice users is Belleville's Minor Hockey Association, which is trying to accommodate 53 teams, 1,316 boys in all, in 30 hours of weekly ice time.

Nowhere is the problem more acute than at minor hockey's lowest rung, the tyke division.

Tyke convener Bill O'Sullivan oversees Wednesday night "tyke" sessions that transform the Memorial Arena surface into a form of organized confusion, with two-by-fours dividing the ice surface to permit three simultaneous games.

"We're cramming 96 games into a 22-hour season," says O'Sullivan. "We've got 240 boys in tyke right now, but if the ice situation gets any worse, we'll have to either drop tyke or one of the higher age groups. And I'm afraid it would be tyke that would go."

It's not only the seven and eight - year - olds who have ice gripes.

The Quinte and Gas House Leagues each get a two - hour Monday allotment, which sees one of the eight city men's hockey teams starting to play after 11 o'clock that night.

"Those late games hurt everybody concerned," says Quinte League president Al Kelleher. "We don't get anybody through the turnstiles at that time on a weeknight and the players have to dig into their own pockets to pay for ice time and officials."

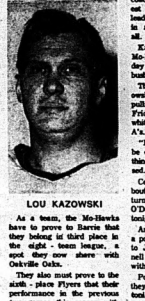
"Besides, who likes to play hockey until midnight and get up for work the next morning."

This problem is the opposite end of the scale from that experienced by the city's novice all - star team, for example, who must be at the arena for 6 a.m. practice session.

Belleville ice shortage has forced the city's only women's hockey team to drive 12 miles to Stirling for most of their "home" games. "We've been given three hours of ice time in Belleville this winter," says Jerri Rushlow, an executive member of the Quinte Women's Hockey League entry that has Canadian and Ontario tournament titles to its credit.

"There were two 'Belleville women's teams last year, but the Legion team — mostly younger girls — couldn't drive all over the country to play hockey in the middle of a school week. That's why they dropped out."

The Quinte Figure Skating Club is also going around in circles trying to give reasonable instruction to 170 members in 10½ hours a week.



"We have as many as 80 juniors on the ice at once some nights," says club chairman Al Reid.

"Our senior and junior pros will have small groups of them off to one side, instructing one special manoeuvre, or something.

"The rest just try to keep out of the road!"

Mo-Hawks Out to Make Believers of Barrie

Most of the Belleville Mo-Hawks have something to prove tonight when Barrie Flyers bid town for a 9 o'clock Memorial Arena OHA Senior A game.

LOU KAZOWSKI

As a team, the Mo-Hawks have to prove to Barrie that they belong at third place in the eight - team league, a spot they now share with Oshawa Oaks.

They also must prove to the sixth - place Flyers that their performance in the previous two games this season with Barrie were no flukes.

The Mo-Hawks drubbed the Flyers 6-2 in Belleville and left Barrie with a 5-0 stalemate to their credit earlier in the schedule now nearing the three - quarter pole.

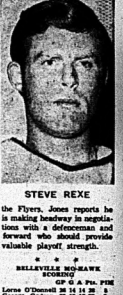
A half dozen Mo-Hawks will also have to beat their slanting legs tonight. They are members of the club's infirmary platoon that has swollen out of all proportion in the past week.

This morning, playing - coach Davey Jones said last night's workout had defence leader Lou Kazowski may put in appearance tonight, after all.

Kazowski and five other Mo-Hawks missed last Sunday night's 10-3 Kingston bushwacking.

The point - productive Kazowski was sidelined after pulling a back muscle in last Friday night's 9-0 Mo-Hawk white-washing of Woodstock A's.

"If Lou plays, it may only be on power play, or something like that," Jones stressed.



Centre George Gedson's flu bout is over and he should return between linemates Lorne O'Donnell and Al Ferguson, tonight.

And rookie Ray Johnston is a possible starter at left wing to Jones and Wayne McConnell after missing two games with a knee injury.

Possibly no-one feels that they have more to prove tonight than goalie Steve Rexe, the man in the middle of last Sunday's 10-goal massacre in Kingston.

Although Rexe couldn't be faulted for the lop-sided defeat, he was not pleased to see his goals-against average reboot 28 points in one game a few days after it was announced the NHL's Minnesota North Stars were interested in his goaltending services.

Meanwhile, with 13 games remaining in Mo-Hawk schedule after tonight's game with

Lancers Out-hooped for First Time

Despite losing their first game of the season Tuesday, the Loyalist Lancers remained tied for first place in their five team college league.

Peterborough Teachers' College defeated them 76-65 to grab a share of first place, but Loyalist still retains a game in hand.

Leading the Lancer scorers was Paul Goodfellow with 25 points. Richard Webster hit for 18 and Dale Lingard and Bill McKay 9 apiece.

Next Loyalist game is Tuesday, January 13 at Centennial Secondary School when they host Sir Sanford Fleming Forestry College in an 8 p.m. game.

Tweed Curlers Fill House

Members of the Land O'Lakes Curling Club of Tweed are planning an "Open House" designed to show the public their new curling rink on Saturday evening, January 10, from 8 to 10 p.m. with refreshments available.

The rink has its own ice making equipment and operates independently from the Community Centre.

Membership in the Club is not limited to Tweed, but is open to surrounding communities as well.

Ski Report

Bata Ski Club will be open Saturday and Sunday from 10.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. The intermediate slope has been packed base and one inch fresh snow. Ski conditions are good.

Weekend Chance for Hamburgers

Snowmobile Racers Would Swap Steak for Chuck Anytime

The Ireland - Weese racing team would like to change their training diet from steak to hamburg.

"When we started racing Bob's snowmobiles this year we made an agreement," says Bill Ireland. "Steak when we lose, and hamburg when we win."

And with only half a dozen races between them as members of the second - year Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation, Bob Weese and Bill Ireland are not optimistic about ground check after this weekend's $15,000 Kawartha Cup event in Peterborough.

"We're racing against factory - sponsored teams," reminds Weese, who operates a Yamaha dealership on the Carrying Place road.

"That's right," added Ireland, "Ski-doo, for example, are paying motorcycle champ Yvon Duhamel $30,000 for driving their machines in competition this year."

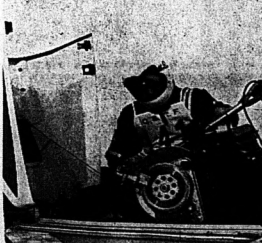
Ireland has had some racing experience, himself, other than on snowy courses. Before abandoning the sport last summer, he held hydroplane trophies from meets all over the province.

In Peterborough it is expected that 20,000 people will jam the Landsdowne St. Exhibition Grounds to watch the "Indianapolis 500" of snowmobile racing. Billed as the Canadian Championships, the meet will see over 400 drivers compete for the $15,000 prize money that makes it the richest event of its kind in the world. Competition begins at 10 o'clock Saturday morning and ends Sunday afternoon. Sunday morning the powerhouse machines will try for a snowmobile speed record at the Peterborough airport.

Weese and Ireland are entered in D stock competition, with their Japanese-built Yamahas. Four different from the smaller units driven by most members of the snowjet set, these motorized toboggans have hit speeds of close to 80 mph, only about 11 mph under the recognized world mark. "Actually, in competition," states Ireland, "the machines only hit about 50 mph, although it appears to be much faster to the spectators."

Drivers who fail to reduce speed on the banked corners of the half-mile oval could find themselves candidates for the snowmobile jumping record of 103 feet.

To aid in cornering, the drivers employ sharpened metal "skates" attached to the runners. Weese and Ireland have added a touch of their own — a steel stabilizer on the inside left front ski for better machine control.



Popularity of snowmobiling has escalated to unbelievable proportions in the last few years, Ireland recalls, "When I began the sport around 1960, you could travel for miles without seeing another track; now no matter where you go, the place is full of them." Weese bears this out. His sales at Prince Edward Yamaha have already tripled over last year.

Facing the problems of small independent operators in all forms of racing, the men are more concerned with testing the capabilities of their machines and adding to their experience as drivers. According to Weese, "We'd consider it a major accomplishment to make the finals." With over 50 machines in their class, and only eight to make the finals, such a feat would indeed be a coup.

Ski-power

That's what attracts Bill Ireland and Bob Weese, who will represent the Quinte area in this weekend's $15,000 Kawartha Lakes event on the 1970 Ontario Snowmobile Racing Federation calendar.

'Don't Spare the Horses'

Bundled for brisk practice session, snowmobile racers Bill Ireland and Bob Weese check out one of the Yamaha machines they will enter in this weekend's Kawartha Lakes competition in Peterborough. More than 400 drivers are expected to vie for $15,000 in prize money in the event billed as the Canadian snowmobile racing championships.

MP Recalls Macs as Example of Our Nominal Amateurism

OTTAWA (CP) — Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) has called for a parliamentary investigation of Canadian hockey "from the NHL down to peewee."

Mr. Rose said in a statement Thursday that a parliamentary committee should make a thorough investigation into both amateur and professional hockey.

"Citizens of all political persuasions applaud the stand taken by Canada against the pro-am hypocrisy in the International Hockey Tournament.

"But before we intoxicate ourselves by inhaling the heady air of self-righteousness, perhaps we might consider peeking under our national rug and perhaps see what we can't find the field residue of a good deal of hypocrisy."

Mr. Rose said that although hockey teams operate nominally under the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, Allan Cup hockey players have been receiving pay for play, at least for a quarter of a century, and that makes them professionals.

"A few years ago the Allan Cup Belleville team was an amateur they almost broke that city's treasury."

The plain facts are, said Mr. Rose, that the CAHA leadership "sold out to the NHL years ago and just about all active hockey players over 18 are professional that is, they receive money or other rewards for playing."

"I have no objection to an individual earning money doing things in which he excels, but according to historical definitions you can't be partially pro any more than you can be a little bit pregnant."

Mr. Rose said some of the things a parliamentary committee investigating hockey might inquire about are:

—Whether the NHL, which makes its home in Canada, is a "massive business cartel, and its effect on hockey develop ment in Canada."

—The implications for communities and the performance of privately-owned major league franchises.

—The civil rights of players held in "virtual bondage" by standard league player contracts.

Beliveau Returns

Absence Makes Goals Come Quicker for Some

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two National Hockey League players who have missed a lot of time because of injuries proved Thursday night that the inactivity didn't slow them down a bit.

Centre Jean Beliveau, sidelined a month because of a cracked bone in the left ankle, returned to action with a goal and an assist to lead Montreal Canadiens to a 3-1 victory over Pittsburgh Penguins.

Gary Dornhoefer, who had missed eight of Philadelphia's last nine games with an injury, scored three goals for the Flyers in their 4-1 win over Los Angeles Kings in the only other NHL game played.

It was the first three-goal performance for Dornhoefer since he entered the NHL in the 1963-64 season with Boston Bruins and the goals gave him nine for the season, one more than he scored in 61 games last year.

Beliveau's goal at 16:43 of the second period tied the score for the Canadiens after Dean Prentice, with his 13th goal of the season, had given the Penguins a 1-0 lead in the first period.

Prentice scored on a pass from defenceman Bryan Watson, firing a high shot into the wide side of the net to beat goalie Rogatien Vachon.

Beliveau tied the game at 11:43 of the second period, scoring on Yvan Cournoyer's pass.

JEAN BELIVEAU

and in the third period Bobby Rousseau and Jacques Lemaire scored power-play goals. Beliveau and Cournoyer assisted on Lemaire's 22nd goal of the season.

The win moved the Canadiens within one point of second-place Boston and five of first-place New York Rangers in the Eastern Division.

Dornhoefer's three goals and one by Andre Lacroix gave the Flyers a 4-0 lead after two periods before Bill White of Los Angeles robbed Bernie Parent of his shutout with a screened shot early in the third period.

Philadelphia's win moved the Flyers into a tie with Minnesota North Stars for second place in the Western Division.

No games are scheduled tonight but the league gets back into action Saturday night with 10 teams scheduled to play. A highlight of the weekend action will be the game between the Canadiens and Rangers at Montreal Sunday afternoon. The Canadiens, with Beliveau now back in the lineup, will seek to close the gap on the first-place Rangers.

Another point of interest will be the clash between the Leafs and the Bruins at Toronto. The game will be the first between the two teams since Leafs traded left winger Wayne Carleton for centre Jim Harrison.

In 13 games since, Harrison has scored six goals for Leafs and assisted on four more while Carleton, who now plays with Phil Esposito and Ken Hodge, has three goals and six assists.

The Bruins will be without centre Derek Sanderson, lost to the club indefinitely because of an injury.

A club spokesman said Thursday tests have disclosed he has a painful hip injury accompanied by muscle spasms. Rookie Jim Lorentz will replace Sanderson on a line with Wayne Cashman and Eddie Westfall.

After 10 Seasons Kapp Still Ranks As NFL Rookie

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — After 10 professional football seasons, they still called Joe Kapp a rookie quarterback.

Deacon Jones of Los Angeles Rams tagged the Minnesota Vikings quarterback with that line in 1968 after the Rams trounced the Vikings 31-3.

But Kapp finally made it to the top with a flourish in 1969 as he led the Vikings to the National Football League championship and into Sunday's Super Bowl against the Kansas City Chiefs, the American Football League champions.

Now, Kapp again is almost the forgotten man. Chief's quarterback Len Dawson is getting most of the attention on the heels of an NBC report that Dawson will be questioned in connection with recent gambling arrests.

Kapp, however, still causes commotion, especially when reporters swarm around him to ask about flatter passes and reckless running.

"I don't think my passes flutter," Kapp says. "I think I throw pretty well.

"I can sip them. And I'm not a scrambler. I'm a passer first. A scrambler goes back with the run in the back of his head.

"I only run when I have to. I only called my number about 10 times this season, and many of those were to run out the clock or when I sneaked. The others were on broken plays or when the receivers were covered."

"You can't be cautious about running, either. Every team has two or three quarterbacks. When you're on the field you have to use every tool and skill by you have."

Kapp ran for the winning touchdown in a 23-20 Western Conference playoff victory over Los Angeles after setting it up with a scramble.

In a 27-7 NFL title victory over Cleveland Browns, the 31-year-old Kapp ran into the running back he was trying to hand off to, but kept the ball and bulled his way seven yards into the end zone.

"I have seen some very beautiful quarterbacks," said Kapp, who played eight seasons in the Canadian Football League with Calgary Stampeders and British Columbia Lions before joining Minnesota in 1967.

"I guess I'm not as graceful but everybody has to do the job anyway he can."

Kapp refuses to take credit for Minnesota's 12-2 record in the regular season and its advance into the Super Bowl.

"A major reason for the Vikings' success is team spirit," said Kapp. "In pro football, you have to use all 40 people and I can't name a guy who doesn't contribute. I feel lucky I'm able to play."

Blues Turn On Power

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Blues, ranked next-to-last among National Hockey League teams in power plays last winter, are out front this year by converting 38 of 152 opportunities while the other team was shorthanded.

That total equals the entire 1968-69 St. Louis production, and general manager-coach Scotty Bowman thinks the total might be higher if it weren't for an inability to score Red Berenson. .

Berenson suffered a pulled ankle ligament Dec. 23 against Minnesota North Stars and has missed five games. He isn't expected back for at least another two weeks.

Before he was sidelined, Berenson owned five goals off the Blues' power-play formation, leading third on the team behind left wing Al McDonald's nine and centre Phil Goyette's seven.

Disdaining convention, Bowman has used an all-offensive lineup for thrusts against opponents with players off the ice with penalties.

During those intervals Goyette, McDonald and winger Larry Keenan form the front line of assault as Berenson and centre Frank St. Marseille move in to replace defensemen.

"It's a little bit of a gamble," Bowman concedes, "but we've scored.

"I try to stick with the same five players; that's probably as important as anything. We went through nearly everybody last year looking for the right combination and never did seem to develop."

The impetus added by the power play is reflected in NHL statistics listing Goyette, St. Marseille and McDonald among the league's top seven scorers and Berenson not far behind.

Another indication that Bowman's innovation has worked is seen in team scoring. St. Louis ranks fourth after finishing eighth in the department last season.

Bowman says the Blues, twice Stanley Cup finalists, are a better team than last year but adds: "I don't know how much.

"We've been together a year more, and we haven't made a lot of changes except defensively. When you're winning, you don't have to break up anything. We only made a couple of trades."

After Two Natives

Cahill To Woo All-American

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts head coach Leo Cahill will be in the United States at least until Jan. 15, seeking new talent for the 1970 edition of his Canadian Football League club.

Cahill has his sights set on signing two Canadian-born athletes who attended U.S. colleges. They are Barrie, Ont., native Jim Corrigall, the all-American defensive linebacker at Kent State University, Ohio, and fullback Tony More from the University of Dayton, Ohio, a Toronto native.

Cahill, along with assistant coaches Gord Ackerman and Frank Johnston, will attend the National Collegiate Athletic Association coaches convention at Washington, D.C., before heading for Mobile, Ala., and next Saturday's Senior Bowl game.

"I haven't signed a new Argo for 1970," Cahill said. "This time last year, we were in more of a frenzy. We felt we had to go out and get a running back and a flanker with speed. We got Dickie Moore, then later we traded for Dave Ralmey. We also got Jim Thorpe as our flanker. This year we can stress quality in our recruiting."

The head coach is looking for strong talent to press some of his veterans in training camp, including a quarterback to challenge Tom Wilkinson.

The head coach still thinks Wilkinson will develop into an outstanding quarterback.

"I thought he could win us the Grey Cup last year with Symons and Ralmey," Cahill said, "and we weren't doing badly until Ralmey went out. Wilkinson made a great contribution to Argos for his first full year in Canadian football."

The Toronto boss of field leader thinks the available quarterback talent from U.S. colleges for 1970 is thin. "It's been a poor year for senior quarterbacks," he said. "Even the U.S. teams won't get much out of the draft."

Behind The Glass

Over the weekend the male members of the Quinte Curling Club will let their hair down and enjoy the Sportsman's bonspiel, one of the special events staged by the club during the year. This is purely a man's party and the distaff side of the club are barred for a couple of days.

The program starts on Friday afternoon around 4 when the first draw is started and two more draws will be held on Friday with three on Saturday. There are 96 curlers entered and the prize will be the Steve Flintoft trophy and accompanying prizes. The committee composed of Pat McCorquodale, Dick Beer, Douglas Ashley, Bruce Parsons, Dr. Bill Beattie, Jim Loynes, Robert Lanning, Ken Monson and Bob Smith have worked for weeks to prepare for this event and there will be a number of gimmicks, which have not been seen before.

Food will be in abundance and three 25-pound turkeys are ready for the oven and the women of the club are cooking them along with making some salads and other fine culinary art. The main dinner will be served on Saturday but on Friday night hamburgers, hot dogs and other goodies will be prepared for the hungry mob.

No mention has been made of the prizes but there are many, but rice for three days to raise money toward sending the band to Japan for Expo 70. They raised $500, from friends' pledges for each rice meal, of the $27,000 they estimate they need for the trip.

Accident Toll Sharply Pared By British Breathalyzer Law

HAMILTON (CP) — The British law requiring motorists suspected of drinking to submit to blood and urine analysis has been the greatest step ever taken to save lives, the undersecretary of the British Medical Association said Thursday.

Dr. John J. Harvard told an Ontario department of transport road safety workshop that since the law was passed by1967 there has been "a massive reduction" in serious injuries and deaths on Britain's highways.

Dr. Harvard said the Road Safety Act caused a sudden drop in the number of accidents.

Under the Act, a person found to have a blood alcohol level of .08 per cent—the same level adopted in the Canadian law—is convicted.

"First-year fatalities dropped 17 per cent from 1966," he said.

"But more important was the reduction of fatalities at the times when most drinking drivers were on the road—after the liquor outlets closed."

Most significant was a 42-per-cent decrease in fatal accidents in the early hours of Saturday and Sunday.

He added that at the same time, liquor sales did not decrease: In the first year beer sales were up two per cent, liquor sales climbed four per cent and wine sales increased by 11.5 per cent.

Canada's breath test law was patterned by a lawyer who said part of the new legislation "leaves a serious gap in the protection of the citizen."

Peter McWilliams, a former Crown attorney who now practises law in Oakville, told the workshop a blood test would be more reliable than a breath test.

Mr. McWilliams said a clause in the Canadian law provides that a motorist who has taken a breath test must be given a sample of his breath for independent analysis.

However this clause has not come into effect due to a lack of approved containers.

He added that there was no provision made to let police deal with a drunken driver who causes an accident and winds up in hospital.

"He is in a sanctuary and the accident will probably not cooperate because they are more concerned about the patient's health" than with the application of the breath test law, he said.

Ontario's Hospital Costs $100 Million Above Revenue

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government must decide before February whether to increase premiums for hospital insurance or to increase payments from tax revenues to cover a $100,000,000 increase in expenditures of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

The cost of active-treatment beds in provincially-supported hospitals is expected to rise 8% per cent in 1970, bringing OHSC's total expenditures from $675,000,000 in 1969 to about $775,000,000.

If the cost-trend continues, said OHSC chairman S.W. Martin in an interview Wednesday, expenditures will reach $1,000,000,000 by the end of 1971.

A decision on increasing premiums for Ontario's hospital insurance plan can only be made by cabinet before a budget is presented in February.

Health Minister Tom Wells was not available Thursday for comment.

The last increase in OHSC premiums was in July, 1969, when they rose to $5 a month for a single person and $11 for a family.

The commission attempts to produce one-third of its revenue from premiums. In 1969 they accounted for $275,000,000 of the $675,000,000 required, with the rest coming from general provincial revenues.

Mr. Martin said the price of labor is the "most significant factor" in the spiralling costs.

Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Breast-feeding? If you're counting votes from your readers, please put me in the column "in favor of."

Mrs. S., whose letter you mentioned in a recent column on breastfeeding, is definitely not way off when she writes that she believes that nursing or breastfeeding one's baby leads to greater emotional security for the youngster.

I have two children, a boy and girl, whom I nursed for one year. I feel that I created a strong and healthy emotional foundation. Their physical and emotional health since they have grown has been par excellence.

Every medical text book stresses the importance and value of breastfeeding. They say it seems to give the infant greater immunity to disease in infancy and in early childhood.

My daughter - in - law, a doctor, nursed her infant daughter while on a world tour and was absolutely delighted with the results. There was no feeding problem (formulas, sterilizing, etc.) as nutrition went direct from manufacturer" to "consumer." The baby maintained its excellent health throughout the entire tour and continued to do so on the return to the States.

Speaking to me, Dr. Steincrohn, that doctors do not emphasize the importance of breastfeeding enough—holding the potential mother. They should stress the mother's responsibilities in not depriving their baby of its birthright. Also, that mothers benefit emotionally and physically. I can substantiate that nursing does maintain beauty of breast and body — contrary to what so many women believe. — Mrs. R.

Comment: Any other votes — pro or con?

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My grandson is 17 years old and has ears which stick out like Mickey Mouse's. He is a tall, lanky six-footer, and his ears make him look pathetic. His mother doesn't want him to go through the pain of an operation. What to do? — Mrs. C.

Comment: This is almost like saying, "I told you so." But the time for operation was many years ago when your grandson was still in the lower grades. Before he had to bear the humiliation he must have received from his playmates.

And now in his upper teens he is probably the butt of many jokes among his peers. If he was my grandson (and still had such protruding ears) he would be on the way to a well-constructed plastic surgeon tomorrow.

In a recent column there was a misprint "For Mrs. U." instead of "For Mr. U." Make a suggestion to Mrs. U. I said, in part: "My first hunch might be some trouble in the prostate."

I received this short note from a Doctor of Philosophy, who leas: "When did women start having prostate trouble? Ha, some doctor." — R. B., Ph. D.

It reminded me of similar preoccupation by an eighth grader who caught a misprint in one of my columns a few years ago. Similarly, the subject was the prostate gland. But it had been misprinted "prostrate." This youngster's reaction was quite different from that of our doctor of Philosophy.

He was kind enough to write, "But I'm sure there must have been a printing mistake. You certainly must know how to spell prostate." (Any moral to be drawn? None. Except forgiveness for any mistakes in the past or future.)

Mother Endorses Breast-feeding

Strictly Personal

World Like Wild West

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The 20th Century world, with all its magnificent technology, is very much like a small Western town in the early days of our nation, before sheriffs and judges and courts turned the town into a genuine "community."

Everybody arms himself for what he calls "self-defence"; but the line between "defence" and "aggression" is a thin one, and everybody has the authority to decide which is truly which.

While our scientific and technical achievements stagger the imagination, our civil and political arrangements have not progressed an inch beyond the frontier mentality. There is no common law, no common prosecution, no peaceable means for adjudicating disputes.

Each nation is its own law, its own sheriff, its own judge. Each has its own arsenal of weapons hidden away, and — and four months of this hostility — each feels it must maintain an "arms superiority" over the others.

The Western towns could not long exist in this fashion, for only the most thoroughly armed as long as the law was in private hands. And the country did not grow and prosper until all assented to a common law with enforceable powers.

World law today is in private hands — which means that there is no law, and therefore there is no order. There is only anarchy masquerading as "national security." But there is no sovereignty, either, for nuclear weapons make "defence" meaningless and "victory" for any side impossible.

These are the plain facts of the case. They have always been the facts of the case, because all that can ever exist between independent sovereignties is an uneasy truce, never a genuine "peace." But the big difference today is that no nation retains any longer the power to defend itself — it can only retaliate in kind.

War used to be called an "extension of politics," and with some reason. Now, war has become obsolete because, pushed to the ultimate, it can merely end in mutual self-destruction. Atomic energy has given us an awful power that we have lost the power to use it, as a means of getting our own way by threats or by violence.

The Western town grew too big for anarchy, and the modern world has grown too small for it. We are all locked into the same little cabin, and any shot through the ceiling can depressurize the craft, destroying the destroyer along with his victim. Not to recognize this fundamental truth of our time is to betray the act of creation.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 10

Your birthday today: Now begins a pioneering year, improvement in your personal development and career prospects. You adjust to meet changing conditions and find a simpler more effective way of doing almost everything. Emotional ties strengthen, become more important. Much of what happens at this time of your life has to be put away at the last minute with very short preparation.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Everybody has his own curious way of measuring things today, and words do not always add satisfactory communion. Don't be surprised if some of your own group have developed closer contacts elsewhere this weekend.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Decisions seem to make themselves. Possibly there is no choice left, as the decision has been inconclusively settled a long way back. Make the best of a rather good situation.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): It's time you made a clean sweep: get rid of old prescription items, leftover medications.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Something of your own comes back to you now. More good luck than you have had in months on top. Get the most out of a rather long day; your home and home life benefit most.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): You are apt to be misunderstood and to misunderstand others or petulance. Don't listen to gossip. It is much better to keep very busy with hobbies and pastimes.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Family arrangements need changes. Much talk develops before everybody is clear about what the situation will be. Cheerful co-operation is the keynote for the weekend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Young people around you make life somewhat difficult temporarily. You have little luck concealing anything, so perhaps it is better to have nothing to hide. The evening is more interesting and easier on everybody.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Take the time to figure out what you want to do most and the sequence in which it must be done. Then do it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Explore social and business connections nearby. More than one bargain it to be had. A positive attitude rallies your friends, reflects credit on you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Make use of every moment you can find to put your story into the right ears, but avoid gossip-mongering. The evening is more successful. Find light entertainment or a good party.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You probably have your suggestions put together now; present them seriously, meet any resistance with tact. Your already settled work and travel plans should be kept as is.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You now see the value of something you've taken for granted for a long time. Travel should be short and restricted to essential needs. Lend the way is family matters. Speak where you are sure of yourself.

Kopechne Inquest Ends; Opinion on Rescue Chances Barred

EDGARTOWN, Mass. (AP) — Judge James Boyle refused to allow testimony that Mary Jo Kopechne might have been saved if Senator Edward M. Kennedy had summoned help sooner, it has been learned.

Skidilver John Farrar, who had expressed that opinion publicly, was permitted to testify only about his role in recovering Miss Kopechne's body from Kennedy's submerged car on Chappaquiddick Island last July 19.

The information came from a courtroom source at the secret Kopechne inquest which ended Thursday after 24 days of testimony.

"The law," the source said, "is interested only in facts — not conjecture, theory, or casual opinion. That's the way this inquest was conducted, right down the line."

Kennedy and his legal team had considered Farrar's testimony the crucial point of the inquest, which sought to determine whether the 28-year-old Washington secretary's death called for criminal proceedings.

Judge Boyle will give his opinion on that in a report to the Superior Court along with the transcript of the inquest. Only when all chance of criminal prosecution has passed can the report be made public, the Massachusetts Supreme Court has ruled.

Kennedy had said privately he was distressed by continuing speculation, largely based on Farrar's testimony, that during his nine-hour lag in reporting the accident was responsible for Miss Kopechne's death.

After, Boyle has filed his report, District Attorney Edmund S. Dinis must decide whether to prosecute Kennedy or anyone else involved in the case for failing it to a grand jury for indictment. Guarded hints from Dinis and his chief indicate they will follow Boyle's recommendation on that, although he is technically free to go to a grand jury any time.

Dinis appeared outside the old Dukes County courthouse shortly before 2 p.m. Thursday to announce that testimony had ended. It was closed not by the testimony of the five young women who, with Miss Kopechne, Kennedy, and five Kennedy male friends, had attended a Chappaquiddick Island cookout last July 18.

Although Boyle said Thursday he would study the inquest record and write his report "without undue delay," even the Kennedy lawyers who are hoping for early release of the testimony estimate it will be a matter of weeks and perhaps a month or two.

Majority Government Proves Bore to Many MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — It would be difficult to document officially, but there seem to be far more discontented MPs around nowadays than anytime in the last 10 years.

A variety of reasons are offered, but the major one appears to be majority government. "Majority government," says one Conservative MP, "is a bore."

Obviously no MP is going to allow himself to be quoted to his constituents as saying he is bored with his job, or that he is thinking of packing it up at the next general election. But privately a high percentage of the members say they are unhappy with the lack of action around Parliament Hill.

For six years prior to 1963 there were minority governments, when a potential change in government was only one vote away. If only a handful of MPs changed their views on a piece of legislation, a government could fall. What members of third parties thought of a particular bill was of national importance because a government's life could depend on it.

It's not like that now. With a current majority of 63 seats, the government now doesn't need voting help from any opposition group. And even if some Liberal MPs decide to oppose legislation — they more frequently abstain from voting—there is no panic.

There have been some recent cases of MPs not leaving their offices to vote, an unheard of event during the hectic days of minority government.

And there are other reasons for the apparent unrest besides majority government. A number of Liberal back-benchers are known to be unhappy with their role in government policy formation, despite Prime Minister Trudeau's early pledge to give back-benchers "a greater feeling of participation."

While the party caucus does have a potentially wide scope to discuss forthcoming legislation, some MPs complain the system is loosely-knit structured with committees to permit full participation by all members. And some others have said that the increased role of back-benchers has tended to be offset to a large degree by a heavier reliance on task forces and special study groups within Mr. Trudeau's vastly enlarged office.

Then there are the parliamentary rules changes which have shifted some of the action from the Commons to a variety of committees, many of them largely ignored by the public.

"It doesn't matter what you say in a committee," says one MP, "it never has the impact of a Commons speech."

Members who fondly remember the sledge-hammer confrontations between former prime ministers Lester Pearson and John Diefenbaker, and the riotous daily question periods with the sharpened knives, argue that Parliament will never be the same again.

Trudeau's Trips Costly

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says four private and political trips made by Prime Minister Trudeau in government aircraft since last April cost the taxpayers at least $18,000, and perhaps more than $20,000.

Although Mr. Trudeau is not the first prime minister to make such use of government aircraft, "he has done it more frequently than his predecessors, and in a forthright way which raises some old questions about the privileges and perquisites of the office," the newspaper says.

It lists the four trips involved as a December vacation flight to British Honduras; a November flight to Vancouver, B.C., to attend a Liberal Party convention; a weekend holiday in New York earlier in November; and a flight to Calgary last April for a ski holiday in the Rockies.

The newspaper says the trips "could be termed substantially unofficial in nature, and there may have been others."

It says it is impossible to estimate the precise cost of the flights, made in the government's two $1,500,000 Lockheed JetStars.

Columnist Not Charged

Bruce West Tells Probe He Was Not Impaired

TORONTO (CP) — Bruce West, Toronto Globe and Mail columnist, told a hearing Thursday he was not charged with impaired driving after he was arrested Feb. 12, 1961, because he was not impaired.

He was testifying at a Metropolitan Toronto Police Commission hearing into allegations that senior officers interfered with impaired driving charges against prominent persons.

Mr. West said that Sgt. Albert Russell and Deputy Police Chief John Murray agreed he was not impaired, contrary to the opinion of the arresting officer, Constable Ian Samuel, described by Mr. West as a man with a brusque, arrogant approach that shocked him.

Mr. West testified he had "three or four" drinks of scotch and water at a Conservative party night of his arrest and was on his way home when he struck three flares set up by police at an accident scene.

Constable Samuel arrested him and took him to a police station. Mr. West said he had phoned an editor at the desk of the Globe and Mail to say he was in custody, that he was not impaired but that he might need a lawyer.

Shortly after he was called to the telephone by Sgt. Russell and was surprised to learn that Deputy Chief Murray was on the line.

"I spoke to Deputy Murray and told him I was not impaired and explained my situation. We had considerable conversation and he decided from it I was not.

"A short time later the sergeant came to me and said I was going home. Two detectives were going my way and they offered to give me a lift. I took it."

Reuben Rodney, counsel for Constable Samuel, asked: "Don't you really believe there was some connection between your phone call to your paper and Deputy Murray's call to the station?"

"I don't know how he came to call the station," Mr. West said.

Austin Cooper, counsel for the commission, asked if Mr. West believed "Deputy Murray made the call because he thought something you might write in the press in the future might assist the police?"

"I would be immodest to think that anything I wrote would seriously affect the affairs of the police," Mr. West replied.

Constable Samuels said he was taken aside by Sgt. Russell "and he gave me a pep talk that I shouldn't resist things like this. . . . So I understood there was to be no action against West and this was confirmed when I spoke to Deputy Murray the next day.

"He put his arm on my shoulder and said 'There are certain things that have to be done on this job, whether we like it or not. One day we may need a favorable press.' Those were perhaps not his exact words, but that's what he said."

Passengers Wooed with Food

WASHINGTON (AP) — Major U.S. airlines, obviously believing the way to a traveller's billfold is through his stomach, are locked in a struggle to outdo each other in offering new and unusual dining fare on their flights.

Advertising which once tried to lure customers by boasting of the latest of movies, now emphasizes classy new menus for air passengers.

There are such things as champagne breakfasts, lobster-steak dinners, regional menus, exotic hors d'oeuvres, and flying chefs.

Champagne breakfasts and new "double entree" flights serving both lobster and steak dinners are part of the National Airline's $10,500,000 promotion launched last fall.

American Airlines started its Americana regional food service on transcontinental flights last February. The airline invested $9,000,000 in advanced ovens and galleys. Menus in first class feature five separate courses "including salads tossed by your seat, prime roast beef carved from a cart before your eyes," wines, champagne, and choice of drinks.

United Air Lines introduced a "chef's gourmet" dining service on its transcontinental flights last summer. At least once a week a chef is aboard the gourmet flight to talk with the passengers about his food.

In first class United serves a liqueur in stoneware cups which the passengers may keep as souvenirs.

Delta Air Lines has its "royal dining service" with food served from carts on china.

'Flying Fleece' Cleaned Its Clients

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Federal authorities have arrested five men in connection with a crooked, airborne gambling operation once official dubbed "the flying fleece."

The arrests Thursday in the Buffalo and Rochester areas were the first in the country involving in-flight gambling, FBI agents said.

The five were charged with interstate racketeering, specifically gambling and conspiracy.

They were Joseph E. (Lead Pipe) Todaro, 46, of Tonawanda, a Buffalo suburb; his son Joseph Jr., 25, of Buffalo; Dominic Chirico, 41, of Riga; and Angelo Vaccaro, 49, and Sam Minkoff, 56, both of Irondequoit.

All posted bond of $5,000 each after arraignment before U.S. Commissioners in Buffalo and Rochester and were freed to await hearings Jan. 22.

Conviction of the charges carries a maximum five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

Neil J. Welch, special agent in charge of the FBI's Buffalo office, said the men arranged charter flights between western New York and Las Vegas, Nev. for both "big gamblers" and ordinary citizens.

One aboard the planes, Welch said, the travellers were lured into crooked card and dice games. "A lot of these passengers were picked clean by the time they got to Las Vegas to do their legal gambling," he added, characterizing the operation as "the flying fleece."

"Once the passenger lost his money . . . a loan shark would be nearby on the plane to offer a loan at interest rates up to 150 per cent," Welch said.

Intelligencer Is Awarded Fashion Judy

The Judy, highest award in the Canadian fashion industry, has been awarded to The Intelligencer.

The award, sponsored by the National Garment Salesmen's Association's Ontario division, was presented to the newspaper "for the best fashion coverage to their readers of local fashion" in a news media in a city of under 70,000 population.

The coverage gives fashion by the newspaper's women's department under the direction of Mrs. Alison Stickle was responsible for the Judy coming to Belleville. During the past year The Intelligencer has featured extensive photo and news coverage, both local and national, of style trends.

The 1969 contest, the 12th since the Judy awards were instituted, had a record number of entries of remarkable quality. Retailers, manufacturers and the media submitted entries. Winner of the Judy for a newspaper in a city of over 70,000 was The Toronto Daily Star.

The Judy, a gold statuette of a dressmaker's dummy, is awarded annually at the dinner climaxing Market Week in Toronto.

Chairman of the judging committee was G. H. Despard of Eaton's and other judges were J. A. Woodburn of Ogilvy's, Ottawa; Peter Hooker of Simpson's; Miss Elizabeth Birch, De Pass, Montreal and Mrs. Sybil Young, freelance writer of Toronto.

Bishops Get TV Diplomas

LONDON (AP) — Thirteen Roman Catholic bishops graduated Friday night from a week's intensive course in how to project the best image possible on television.

They went back to school as first pupils at Britain's newest television station, the $500,000 Catholic Radio and Television Centre in suburban Hatch End. For a week they wrote scripts, faced cameras—and were criticized.

The course was intended to get the churchmen better versed in handling modern communications media. Above all, they have to be ready with instant comment on almost any subject when required.

Libya Buys Planes

PARIS (CP) — Reports that France will supply the new militant Libyan government with 50 Mirage jet fighter-bombers set off fears today that the arms balance in the Middle East may be drastically shifted.

Official sources said Libya agreed to a condition that the 50 jets cannot be transferred to any of its Arab neighbors but observers today voiced fears the sale would make the arms situation in the Middle East lopsided.

The deal also was seen as spotlighting President Georges Pompidou's determination that France should play a major role in the Mediterranean.

The planes, which fly at twice the speed of sound, have been sold recently at about $1,500,000 each but may vary from sale to sale and those which Libya obtained were not immediately known.

Israel has had 50 Mirage jets blocked in France under the French Arms embargo since June, 1967, but officials here say there is no chance that these will be shipped to Libya.

Although observers expressed concern about the possibility that the sale would alter the

Biafra Said Near Collapse

PARIS (AP) — Agence France-Presse reported today that the military situation in Biafra had become critical with the secessionist armies in virtual collapse.

Citing authoritative private sources in the French capital, the news agency said "the military collapse has reportedly already happened or is about to happen following a breach of the southern front by Nigerian federal forces."

The agency also said that the federal army had brought its Soviet-supplied 122-millimetre artillery into range of Uli airport, Biafra's supply link for arms, food and medical supplies.

The dispatch said the desperate military situation was confirmed by a second independent source who reported that there appeared to be no hope for a reversal and that several high officials had left Biafra for other African nations.

The French foreign ministry had no comment on the report and other diplomats, usually well informed on African affairs, said they were not in possession of corroborating information.

Indian Fund To Be Spent

TORONTO (CP) — Last year the Ontario government failed to spend any of an allotted $1,000,000 for Indian community development, but that won't happen this year, says Peter Sango.

Mr. Sango, a 34-year-old social worker, became director of the department of social and family service's Indian community development branch following last summer's disclosure of the office's lack of spending.

Six members of the branch, including former director Joseph Dufour, resigned last summer to protest government inaction in helping native people.

Since being appointed Sept. 1, Mr. Sango has brought the branch back to full staff, including seven community development officers, three of them Indians.

And the branch has spent $300,000 of its allotment and expects to spend the balance before the end of the current fiscal year in March.

But Mr. Sango doesn't accept all the credit for the increased action of his branch. Some of th credit he refers to Social Services Minister John Yaremko, who was the focal point of last year's protest.

"Mr. Yaremko has to take the lumps, so he should get the praise when it is due too," he said in an interview.

Chief Frederick Plain, president of the Union of Ontario Indians which wants the branch replaced by an Indian-staffed Crown corporation, said relations with the branch "have not been too bad" in recent months.

UK Flu Creating Burial Backlog

LONDON (AP) — Britain's flu epidemic has created a backlog of unburied bodies which will take up to 10 days to deal with, undertakers reported Friday.

A total of 4,185 deaths were recorded in the epidemic throughout Britain during the last six weeks.

The 2,400 deaths in the week ended last Saturday were the most since a previous influenza virus hit Britain in 1951.

One undertaker in the English Midlands reported that he was having to refuse requests for funerals until Jan. 20.

A spokesman for the National Association of Funeral Directors said flu among cemetery and crematoria staff has added to the delays.

Health officials said the large number of deaths have resulted from the widespread distribution of the disease rather than its severity.

They pointed out that 95 per cent of the deaths have been among persons 65 years old and over and many victims were already suffering bronchial complaints.

Reduce Payments If No Belt: MD

HAMILTON (CP) — Persons injured in car accidents and who were not wearing seat belts should receive reduced damage awards because they are contributing to their own injuries, an Ontario surgeon told a traffic safety conference Friday.

Dr. William R. Ghent, chief surgeon at a Kingston hospital, told the three-day conference sponsored by the Ontario department of transport that the threat of financial loss would encourage people to use the safety devices.

Dr. Ghent said he was convinced it was a step "the government will eventually have to take because most drivers refuse to use safety belts."

He said a survey conducted last week on Highway 401 revealed that 84 per cent of drivers were not wearing seat belts.

Handicapped, Winter Workers Feel Anti-inflation Pinch

OTTAWA (CP) — Culture, sport and Parliament seem to be bearing out the government's anti-inflation campaign in fine style, bit the handicapped abd winter workers may be feeling the pinch.

The ups and downs of federal spending are shown in a financial statement issued Friday for the period April 1 to Nov. 30, the first eight months of the government's accounting year.

Generally, income rose faster than spending compared with the same period of last year to generate a surplus of $1,023,300,000 in the government account Nov. 30.

In particular, spending rose sharply in almost all of a dozen government-backed cultural and educational institutions, most of them under the aegis of Secretary of State Gerard Pelletier. The National Film Board received less money.

The health department's outlay for fitness and amateur sport almost doubled in the period to $2,860,000.

The department's payments in special assistance and allowances to the aged, blind and disabled fell by $3,104,000 to $4,282,000.

Spending under the Medical Care Act, however, shot to $97,996,000 from $18,314,000 in the 1968 period as more provinces joined the shared-cost program.

Cancellation last year of the winter works program, under which municipalities received federal incentive payments for winter employment projects, led to an eight-month saving of $19,340,000.

The operation of Parliament itself—Commons and Senate—cost $3,259,000—more in the period for a total of $13,801,000. Administration in the government's own privy council office rose to $4,381,000 from $3,896,000. Parliament had fewer sittings in 1969, an election year.

On the culture list, Ottawa's National Arts Centre, which opened for business last June, cost $2,500,000 to run up to Nov. 30. The statement also lists spending of $1,478,000 in eight months as part of the centre's total construction costs of about $46,000,000.

The National Film Board was cut down to $5,932,000 in the eight months from $6,219,000.

The Medical Research Council, under the health department, saw its spending dip to $18,572,000 from $19,700,000.

Major item on the state secretary's list is the $108,000,000 spent in eight months by the CBC, up from $94,000,000 in the 1968 period.

The Canada Council, which provides grants to various cultural and educational activities, records the biggest single increase in cultural spending. Its outlay was up by $3,265,000—slightly ahead of the CBC's increase—to $23,700,000.

The eight-month budget for the Company of Young Canadians went up to $1,900,000 from $1,425,000.

The Economic Council of Canada, which advises the country about long-term inflation and other economic trends, stepped up its spending to $944,000 from $892,000.

On the other hand, a matching increase of just over $50,000 to $1,064,000 braced up the auditor-general's office, the official watchdog on government spending.

City's Low-Rental Housing Escapes Sudden OHC Freeze

By ROY PEACOCK

Construction of 96 townhouse family units now underway in Belleville by Mayberry Rollins will not be affected by yesterday's announced freeze on the Ontario Housing Corporation development program.

Mr. Rollins said today that the 96 townhouse units on Pine Street and North Park Street were already under way.

Neither did he expect the 45-unit senior citizens' complex on Turnbull Street to come under the freeze. He said the federal authorities last week announced the release of funds for this project and therefore were committed.

Yesterday Ontario Trade and Development Minister J. Randall, ordered the freeze on OHC developmental programs for family, senior citizens and assisted housing until Ottawa indicates what funds will be available for 1970.

Mr. Rollins said he had 60 units underway at Kingston, 96 in Belleville and 36 in Trenton which would not be affected.

"The 45 unit senior citizens complex for Turnbull Street has not been started but the federal government has released the funds for this project," he said.

Mr. Rollins said the freeze could have Quinte Nanaeney project, he felt also the freeze could affect the 80-unit senior citizens complex planned for the Gowanbrae housing subdivision on West Bridge Street. "Gowanbrae Ltd. has the contract for this senior citizens housing project.

"I hadn't heard of the freeze until now" admitted Mr. Rollins who said only yesterday he had received mailed tender documents for four other low-rental and senior-citizen housing projects just outside the Belleville area.

He expected these could be affected by the freeze.

Canadian Press reports the OHC has been instructed to freeze immediately its development program for family, senior citizen and student housing until the federal government indicates what funds will be available for 1970.

Mr. Randall said he decided on the move Friday after he was warned by Ottawa to avoid commitments because the amount of federal loans available may not be established for some time.

Mr. Randall said his decision to defer consideration of the 96 townhouse units pending some indication of the availability of federal funds "will undoubtedly create a hiatus in construction."

The minister said that although the decision inevitably will create greater pressure for accommodation, "we feel this is preferable to making material commitments we have no assurance can be fulfilled."

The OHC borrows 80 per cent of its funds from the federal government through the Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., and 10 per cent from the provincial government. Both loans are paid back with interest.

Mr. Randall said he received a letter, dated Dec. 20, from C. E. Locke, CMHC supervisor, Ontario region, stating in part:

"At the present time, I am not in a position to indicate when the allocation of funds for the 1970 program will be finally established. It does seem, however, that it will not be possible to seek final approvals in January. In these circumstances, you may wish to make any necessary contract adjustments with builders so as to avoid any commitment based on an expectation that formal approval will be forthcoming early in the new year."

A second letter from Mr. Locke, dated Dec. 31, stresses that the amount of funds for student housing also remains to be established.

The Dec. 31 letter said:

"When the magnitude of the various lending programs is known, it may well be necessary to establish priorities. In the circumstances, you may wish to avoid any commitment based on the expectation that a loan may subsequently be approved in 1970."

Mr. Randall said the OHC has 11 land-assembly or servicing proposals and 23 proposals for family and senior citizen housing totalling 2,797 units. These proposals are now in Ottawa for approval for which no commitment of funds has been given.

"In addition to these, we are currently processing or have invited proposals for 36 developments in 31 municipalities, together with student residence developments for 12 post-secondary education institutions."

He said the OHC has decided to stop work on the student residence at McArthur's College of Education at Queen's University, Kingston; freeze all proposals for family, senior citizens and student accommodation currently invited or under review; and hold back proposal calls for family, senior citizen, or student accommodation.

A single candle atop a mammoth anniversary cake symbolized a century of operation for the Ontario School for the Deaf in yesterday's school parade. Various floats, including several horse drawn buggies and carriages, reflected the early history of the school.

Parade Opens Big OSD Year

Year-long celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of the Ontario School for the Deaf got away to an official start yesterday with a school parade through the downtown Belleville.

Best wishes were extended by Alderman Arthur Keegan in brief ceremonies on Market Square launching the parade.

Alderman Keegan said the OSD filled an important need for this type of educational facility. He congratulated the school administration staff and students for their achievements during past years in academic, vocational and other fields of effort.

Colorful floats, many with a centennial theme, oldtime horsedrawn carriages, and placard - carrying students were in the parade.

Close to a dozen special functions marking the school's centennial are scheduled during 1970. The actual anniversary date is October 20. At that time a special ceremony with department of education officials taking part is planned.

Prince Edward County Makes Plans To Hold Snowmobile Racing Events

PICTON — More than 20 snowmobile enthusiasts gathered at Prince Edward Yacht Club this week to plan snowmobile races in Prince Edward County.

Chairman of the meeting, Jack Purtelle, outlined three possible race sites: Picton harbor, the property surrounding Prince Edward Fly-ing Club and Picton fairgrounds. It was quickly agreed that the fairgrounds would be an ideal site because of its grandstand facilities and nearby concessions.

Steps already have been taken to obtain necessary permission for use of the track.

Considering a date for a race meet Mr., Purcelle rejected the idea of going full speed ahead to set up events within the next few weeks.

"Let's do one race up right this year and if we do it right, it will take time," he emphasized. He suggested that on Feb. 7, snowmobilers might enjoy a thrill ride leaving the yacht club from Picton harbor covering five or six miles. At the end of the trail, participants could join in a social evening at the yacht club. The races would be held on the afternoon of the following day, Feb. 8. This idea approved and the date officially set.

Several persons present at the meeting favored closing the competitions to residents of the county. After a short discussion it was generally agreed that the races should be open to all interested snowmobilers in the Quinte area. Remarked Mr. Purtelle, "The purpose of these races is to promote racing itself, not to promote Prince Edward County as a haven for winter recreation." Trophies will be awarded to the winners of each race with special provisions made for second place winners. It was decided to permit youngsters 12 and under to enjoy the races free of charge. For spectators over 12 there will be an admission fee of fifty cents.

Committees were organized last night in preparation for the races. It was agreed that a second meeting later this month would be essential to the success of the scheduled events. At last night's gathering it was conceded that if the February race meet runs smoothly, additional races could follow as long as weather permitted.

Snowmobile Boom Make Satellite Industries

The lusty popularity of the snowmobile has risen like a streaking comet.

Meantime, it's created its own profitable trade satellites.

Canadian industrialists thereby are revealing an enterprising streak themselves, says one Quinte-area sports dealer.

Manufacturers have seized on the potential spinoff profered by the snowmobile, says Bob Haind, long-time Belleville dealer in sports goods.

So much so, they have delayed getting into production of summer goods. As yet, he's still awaiting salesmen to take orders for such summer stock-in-trade as sleeping bags. Expected in December, there was still no sign of them this week.

Sports goods manufacturers have taken inspiration from the big snowmobile boom to cater to a new market, gearing production accordingly.

Manufacture of snowmobile accessories is a lucrative market, ranging from full-length zippers to flare guns.

Taking advantage of the snowmobile market is a secondary industry whose output includes full-length suits, boots, mitts, helmets and goggles.

If needed, there is more sophisticated equipment — compasses, first-aid kits, snowshoes, fire extinguishers.

Some are a must — like clothing and helmets — which one sports dealer believes will become mandatory.

The demand for clothing is being met by one Belleville outfitter as "fantastic."

Proper outfitting is the key to happy snowmobiling. Even in the Quinte district Ontario winter temperatures can range from zero to 15 below. Winds can be a crucial factor in building up the chill threat in open spaces.

"If you haven't got the right clothing you just don't enjoy it," says Don Leslie of Leslie Shoes, a firm that this year went into the winter sports wear trade for the first time.

Tire Studs Wear Down Queensway

OTTAWA (CP) — The Queensway, a main expressway crossing the city of Ottawa, will have to be resurfaced 15 years earlier than expected because the surface has been ground down by studded snow tires, Edward M. Barrie, an Ontario highways department engineer, said here Thursday.

Speaking at a meeting of professional engineers, Mr. Barrie said he feels use of studded tires may have to be banned. If not, provincial taxpayers could be faced with staggering costs for resurfacing provincial roads and highways every five years instead of 15 to 20 years.

Taxpayers face an extra $10,000,000 a year in road repair bills because of snow studs, multiplying to nearly $130,000,000 in the next decade, he said.

Belleville's Family Y Whittles Down Mortgage

The Belleville Family Y has succeeded in whittling the mortgage on its east end building down to $78,598.

The building, erected in 1964 at a cost of $500,000, is now estimated to represent an asset of about $900,000.

Latest contribution to the reduction of the Y's debt was presented to president Harry Fast Thursday night in the form of a cheque for $2,000 from Y's Men's Club president Hugh Watson.

It brings to $11,500 the amount donated by the Y's Men's Club to the building fund. The Y's Men paid $2,500 to the first campaign in 1961, and $3,000 to the second campaign in 1968.

At the time of the 1968 campaign, total debts amounted to about $200,000. Total campaign receipts were $227,000 in cash and pledges over a five-year period. As money has been received, it has been applied against the debt, and pledges will be received over the next three years, Y secretary H. A. Mesaucar said today.

In receiving the Y's Men's donation, Mr. Fast paid tribute to the members of the club for their hard work in providing this and other support to the Y's work.

The club is undertaking to develop, with the Y program and property committees, a plan for the development of facilities on the playing field behind the Y building.

The club intends to give leadership in bringing these facilities into being as manpower and other resources can be made available.

CN Postpones Staff Move

Transfer of 17 CN regional revenue accounting employees from Belleville to Montreal has been postponed indefinitely "pending a review of certain organizational changes."

Word of the postponement was received in Belleville Friday by Herb W. Pointer, chairman of local 138, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers.

Mr. Pointer heads a grievance committee protesting the move to Montreal, scheduled for March 1. It is part of a centralization of the CN's billing system involving an administrative zone from Toronto to Riviere du Loup in Quebec.

"I'm very happy with the decision," Mr. Pointer said. "I will be able to sleep nights now. I hope the company can see that centralization is not the best for working people, especially if they are transferred from one province to another."

News of the postponement came from M. K. Carson of Ottawa, executive assistant to the president of the Brotherhood.

In mid-December, during talks with Mayor J. Montreuil concerning the transfer, Mr. Carson claimed the move could lead to eventual elimination of the Belleville-based CN Rideau area headquarters. This was later denied by Harry Fast, Rideau area manager, who said there were no plans at this time to abolish the area.

Mr. Pointer and the Brotherhood have carried their fight against the transfer to members of parliament and the federal cabinet. Hastings MP Lee Grills raised the question in the Commons, terming the proposed move "inhuman".

Mr. Grills warned that the workers involved, some of them with the CNR for more than 16 years, were fearful of the move to Montreal because they don't speak French. They were also concerned about English language schooling for their children, and loss of seniority in their positions with the railway.

Mr. Pointer claims the move would have cost the Belleville area $200,000 in wages of both the CN employes and working wives or husbands.

Cheese Factory Closes Down

Milk-producer patrons have already secured another outlet for their milk, but one patron from Edred cheese factory has been forced to close for economic reasons.

The Weller's Bay Cheese Factory on Highway 33, just west of Consecon, has closed its doors for the last time.

January 26 an auction sale will be held to sell off factory equipment.

The cheese factory property will also go on the auction block subject to a reserve bid.

Secretary Ken Gray of factory patrons are shipping their milk to Quinte Milk Products in Wellington, Ontario. He is now negotiating for the purchase of the factory milk quota.

Purchase of the Weller's Bay milk quota would allow Quinte Milk Products to manufacture cheese.

The Weller's Bay cheese plant, Ivan Reid, consistently made top grade cheese at the Consecon plant. However, a factory official said the volume of cheese did not warrant expenditure for needed waste disposal facilities and other improvements.

Also, the 82 cent hike in the cheese milk price to $3.09 per cwt. ordered last July by the milk marketing board was said to have cut into the factory's profit margin.

The passing of the old Weller's Bay Cheese Factory leaves only four operating cheese plants in Prince Edward county.

They are the privately-owned Mountain View plant and patron-owned plants at Elmbrook, Ben Gill and Black River. The Weller's Bay plant was owned by shareholders.

Long-Time Post Office Closed Out

TWEED — Crosby post office, which has served the area for the past eighty-years, will go out of existence on Feb. 27, 1970, the post office department has informed the local residents.

On Feb. 28, 1970, a new service will be inaugurated with Crosby being designated as RR 1, Elgin. Mail will be handled from Elgin.

Crosby area residents who are on established mail routes will be able to receive their mail through their mail boxes. Others will receive their mail through group mail boxes to be set up at Crosby and Elgin.

All will use the RR 1, Elgin address.

Police Launch Community Service Branch

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Police Department has embarked on a new concept in dealing with youthful offenders.

"Investigate the youth rather than the offense," is the crux of the new philosophy in law enforcement.

To keep abreast of current techniques in crime prevention and detection, the local police department has been reorganized to include a community service branch — the first in eastern Ontario.

"We are now set up like the army," commented Police Chief Douglas Crosbie. "The deputy chief is in charge of the men on the beat, who might be compared to the infantry. The service branch of the department is like the headquarters staff of back-up specialists supporting the men in the field."

The community service branch is headed by Inspector Ralph Blatchford. Under his jurisdiction are the safety officer, Const. Robert Hall; the court officer, Sgt. Thomas Davidson and the newly appointed juvenile officer, Cpl. Harry McKee.

"Our function is to offer services to the public beyond the normal police operation and law enforcement procedures," says Inspector Blatchford.

This is where the youth officer steps in — to investigate the accused rather than the crime he is charged with.

"For instance," says the inspector, "a break and entry case will be investigated in the routine manner. But if we find a minor — anyone under 21 — involved, the file will be turned over to Cpl. McKee. He will then interview the offender, and consult with the courts, social service agencies and schools in coping with the problem."

The information gathered by the youth officer will be passed along to agencies and institutions offering counselling and therapy to the young offender. In many cases, the youth officer himself will undertake counselling of the young person involved in his first brush with the law.

Cpl. McKee will also go into the schools, both senior elementary and secondary, by invitation to conduct requested interviews.

"We invite parents with problems concerning their teenagers to call us," says Inspector Blatchford. He notes that the intervention of the youth officer is often of assistance in cases not involving charges, such as family communications breakdown, runaways and first shoplifting incidents among very young children.

"Police departments in the northern United States first began to move into the community relations field 15 years ago," notes the inspector. "But we believe Belleville to be the first of the smaller eastern Ontario police departments to set up a community relations branch."

The position of court officer, in existence for two years, has now been included in the service branch. Sgt. Davidson is the liaison man between the police and the courts, gathering all information about court appearances, consulting with lawyers and ensuring that all witnesses are subpoenaed.

Safety is a prime concern of the community relations branch. The school safety program has been conducted for some years by Const. Hall. The service branch is now set up to conduct special surveys and give traffic reports.

The branch also conducts property surveys of industrial plants to check security precautions, and provides lectures on the subject. Officers lecture to secondary school driving classes. Planned for the future is a demonstration of driving techniques on icy surfaces and under winter conditions.

Pondering the contents of a file at police headquarters are three members of the new four-man community relations branch of the Belleville Police Department. From left to right are court officer Sgt. Thomas Davidson, Inspector Ralph Blatchford and youth officer Harry McKee.

Libya Buys 50 Jets

arms balance in the Middle East, French officials indicated the sale would not conflict with basic French policy in seeking a peaceful Middle East settlement.

The official government sources who confirmed the sale Friday right took pains to point out that the contract forbids transfer to another nation.

Arms experts said this would be difficult to enforce, however.

The French experts said the no-transfer clause was intended to reinforce the arms embargo that France maintains against countries it considers the Middle East "battlefield," Egypt, Syria, Jordan and Israel.

Israel fears that the French weapons will wind up in the hands of Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser. These fears were reinforced when it was learned that three men identified as Egyptian military officers were part of the Libyan mission that went to Paris in mid-December to arrange the sale. The mission returned to Paris Thursday, the sources said.

Fifteen of the aircraft will be delivered to Libya in 1971 under terms of the agreement, the French sources said, and the rest "over a long period of time."

In addition to the planes, Tel Aviv sources said, France has agreed to provide Libya with 300 heavy tanks.

Trial Ordered on Charge Of Non-capital Murder

COBOURG — Russel Weldon, 41, of Trenton, was committed for trial here yesterday on a charge of non-capital murder.

Weldon was ordered to stand trial by provincial Judge R. B. Baxter at the end of a preliminary hearing.

Weldon is charged in connection with the death of George Cook, 58, of RR3, Carrying Place.

Mr. Cook's body was found in his bungalow on Twelve O'Clock Point Road by a previous police constable Oct. 21.

Judge Baxter ruled that no evidence from the preliminary hearing was to be published.

Kenneth Stobington, assistant Crown Attorney for Northumberland and Durham County, conducted the case for the prosecution. Toronto lawyer Robert Carter represented the accused.

DISTRIBUTOR OPPORTUNITIES

Available In Dynamic New Water Purification Industry

Aquacare, pioneer in the water purification field, is establishing exclusive territory distributorships for total Water Treatment Centres.

Aquacare products include a patented exclusive line of ultra-violet (non-chemical) water sterilizers, filters and other related equipment for the treatment of domestic and commercial drinking water and sterilization of water for industrial use.

Products sell from $99 to $999 and offer attractive discounts to the distributor and his appointed dealers.

Exclusive distributor territories have been evaluated to produce an annual return of from $15,000 to $30,000, with a minimum investment of $5,000.

A complete training program, showing how to appoint dealers, install and service equipment, advertise and secure sales leads, is made available.

The Distributor could handle Aquacare as an addition to his present product line or develop a new exclusive water treatment business.

Interviews being conducted in your area shortly. Please apply stating line of business and/or occupation, territory presently serviced, products sold and credit references, to:

Spoiled Votes

Bancroft is still officially dry following a recount of the December referendum, and spoiled votes appear to be the reason.

The liquor issue aside, this question of spoiled votes is one that voters and potential voters must study carefully. It is a simple matter to read the instructions on how to mark a ballot, yet inevitably many do not, or for some reason do not comprehend and so the ballot is marked other than with a cross, is invalid.

Judge J. E. Anderson, who conducted the recount put it squarely when he said the election act may have to be changed to allow tick marks on ballots. "Either that, or voters will have to receive more education on how to make a ballot. . ."

We believe the latter course is correct, for the time being at least. If further education at election time does not have the desired effect then certainly consideration should be given to permitting a tick mark. After all the vote itself is more important than the manner in which it is indicated.

Medical Advances

Brain surgeon Dr. William Lougheed's successful operation replacing the blocked artery of a woman stroke patient represents a major advance in the treatment of victims of this distressing ailment.

The Toronto surgeon in describing the operation touched on further doubts about birth control pills. Ever since their first entry into use a great deal of discussion has centred around their "side effects." There is no suggestion of a ban being placed upon "The Pill" but nevertheless there is growing evidence that as yet unknown properties in its chemical composition may be the cause of serious health problems. Cancer for one has been mentioned, but again there is no proof.

Dr. Lougheed's concern is an increasing number of strokes suffered by women in their 30s and 40s. He says it could be "coincidence," but on the other hand there are enough women in the age groups mentioned suffering strokes to make doctors suspect the pill.

Possibly some new and safer method of birth control will be introduced. Some are in limited use overseas, such as injections which provide temporary immunity. Meanwhile as Dr. Lougheed suggests, further research is needed to throw light on this matter.

Fun in the Snow

You may call it "winter fever," but like their Russian counterparts who swim in the Moscow river at this time of year 30 members of Vancouver's polar bear club braved 42-degree water at English Bay on New Year's Day.

Yes winter can mean fitness if you just let it. A current news photo shows one Shavros Meirmaridis of Lorain, Ohio, and his three children, John 7, Daphne 6 and Peter 4 frolicking in the snow in their bathing suits outside their home. Mr. Meirmaridis plans to make it a daily experience "to make the kids strong." Well, by the look of them they have a happier or fitter looking group of kids anywhere.

These January days are also good for Ontario's lion population. Yes, we did say lions. Just like those cheetahs pictured the other day inspecting a visitor's car in the game preserve near Nairobi, the animals of the African Lion Safari and Game Farm, established last year in Beverly township near Hamilton enjoy both the scenery and the visitors. Here of course the scenery is a little different — all that snow.

Meanwhile, apart from down Picton way January has been pretty kind in our own area. In fact if it doesn't do something soon it is going to be a pretty tame winter — unlike the chill of a couple of years ago when the temperature went down to about 15 below zero at times.

Quality Staff

In acquiring temporary staff, including high school students, for filing duties, the Unemployment Insurance Commission, newly-established in Belleville, is the words of one spokesman "pleasantly surprised at the quality of people available to us." In fact, the reliability of local workers has made it unnecessary to hire ten per cent extra casual staff as a cushion against absenteeism. This is the sort of quality which has brought more industry to Belleville of late, and will attract other enterprises in future.

Ottawa's 'Lobbyists'

They Help Business Do Business with the Government

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — This being the nation's biggest one-industry city, the civil service, company town, everything revolves around that gigantic fact of life. No surprise, the federal government.

Everything including one of the most fascinating private enterprises — businessmen or professions — in Canada.

It does not really have a name, and nobody knows exactly how many people are involved.

What these enterprisers do is help business do business with the government.

They are not actually lobbyists in the Washington sense of the term, because the way Ottawa does business by public tender, they can not — or are not supposed to be able to — pressure the politicians into giving their clients government contracts.

(The word lobbyist dates back to the bad old days when public or private pressure could be put on parliamentarians in the party lobbies of the Commons before votes on issues.)

In this city of the phone book thick three lobbyists-secretary, not - really - lobbyists are joined by "consultants" and "representatives" or "departmental agents."

They are the experts who, knowing their way around these corridors of power, coach their clients on the proper rules of doing business with the government so they can make the best possible deal for their client's.

In Washington, the lobbyist is known as a "tax percenter," because that is what he gets from his client for a government contract.

In Ottawa, the "consultants" who do not pretend to have what the lobbyist calls "clout" — the precious possession of influence in its various forms — usually works on a flat monthly retainer fee.

Many of them are "insiders" — former civil servants who know on whose door to knock in what department.

"It is not who you know as a friend to ask for a favor," explains one of these specialists, "but it is that you know the man in mind, the way he thinks and how to make a proposal he may appeal, or at least sound reasonable to him.

"You know instinctively from being over the years a civil servant reacts to what approaches.

One of these ex-civil servitors turned - consultant only half - jokingly calls himself a "merchant of ideas." He came with his specialized "I - have - been - there" knowledge, knows his way through the maze of the scores of branches, divisions and directorates of the department of defence, industry and defence production.

His clients are the aerospace and electronics industry, the motor companies, the shipyards, the chemical and explosives plants.

The way he tells it, most of his work is just keeping these people cheek on the thinking in the defence and industry department so that they will have a better idea of what is coming up in the ever - more - sophisticated line of new equipment.

It can be as basic as knowing what makes and models, from what factories, are necessary to implement the ministers' decisions, the drivers in the government motor pool and their personal preferences in cars.

The way things have changed over the years, Mr. Hoch' has plenty of time for the best of these specialists.

They are those men with the encyclopedic memories who did their basic training in the department of finance and national revenue.

They are the experts in the vast complications of the multiplicity of tax laws because they helped write them and know where the i's are dotted and the t's crossed.

A couple of them have even helped write national budgets.

These then are the boys who could save you a bundle, but probably charge you another for doing it.

Other "insiders" are the experts who leave the customs and excise side of the revenue department with business machine minds.

One of them describes himself. In all honesty, as an "ombudsman for the well-to-do."

However, ever words for the non - suffering.

They dont not afford idiots. In fact, they do not need them and could not use them.

He specializes in tariff.

He thinks what that could be the problem of a company worth — say to an amalgamation — but he's capable and competent in a multi-million dollar way. Just figure what a shift in a tariff after closing the factory by as little as two or three percent could mean.

There is nothing wrong, in law or even ethics in the use of argument and persuasion. That is what the Tariff Board is paid to listen to argument.

For the real hard-liners, the ombudsmen of ombudsmen, in about as far as they can go in landing a contract for a client is to get specifications or particular qualifications of equipment written into the government tender call.

It can be done. But it is not easy.

Medical Needs of the Elderly

Ottawa Journal

While most of the talk these days is about youth there comes in the mail an article in the Ontario Medical Review pointing out that in 1975 there will be 2,000,000 Canadians 65 or older. Dr. Ivan V. Gartha, medical director of Scarborough's Provincial Hospital, says the Canadian medical profession is ill equipped to handle the needs of the elderly.

Dr. Gartha says that in Canada, "as far as I know, no medical school includes any geriatric course in its curriculum." Hospitals for the chronically ill he calls "medical slums" and research of diseases which are the main killers of the elderly he finds "idle or slow, due to lack of money, lack of interest and manpower."

He warns his fellow doctors that in the future their offices "... will be crowded with people, not seeking advice only for colds and abdominal discomfort, but asking directions for preparation of senescence and retirement, asking questions on how to avoid the depression of becoming old, disabled or isolated. It is frightening to imagine that the average doctor will be stunned by these questions, adding another blow to his already declining reputation."

Yet as Dr. Gartha chides his fellow physicians, his is really a condemnation of the way an entire society heaps money and freedom and loving care on a younger generation while doling out subsistance allowances and even less love to the elderly.

Dr. Gartha admonishes all of us when he tells the doctors:

"The elderly stand in silent protest against social injustice. They will never riot, they do not even have the strength to defend the facts of the old society. If we want a balanced society here we . . . have to fight not only racial, religious and color discrimination, but also discrimination against the aged. We have to do so in order to honor the achievements of our parents and as a preparation for our happier old age."

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The League of Nations held its first meeting at Geneva 50 years ago today—in 1920—after its creation by the Treaty of Versailles. The treaty was not ratified by the United States and was passively accepted by the defeated powers of the First World War so these countries were not represented. Some of the League's subcommittees, such as the International Labor Organization, are still flourishing, but it failed in its main task, to prevent another big European war.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1945—the United States 2nd Armored Division took Samree, three miles northeast of Larocke, following a violent tank battle; Norwegian parachutists dropped into Norway and cut main railway between Trondheim and Oslo over which the Germans were being evacuated to Germany.

Condominiums...Apartment Legislation

Two Provinces Move Toward Improved Housing

Montreal Star

What images emerge at the mention of the word "home"? A combination of traditional concepts and the content of advertising would conjure up pictures of individual family houses in the country or a suburb, of lawns and trees and privacy. Most of all, "home" is associated with ownership, with control over at least one area of life where outside influences and a power cannot interfere with the individual or the family's activities.

These images, however, have no reality for vast numbers of city dwellers. Living in apartment buildings owned by others is a wide-spread pattern in an urban society. In European countries, with a much older tradition of city - living, the rights of tenants and modes of apartment ownership, which carry into the cluttered housing of the metropolis some of the advantages of single-unit conditions, have been developed long ago. Not so in North America, where concern for the apartment-dweller is recent.

Two developments recent, one in Quebec and one in Ontario, are indications of fresh consideration for the special conditions of those who cannot afford — or do not choose — to own their own separate home and plot of land. In Quebec City, legislators adopted a law allowing for condominium, or co-ownership of multi-family housing. Ontario introduced a scheme to protect tenants' rights.

The federal task force on housing reported that there is a widespread aspiration for single-family housing in Canada. In explaining this, however, the report pointed not so much to the positive features of individual ownership as to the frustration tenants experience in relationship to an all-powerful landlord with his ability to raise rents without explanation, to set rules as to pets and social activities, to demand advance deposits he is sometimes reluctant to refund.

Yet not by the wildest of dreams can one imagine the disappearance of apartment dwellings in cities. Positive means of reshaping the conditions of apartment dwellers are needed instead. These means should provide the sense of responsibility and the stability, the feeling of individual importance that single-family housing offers.

The condominium system, which allows a person or family to purchase an individual apartment, row or town house while sharing common areas with other owners, is a prime example of how these new conditions can be achieved.

But condominiums will not replace the existing apartment houses whose dwellers are tenants. This is where policies such as the one introduced by the Ontario government are relevant. In the neighboring province, at least part of the imbalance between landlord and tenant will be corrected, and the tenancy nature of the contract between them more firmly established.

New measures touching on condominiums and protection of tenants' rights do not produce results overnight. But they are a step towards the creation of a more humane city environment that still takes into account the economic constraints which make single-family housing for everyone impossible.

Priest Tunes His Guitar Before He Conducts Mass

TORONTO (CP) — The first thing Rev. Ed Buckbek does before he celebrates Mass at Oakdale's Church of the Sorrowful Virgin is to tune up his guitar.

It's been that way since Father Buckbek arrived in the area more than a year ago to be church in suburban Willowdale.

He has created enthusiasm among the congregation, most of whom arrive well before the Mass to get choice seats. A crowd of about 600 crammed into the pews for a recent Mass celebrated by Father Buckbek in a green cord-and-corduroy outfit.

"I had a couple of complaints about the length of my hair this week," he joked. "Two of the young boys asked me why I got a haircut."

Father Buckbek's hair is long, especially at the back where it clings casually to his Roman Catholic priest's collar.

A native of New York, he came here four years ago and says he has found a home.

"There is a vast audience of religious folk music," he says. "We carry about 30 songs on our program and change them every two weeks."

He and his eight-member group are working now on a recordion of the Lord's Prayer set to the music of the Beatles' recording of All My Loving.

Except for John Hermast, a middle-aged Anglican import who plays the bass, the group consists mainly of teen-agers with a flair for music.

"We've bridged the generation and the ecumenical gap," said the 32-year-old priest. "We used to have another girl on guitar, but she moved to King-ston. We used to kid her that the musicians she were were the ones who played solo."

The words of the hymns are put onto a movie screen to help the congregation to sing or hum along.

Recently diocese Father Buckbek's singing ability. In fact, a recording company agent from Montreal flew in for a record session.

"I won't perform," said the priest. "If someone wants to record the music that's fine, but I think they should get that much," however. It's an expensive area you have to be here for."

Several clergymen in Metropolitan Toronto have visited the folk mass, and have been favorably impressed.

"You've got to make the service relevant to people," says Father Buckbek. "This just isn't a straight pitch for the kids. Religion is an adult occupation. If the kids see their parents taking part, then even this is a step in the right direction."

Rev. James Connell, pastor of the church, approves of Father Buckbek's folk masses. But he holds tender misgivings in the basement of the church at the same time for more conventional members of the congregation.

Nuns Now Live In Apartments

CLEVELAND, Ohio (AP) — The mother superior at a Milwaukee, Wis., school says 70 per cent of the 4,000 nuns in her community now live in groups of three to seven in apartments and houses.

And, Sister M. Francis Borgia Rothkobber of the Sisters of St. Francis told the Canon Law Society, they are happier and mentally healthier since they moved from large convent quarters.

"The last few years," she said, "we've had fewer going to the psychiatrist. Before, it was a case of a majority of people slowly going peculiar."

Ultra-feminine, Soft and Filmy Wedding Gowns Popular

MONTREAL (CP) — That once-in-a-lifetime choice of a wedding gown is likely to result in something soft and filmy this spring.

A collection of bridal dresses shown recently by Portrait Gowns Ltd. included maxis and minis, flared, dirndl and narrow skirts, all of which were ultra-feminine rather than high fashion.

Some were sleeveless while many others had the short puffed sleeve that came into vogue with Julie Nixon Eisenhower's Victorian-look gown.

To the designer and the purchaser, however, the puffed sleeve has a double rule. Besides offering an alternative to the traditional sheath which ends in a point over the hand, the puff lends balance to a long gown which otherwise turns slender bodies into hourglasses.

A variation on the puffed sleeve was an eyecatcher called the Leaders. Named after fan-den-style Chinese lanterns, it is made with two full circles of fabric which are joined and gathered at either end, then attached to the sleeve to form a bubble.

Lace appliques around the middles of the "lantern" hide the seamline.

Flounces were tacked on to every possible spot, including deep, full, eight-inch dust ruffles around the hems and over the forearms.

But ruffles were not the only adornment stolen from the past. Capelets, popular in the 1930s, also appeared this year in a sheer organza which drapes easily. They were shown over fitted, natural waistlines and fell in the upper arms, the elbow or even plunged to the hip line.

Fabric is also important in such special garments and thanks to recent revolutions in the textile industry, today's bride doesn't have to worry too much about turning a wrinkled back on her guests.

At one time, trains had to hide the creases, but now dacron, polyester, textured orlon, ruffled laces and Swiss eyelet have taken the worry out of sitting.

Another boon to summer brides is the incorporation of satin-finished organza. An opaque material, it is lighter and cooler than its look-alike, the much-used pouli-de-soie.

Topping off the outfits were lace baby bonnets to accompany the short gowns, floral headpieces suitable for nearly any style and wide-brimmed picture hats with an optional veil flottering down the back.

Unisex Clothes Answer Needs of the Future

NEW YORK (AP) — "Unisex clothes will answer the needs of the future," says fashion designer Rudi Gernreich, who shocked the fits with his topless bathing suits.

"There's no time for prettiness in the midst of a revolution."

When he and six other designers chose sides Wednesday to discuss fashion at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, it was a conflict between radicals and conservatives.

"If you could pack a suitcase today, what clothes would you include?" Gernreich was asked.

"A gas mask," he replied. "This overstated romanticism in clothes today is not facing up to the future."

Utilitarian and non-romantic clothes will best answer the needs of a world with giant problems like air pollution and overpopulation, he added.

Jersey knit and jumpsuits will be important for men, he said, and so will handbags. He carried a brown leather bag himself.

Clodagh of Dublin, a designer in her 20s, was with Gernreich all the way. Eve Stillman said: "I don't believe women will ever dress like men."

Clodagh predicted insulated spray-on clothes, fabrics welded together instead of sewn, more interest in body decoration and inexpensive creations in fabrics that really fit.

It's a waste to spend too much time on clothes, she said.

Gernreich backed her up.

"There won't be people who will sit and sew at machines. It's a dying trade."

"But I don't think these things are so imminent," he said. "We're talking about a 30-year time span."

Gernreich further predicted a clear division between clothes for the old and the young.

"We have to face the fact we're growing older," he said. After a certain age, there is a time not to accentuate the body. For older people, he suggested loose triangular shaped robes in bright patterns.

"After 18, I don't believe in age groups," countered Simonetta. She pooh-poohed the nudity and palsied body ideas.

"I'm against the obvious," she said.

MR. AND MRS. BYRON LOEWEN

Loewen-Brennen

Holy Rosary Church, Belleville was the scene of the recent marriage of Patricia Ann Brennen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Brennen of Belleville and Byron Loewen, Victoria, B.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Loewen, St. Albert, Edmonton, Alberta. Officiating at the ceremony was Rev. Father Reginald Tierney and organist was Libor Cesar.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a princess style gown of white satin-back crepe, trimmed with marabou. She wore a white fox stole and a shoulder-length veil trimmed with white velvet. Her bouquet was red roses intermixed with white velvet pom poms.

Maid of honor was Miss Connie Moore wearing a princess style dress of red velvet with a stand-up collar. Her bouquet was white poms intermingled with red velvet pom pom.

Best man was Keith McConnie and the usher was John Mavrin.

For the reception held at the Pinnacle Room, Hotel Quinte the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a champagne crepe dress with matching hat trimmed with fur to match the jacket of Russian Kolinsky. Her corsage was yellow sweetheart roses and bronze 'mums.

The wedding trip was to Victoria, B.C. and on the way the couple stopped over to visit the bridegroom's parents who were unable to attend the wedding. For the trip the bride wore a two-piece matching coat and dress ensemble of camel hair. The outfit was completed by a black diamond - back mink hat and black accessories.

The couple will reside at 1573 Bigby St., Fernwood Manor, Apt. 444, Victoria, B.C.

Bird Cages Designed On Model of 'Palace'

The bird cage illustrated is designed on the model of the famous "Crystal Palace" that housed the Great Exhibition of 1851, in London, England.

Although the Great Exhibition was not the first, it was the first truly international exhibition and was the direct ancestor of the Canadian National Exhibition and more recently, Expo.

There was only a year from the organization of a committee with Prince Albert at its head, to the opening of the exhibition. Twenty acres of Hyde Park were set aside and a Crystal Palace, to the design of Sir Joseph Paxton, was erected on the site. By opening date in 1851, of the thousands of exhibitors, 520 were from "the Colonies", many from Canada.

In the ensuing years Crystal Palaces sprang up like mushrooms in North America. Every town and city with a sense of civic pride had one. Railway stations, rotundas, armouries, exhibition grounds, all emulated design.

As well as being a model and souvenir of the Great Exhibition, the bird cage was used to transport a living souvenir to North America. House sparrows or English sparrows, in reality finches, were introduced to North America at the time of the Exhibition. They were, in fact, introduced indiscriminately to all British colonies. Sufficient escaped to establish the almost universal flocks of house sparrows that exist today.

The crystal palace bird cage is interesting for its historical association. Other bird cages of the 19th century survive in brass, pottery, wire and wood. The majority are handsome and of good quality. Pottery cages are likely to be expensive and a good brass parrot cage is likely to cost $100.

The introduction of the house sparrow was deplored by North American ornithologists. However, later in the century (1890) another cage bird, the starling, was introduced. The starling is related to the crow and the mynah and under certain conditions can be taught to talk much like a parrot. It too flourished in Canada, although it was not until 1947 to spread to the west coast. Shortly after this most cities mounted a campaign against starlings, but unlike the earlier problem with sparrows, nature seems to have intervened and starlings are not the menace they once were.

At the same time flocks of sparrows were increasing to monstrous proportions, the native passenger pigeon was facing extinction. Single flocks were estimated to contain as many as 2 billion birds. They caused so much destruction and destroyed so many crops that in 1705 the Bishop of Montreal exorcised them as though they were demons. Whether the Bishop's curse was effective or whether they were displaced by the sparrow and latter the starling is not known. The vast flocks began to disappear after the introduction of the sparrow. The last report of a passenger pigeon seen in the wild was in 1907. In 1914 the passenger pigeon was extinct.

Pigeons were used for food and domesticated, usually in flocks and not normally kept in cages. Birds were transported in light, portable wicker cages, utilitarian to begin with and long since gone.

Women's Institutes

Cranlifton - Corbyville W.I.

The first meeting of 1970 was held in the Institute Hall on Monday evening with an attendance of 12 members and three visitors.

Mrs. D. Ellsworth, president, opened the meeting. After welcoming all, she read two poems.

The business period followed. A letter from the president, Mrs. Austin E. Sullivan was read in which she sent her best wishes for success in the new year and looked forward to meeting at future conventions. Reports of committees were given by Mrs. Welsh, Mrs. Windsor, Mrs. Bowers and Mrs. Milton.

The president expressed thanks to Mr. and Mrs. E. Morris for the work they had done in helping to get the hall in shape. A thank you was also expressed to Mr. G. Moore for the installation of electric heating.

At this point the president turned the meeting over to Mrs. D. Windsor, convener for citizenship. Mrs. Windsor asked everyone to relate an experience they had had with someone from another country.

Mrs. E. Casey showed films taken by Carl Reid in Japan where he spent several months in connection with his work for Stephens-Adamson of Belleville. The films showed the erecting of a large ship complete with launching ceremonies. There were also some pictures of the country itself.

Following the films, the group was invited to inspect a number of souvenirs Mr. Reid brought home.

Mrs. Windsor thanked Mrs. Casey for showing the films and presented her with a gift.

The meeting closed with a luncheon.

Rule by the Amazons Still Exists in Greece

ATHENS (AP) — The Amazons of Monolikisia say their husbands did a good job this year—"another five or 10 years and they'll be perfect housewives."

Fortunately for the male population of the town in northern Greece, gynaecokratia—rule by the Amazons—comes only once a year and lasts just a day.

Hundreds of fathers, brothers and sons cleaned their houses, washed clothes, cooked, milked the cows and looked after the babies Thursday while the women lorded it over their usual masters.

Local tradition has it that the mountain town near the Bulgarian border was a stronghold in antiquity of the Amazons, the warrior women who did the fighting while their men did the cooking, cleaning and child watching. The tradition lives again once each year in Monolikisia, on Jan. 8, although the modern Amazons don't take to the war path.

The men carried out their chores under the watchful eyes of tourists, reporters, photographers, television cameramen. Any caught out of their houses were liable to be stripped and splashed with cold water, but none were.

Youth Question Society

MONTREAL (CP)—Dr. S. J. Shamsie, director of children's services at Douglas Hospital, says youth's current unrest is the result of a past-war theory of parents that their childhood experiences were not relevant guidelines to raise children. They raised children taught to question rather than accept, while not preparing themselves or educational institutions to accommodate the new breed of young people.

SOCIALS

Prior to her marriage, Mrs. Byron Loewen (nee Patricia Brennen) was honored at a shower held at the home of Mrs. J. Moore with co-hostess Miss Connie Moore. Employees of the Royal Bank, where the bride worked, also made her a presentation.

GIRL ADOPTED

CHATHAM, N.B. (CP) — Maria Rosse, a nine-year-old Bolivian girl who lives in a one - room hut in a poverty - stricken area of La Paz, has been "financially adopted" by the people of Chatham who proceeds from their recent Miles for Millions walk. She was adopted through Foster Parents Plan of Canada which now extends its operations to Bolivia.

BETA SIGMA PHI

A regular meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter was held Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Alex Fulton with president, Mrs. Peter Anderson presiding.

To open the meeting Mrs. John Sherry introduced her speaker for the evening, Mr. Ronald Vanderwilde, who spoke on sculpture. He brought the subject to life through examples of his works in wood and pewter. Photographs of many of his pieces including his collection of famous Canadians and the Quinte Arts Council Cultural Award were discussed in detail. The speaker was thanked for his presentation by Mrs. Lloyd Deacon.

The business meeting included a report on the Christmas family get-together and donation of Christmas ornaments to Midgigonzy Lodge.

The evening concluded with the serving of refreshments by the hostess and Mrs. James Dolan.

IRAN INTERLUDE

"On the Des River — at the chosen site, the sides are so deep — that God must have intended that man should build a dam there." — His Imperial Majesty, The Shahanshah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi.

* * *

Do you recall the beautiful, blue-tiled Iranian building at Expo 67; its rich mirrored Persian interior (bringing to life Persia's poet Omar Khayyam and his timeless lines, "The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ, moves on — "), graced by the regal portrait of His Imperial Majesty, The Shahanshah of Iran, Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi? A modern monarch, who, we learn today, met and shook hands with a young electrical engineer, now living in our midst — Mr. Don Belfry, who with his wife Bobby and four children, Lynne 17, Glen 15, Jane 8, Brian 6, live at 134 Hastings Drive.

"It was rather a memorable moment," said Mr. Belfry modestly. "It all occurred back in March of 1968, upon the occasion of the attendance of His Imperial Majesty's presence at the dedication of the Mohammed Reza Shah Pahlavi Dam. It is named in his honor, but commonly called the Dez Dam, as it is built on the Dez River."

Among the organizations throughout the world responsible for the project of this dam, was The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. Mr. Belfry was one of ten Canadians sent by the Commission, with their families, to take charge of this project.

"Is this Iranian project an unusual construction?"

"It is, in that the Dez dam is one of the first of a series of dams," said Mr. Belfry, "now being constructed to provide and control the waters of the River Karum and its tributaries (all flow otherwise unharnessed into the Persian Gulf) to aid the fertile Province of Khuzestan, hemmed in by high mountains on the north and the Persian Gulf toward the south.

"Twenty-five centuries ago, this now arid area was one of civilization's wealthy centres, complete with extensive canal systems once constructed by captured Roman legions. These are still evident, today.

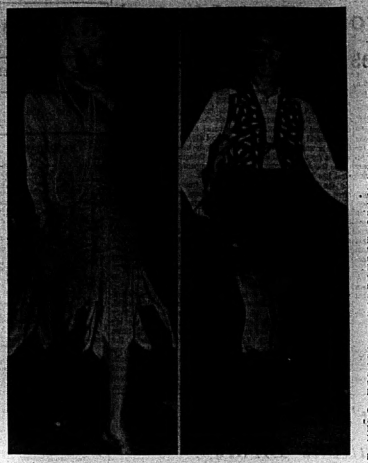
"Its purpose then is to help the economy of the Iran!" we queried.

"Yes, the construction of the dam is an important step toward a planned, integrated system of dams, which, it is hoped, will essentially assist in raising not only the people's standard of living, but will provide agriculture as well as industrial improvements and allow Iran to take her place among developed nations of the world.

"How great an area does the Dez dam irrigate?"

"It is estimated around 145,000 acres. The dam towers 699 feet and the total project including the dam's transmission line and substations is estimated to cost $73,500,000."

"Did other countries contribute to this project beside Canada — toward the construction?"



"Yes, indeed, and includes Sweden, Germany, Japan, Austria, the United States and Portugal. The dam was designed by an Italian contracting company and built by a large Italian labor force, along with several thousand Iranian workers.

"How long were you and your family in Iran?"

"Three years. After the first year which included the dedication, two years were spent in training an Iranian staff to take over the dam's hydro electrical - power installations," concluded Mr. Belfry who served as assistant superintendent and now he is with the Ontario Hydro Commission here in Belleville.

What is it like to live in Iran; from a woman's point of view?

We asked this of Mrs. Belfry, who promised to tell our readers in next week's column.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Steamed Suet Currant Pudding

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Years ago you gave a recipe for English Spotted Dog (sometimes called Spotted Dick) which is a steamed suet pudding. I want to make this but cannot find your recipe. — Anne M.

ANSWER: Believe it or not Anne I had a request from a friend for the same thing. He said he'd give me some live Newfoundland lobsters if I'd make him a Spotted Dog. He did and I did.

SPOTTED DOG
(or "Dick") (a steamed suet currant pudding)

1 cup (8 oz.) finely chopped suet
2½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
2 tsps. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
1 cup (4 oz.) dried currants
About 2-3 cup water

In large bowl combine suet, flour, baking powder and salt by hand working suet into flour. Add currants and water slowly add water, mixing with fork, until dough will hold together and you can handle it. Have ready a doubled large tea towel, floured at centre. Transfer dough to the prepared cloth and force it into a large bulky sausage shape by hand. Lap one edge of double towel over top, carefully fold sides over it and finish rolling it up. Tie with cord to keep it in shape. Boil in covered kettle in gently boiling water 4 hrs. Serve with LEMON NUTMEG BROWN SUGAR SAUCE: Mix well together dry in saucepan ¾ cup brown sugar, 3 tbsps. corn starch, 1 tsp. nutmeg, then stir in 2 cups boiling water and ¼ cup bottled lemon juice. Cook stirring until thick. Remove from heat and add 2 tbsps. butter. Pass hot in pitcher at table when Spotted Dog is sliced and served on preheated plates.

That's Spotted Dog!

NOTE: If desired this suet pudding may be rolled out like a pie crust and spread with 2-3 cup black currant jam and rolled up like a roly poly and wrapped in tea towel and boiled as above. Could be served with honey.

Successful Living

A Goal Achieved

By DORIS CLARK

Hold fast your dreams!
Within your heart
Keep one still, secret spot
Where dreams may go,
And sheltered so
May thrive and grow
Where doubt and fear are not.
O, keep a place apart
Within your heart,
For little dreams to go!

— Henry Vincent, Jr., Human Resources Centre, Atkerson, N.Y.

Thank you, Hank! If I ever knew a person who held fast to a dream and made it come true, that person is you. Your belief in people and your work with the severely handicapped for whom you have created a school, an opportunity for work and a new hope, are an inspiration to all of us.

* * *

Dear Doris: My father is 80 and in excellent health. He is a retired farmer who lost his wife six months ago. He was an excellent nurse for her for three and a half years and now he feels useless.

There is no Senior Citizens Centre to keep him occupied and the winters are so very long for him. — Looking For Ideas

Dear Looking: For one thing he could start a club himself. He could also visit your regional home for aged as a temporary guest and make some lasting friends.

Many, many retired folk are lonely, so I am sending some suggestions about how to seek out one or two he would enjoy visiting with.

Since he is a farmer, raising household plants, for gifts, might be a natural. Then there is baby sitting — a surprisingly heartwarming way to bridge tremendous gaps in the generations.

There are crafts galore for the fellow who has a way with hammer and saw, or a paint brush. Ham radios can open up a whole new world. Anyway, I'm sending you the new 10 - cent leaflet about it all, which your letter inspired. Title? "Seventy - Plus and Swinging."

* * *

Dear Doris: This Yugoslavian has been in Canada 18 years and has his naturalization papers. He left his country because he was in the underground work against Communism and escaped. He left a wife and has not heard from her for 25 years.

I have lived with this man for 10 years. My husband was killed two years ago and I would very much like to know if this man can get a divorce like other Canadians, or does he have to make an expensive search for his wife. — Legal Question

Dear Question: Not much more. The new divorce act would apply to your friend as to any other Canadian. Where there has been a five-year separation, either party can sue for divorce, provided he can show documentary evidence of the previous marriage.

Has Doris helped you with a problem? Write and tell her so!

Hollywood Film Musical Reaches End of Era

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Shed a tear for the movie musical. It's going, going, almost gone.

The decline and near-disappearance of the musical can be cited as one of the major movie trends of 1970—and perhaps for years to come. A survey of fourteen production disclosed only two musicals are being planned for this year.

The pair: Fiddler on the Roof, which Norman Jewison, formerly of Toronto, will film in eastern Europe for the Mirisch Brothers, and Beckett and Two Broomsticks, starring Angela Lansbury, which Disney Studio hopes will be a hot office success to Mary Poppins.

A couple of decades ago, Hollywood was producing between 30 and 40 musicals a year. What happened?

They have been in decline for a decade. A major cause is expense. Musicals require large casts, long rehearsals and extended shooting periods. Nowadays it's almost impossible to film a major musical for less than $5,000,000, and many have cost $10,000,000 and more.

Another major factor is the public's receptivity overseas. The English and the Japanese still like U.S. musicals, but the Germans, French and Italians do not. And in many other parts of the world where musical taste differs is unknown, chances of success for a musical are scant.

The trend away from the musical has been apparent during the last year. Costly flops have depressed the fortunes of film companies. Doctor Dolittle and Star! at 20th Century-Fox; Sweet Charity at Universal, Two Mules for Sister Sara and Broomsticks, starring Angela Lansbury, which Disney Studio hopes will be a hot office success to Mary Poppins.

Newhart's Last Laugh Was Valiant Effort

NEW YORK (AP) — A Last Laugh in the '60s, with Bob Newhart presiding, was a valiant and occasionally hilarious effort to survey the comedy of a decade in one hour Thursday night.

It was impossible to do anything comprehensive on the ABC special, but there were some wonderful moments, like the rerun of an old film of Mike Nichols and Elaine May in their sketch about Parisian lovers trying to arrange a $65 funeral which, it turned out, did not include coffin or hearse.

Newhart in his opening monologue had a wry summary of the things he found people had laughed at in the '60s: "Sin and vice, sudden death, naked people, police people, effeminate men."

He replayed an inspired bit from a Carol Burnett show in which she and Tim Conway voices accusing her of every thing from grey laundry to bad breath. The Conway-Burnett improvisational group, had a scathing spoof of TV giveaway shows, one called Bribery.

Newhart's comedy contribution was a piece in which he played a carefree air traffic controller at a busy airport.

The generally sharp tone of the comedy, the dollops of political slant of some of the commentary—including some Mort Sahl cracks—gave the program plenty of spice and may even draw some complaints. But at least it was stimulating in spots and a nice change from the bland and predictable comedy that TV variety shows are shoveling out these days.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY

The employment picture for the past week showed that there was a stronger labor demand for the female worker than for men.

There has been considerable publicity concerning the Bay of Quinte's expanding economy, especially in food around the city of Belleville.

The increased workload on the staff of the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre certainly substantiates the area's accelerating economic activities. Illustrating this condition is the fact that between April 1, 1969 and December 31, 1969, the number of interviews given to clients by the manpower counsellors increased by 11,898 over the same period in 1968. At date there is no indication of any slackening off in this client traffic.

For those persons who are having difficulty in obtaining suitable employment, this is a good time to upgrade their qualifications. Possibly their present educational or skill level is not adequate to meet the job requirements of present or future employment opportunities. For this reason attention is drawn to a course entitled Direct and Creative Selling, which will commence on Jan. 19, and be operated under the occupational training for adults (OTA) programme. This course will be of interest to anyone considering future employment in the professional sales field. The course will be conducted in the evenings at the Quinte Secondary School for a 10-week period. Further information can be obtained from Grant Jones strong at the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre or the nearest CMC at Trenton, Picton or Napanee.

The following employment opportunities are being available at this office. In the female division, the Province of Ontario has openings for various positions in the Provincial Government in Toronto for typists and stenographers. Some positions require fluency in both English and French. Other positions locally call for reliable housekeepers, accounts payable clerk, clerk typist, clerk general, hairdresser, a telephone operator for evening work and qualified physiotherapists.

In the male division, some of the employment opportunities include design engineer, electronic technologists, accountants either qualified or at present taking a profession-al accounting course, design draftsmen, methods time motion technologist, an auto body shop estimator, a textile maker and a TV repairman with color experience.

Anyone interested in these positions, seeking employment or re-entering the labor market, is invited to contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville.

Winter Has No Fears

For Snowmobilers, Like the Song, It Might as Well Be Spring

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Today is the twentieth day of winter, 1970.

But for thousands of Quinte dwellers it might just as well be spring.

For suddenly, they are swarming outdoors, blithely enjoying themselves, their frozen Canadian landscape and its once forbidding temperatures.

It's an historic conquest of environment by an army of families equipped with a common device: The snowmobile.

This is the winter that sees so many of the jaunty machines in operation, Quinte Licence bureaus at one time ran out of number plates.

This is the winter that saw the snowmobile become a commercial phenomenon.

But, most of all, this is the winter that emancipated a way of life.

The sporty little vehicle has put Canadians into the depths of their winter, to enjoy surroundings which once defeated their hardy pioneer ancestors. It has made the frozen bushland as commonplace to urban families as it once was only to trappers and hunters.

"I think it's one of the greatest things since running water," says a Belleville businessman who admits maybe his commerce could have been hurt by the snowmobile boom. "It's a tremendous thing for the whole family and for outdoor living."

"It's got us into the outdoors instead of spending wintertime watching television," says another Bellevillian. "And it certainly makes a difference in your whole life when you see what a joy winter can be."

Both men are among the thousands to whom a Canadian winter setting, once shunned for its harshness, now is a common meeting place.

The snowmobiles swarm everywhere across the snowbound Quinte countryside. City families and rural neighbors rendezvous for excursions — by day and night. (Among the more popular events are moonlight safaris.)

"More people means more fun. It's another way of getting to know people," says the president of a local snowmobile club. Such organizations are another result of the snowmobile.

In many Quinte communities — Madoc, Marmora, Picton, Gilmour, Coe Hill, Bancroft — snowmobilers have banded together to stage meets, bushland treks.

Already the winter - bleak bush of Quinte's northern townships are becoming familiar ground to city dwellers — thanks to the snowmobile.

The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region organized snowmobile clubs into blazing trails through nine townships north of Highway 7. This year, the routes, well-marked so snowmobilers can keep their bearings, span some 350 miles.

The snowmobilers who traverse them come in all ages — one of the big attractions of what is loosely called "the sport."

"Winter sports have always been for the young," says a Bancroft resort operator. "This is a people's sport — for all the family."

The number of people participating also is significant in other sectors of the community — especially in business.

The need to be properly outfitted for snowmobiling has seen suppliers of accessories also reap harvests. Snowmobile suits, mitts, goggles, helmets, boots, are among the must purchases. There are more sophisticated extras available — from compasses to flare guns.

The boom also is changing business patterns in the Quinte resort country.

More lodges are winterizing, organizing year-round operation. This is of vital significance in the northern townships, where the summer tourist business in the past has been king.

"Give it three years and it'll be as big as the summer business," predicts a resort operator at Baptiste Lodge.

In other sectors, build i suppliers look forward to more business as an increasing number of snowmobilers winterize northland cottages for year-round use.

But the boom is not without its side - effects.

Some car dealers believe they have lost sales because of the snowmobile splurge.

"You just can't put that much money into a sport without it being taken from somewhere else," says a Trenton dealer.

The snowmobile right now is "the number one enemy of the car business," says a Belleville dealer.

Can the boom last?

Inevitably it must taper off — but by then snowmobiling will be a way of life.

Already many Quinte dwellers are two-snowmobile families.

Soon, trade-ins will be increasing on the market.

"I can see the time," says one snowmobile dealer in Belleville, "where the dealer is going to have to set up a used vehicle lot."

In the meantime, the old-fashioned Canadian winter is gone forever.

For one thing — as more and more snowmobiles bore into the Quinte landscape — the majestic silence of winter may be a thing of the past.

Winter will never be as quiet — or as lonely — again.

Licencing Falls Behind

Snowmobile Numbers Here Not Known

Just how many snowmobiles are there in the Quinte district?

Statistically no one knows for sure.

About the only thing that's certain is that snow vehicles are as common as running water — running to a volume that reportedly has flooded local licence bureaus.

Without exception, every issuer of motor vehicle licences in the Quinte district has been left empty-handed by the rush to snowmobiles.

Not once, but several times.

This brought in licence-hunting new owners journeying to other communities in search of plates when local bureaus are sold out.

This also has confused statistics — no issuer can say for sure what licence-holders reside in an area without a painstaking check of each address.

And the way things have been bustling in the wake of the snowmobile boom there just isn't time for that kind of research.

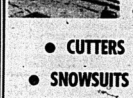
However, a quick check gives some idea of the number of snow vehicles that are swarming Quinte slopes this winter.

George Olsen, Belleville licence issuer, who has repeatedly been sold out of snowmobile plates despite frequent shipments from Queen's Park, has estimated there may be up to 1,800 of the vehicles registered in the city area.

The same kind of sellout story comes from his colleagues around the area this week.

Trenton: A licence official said the bureau had sold out at least three times this year. About 900 plates were issued.

Picton: Until a new shipment arrived this week, plates had been sold out for "I don't know how long," said a clerk. Some 250 licences already have been taken out.



Tweed: Approximately 100 licences sold and "it would have been a lot more if we'd had them," said the issuer.

Stirling: Sold out by Dec. 13, by which time almost 200 licences had been issued.

Madoc: Between 200-300 licences sold in the past year and "I could have sold another 50-100 more," said the issuer.

Bancroft: Some 250 licences purchased since November. The bureau was sold out before Christmas, unable to fill "a lot of requests."

Outdoor Socializing

Winter Sport Creates Snowmobile Clubs

Last week a Sidney township farmer decided it might be sociable if he offered a disused shanty on his back acres as a half - way house for snowmobilers.

A few was lit inside. Later a lantern hung as a welcome sign.

Then a neighbor pinned up a notice suggesting anyone interested in forming a club should rendezvous at the shanty in midweek.

The note, scrawled on brown paper, drew snowmobile owners by the score. So much so the meeting had to repair elsewhere.

The incident was symbolic of what the snowmobile is doing to people.

Suddenly it's scattering hundreds of hitherto lone - sliding Quinte dwellers into the great winter spaces.

But it's also drawing them closer together, thus subtly causing social change.

The change can be seen in the camaderie of cross-country expeditions, moonlight safaris, sporting events.

But it's probably best demonstrated by the growing number of clubs springing up around the Quinte district.

"It's a way of getting to know people. It means more people together, more fun," explains Ray Worrell, a founding member of one of the first snowmobile social clubs in the area.

The Quinte Snowmobile Club was launched in 1967 — when the sport was just hitting a popular stride in the Quinte district.

Now Ray is president of a group that counts 30 families — and he expects its membership maximum of 50 families will be filled soon because of the current phenomenal sales boom.

There are similar organizations in many Quinte communities — Picton, Frankford, Madoc, Marmora, Coe Hill, Bancroft.

In groups they can explore bushland trails, organize weekend safaris broken by campfire fellowship, cook-outs, snow dances.

Such organizations also have a serious community side. A snowmobile he dexcribes as "a machine easily operated by anyone — which makes it a potential danger as well as a great joy." A club, says Ray, is "a bond that keeps people from abusing something that's a good thing."

The rapid increase of snowmobiles — Ray believes there are about 800 machines alone owned by Bellevillians — has also brought some kickback.

Urbanites have rumbled disconcertedly about neighborhood noises. Farmers have been irritated by damaged fences. In several communities councils have debated banning the machines from use within municipal boundaries.

"We would oppose such a bylaw," says Ray.

Restrictions could be restricted to certain areas and even curfew, he adds.

But the club observes what he calls "commonsense and courtesy due to neighbors."

He has knocked on doors to inquire about noise nuisance, he says.

When the club plans a cross-country swing they seek permission of farmers and landowners to prevent irritation.

"There is room for more snowmobile clubs in this area and I'd like to see more," Ray adds.

Main reason for limiting club membership is the fact that too many machines become unmanageable as a mass event.

But the increase in ownership likely will bring on more organizations.

And in that event the club president looks to the day when Quinte snowmobiles may travel the length and breadth of their district, being hosts for each other at special weekend events.

Resorts Find Snowmobiles Winter Plus

Suddenly winter is moving closer to summer in the Quinte district.

It's no weather phenomenon but a shift in economic climate. Enjoying it is an increasing number of resort operators.

Until recently the resort business — a staple of Quinte northern economy — prospered in summer months, the time when local lakelands were flooded with vacationers.

Then came the snowmobile — and with it business began blossoming in the cold of winter.

As yet, indicate some operators, the blossoming is still in the bud.

All the same, they feel there is more to come—much more. In fact, as snowmobiling becomes a way of winter life.

Meantime, its advent has registered an impact on the once warm-weather business.

More resort areas are winterizing, staying open all year round — transforming the pattern of a traditional Quinte trade.

Representative of change are such people as Elizabeth and Geoffrey Lee at Birch Cliff Lodge on Bapiste Lake.

They moved from Toronto last year to take over ownership of Birch Cliff. Now, for the first time in the long operational history the Bancroft area resort will be a 12-month operation.

They insulated the resorts main building and seven of its 14 cabins and hope to stay open every weekend.

Mrs. Lee feels the new era of the snowmobiling weekend may be only beginning.

"Give it three years and it'll be as big as the summer business (for the resorts)," she's convinced.

"I think people have only begun to use snowmobiles and the number will increase every year."

One advantage favoring the sport is the absence of seasonal barriers. Once, winter sports were for the young, vigorous and hardy.

Snowmobiling is a true "people's sport" involving all age groups within a family.

The increase in business also has been noticed by Bud French, former Belleville businessman who quit the city to operate the Red Eagle Tent and Trailer Park at Coe Hill.

Mr. French confirms the snowmobile "definitely" has wrought a change in the business.

"It's not a big increase but a help," is the way he describes it.

Now the Red Eagle remains open on winter weekends while its restaurant has become a rendezvous for local snowmobilers.

Cost is involved in transforming a summer business to year-round operation. Accommodation must be winterized, heated. Snow must be cleared.

"It's not a lucrative business — just at weekends — but it does help," says Mr. French.

However, he admits he might have closed this winter without the extra business brought in by snowmobiles.

Winterized Cottages Next in Line

The lazy days of summer this year should rustle with sounds stirred by the wake of winter's latest and greatest popular sport.

For Quinte district building suppliers it'll be a happy sound, one of the side benefits of the big snowmobile boom.

The reason is this: The sporty little vehicles have made social history, opening the Quinte north as never before. For the first time the family summer cottage has a year - round potential.

This means that hundreds of summer residences built before the boom must now be reinforced against cold weather.

Future cottages increasingly will be winterized.

This means more construction material. Already, some suppliers have noticed the demand.

Although there has been no big comparative spinoff yet from the current snowmobile phenomenon, suppliers are optimistic, an Intelligencer survey shows.

"This thing has only caught hold. Another year will make a great difference," said a spokesman at Rollins Lumber in Foxboro, "More and more people will be wintering."

A business man slap in the middle of cottage country agrees.

"This seems to be the trend," confirms Peter Klein, manager of Bancroft Lumber. "People are definitely looking more to winterizing and getting their cottages fixed up for the winters."

As yet, the demand has not been so noticeable in winter trade, said Mr. Klein. But in summer, when cottages are being built, an increased demand for winterizing materials can be seen — "very much so," he says.

Cottagers are not the only ones winterizing in the resort bushlands, he reports. Operators of holiday lodges and tourist resorts also are participating.

And in the Mazinaw-Shootamatta areas there are reports that some enterprising operators have constructed large buildings as enclosed snowmobile parks.

In Belleville, spokesmen at Arthur A. Sills and Brayen Lumber reported no spectacular upsurge in winterizing customers so far, although they're bound to increase "next summer and the following year."

"I think next summer there'll be a lot of them winterizing their cottages," agreed a Bellewood Lumber employee.

At Chisholm's Mills in Roslin a spokesman confirmed more people were insulating cottages they once used in warm weather and predicted it would "increase by all means."

And at Stirling Lumber one representative of the industry probably had the clue to demand.

Snowmobile purchases were a "fantastic boom."

But next summer, maybe people will spend more on cottage materials.

"This year," he reminded, "they were buying the machines."

ON THE MAP

Television singing star Glen Campbell admits he isn't really from Delight, Ark. "I was born in Billstown," he explains, "but I always say Delight because it's the closest city that's on the map."

New Machine Has Its Use On the Farm

The snow - covered farmlands of the Quinte southern townships provide much of the rural roaming ground for snowmobiles.

But the sporty little machine also could have its uses for the farmer, believes Horace Knight.

Mr. Knight is a veteran Thurlow township farmer. Like many rural residents these days he's also the owner of a snowmobile.

Down on the farm — as in the city — the vehicle's appeal still is almost exclusively recreational.

"But a farmer could do a lot with them if he wanted to — checking fields and fences, cutting wood in the bush . . ." says Mr. Knight.

He's been running his own machine for three winters now. The start of his enthusiasm is a familiar story to many new to the sport.

"At first there used to be just the odd one around here," he recalls. "And the first one or two I saw I wasn't very impressed. But when you're riding one it kind of grows on you."

The Quinte countryside is fairly buzzing these days as the sport grows on more and more people.

Mr. Knight says 50 to 75 snowmobiles pass through the area daily.

The Knight property itself is familiar ground for many local operators — and the farmer lends a helping hand.

In early fall he opens up paths across his property to facilitate the winter sportsmen. Now the Knight trails have been posted by snowmobilers themselves. They've even erected courtesy reminders to follow travellers.

Mr. Knight admits there have been complaints from some Quinte farmers about damage to their properties — particularly fences.

However, he feels snowmobilers often are blamed for damage they haven't done.

"There are more snowmobiles running on this farm than any horseabouts," he says, "and they've never done five cents worth of damage."

"You take anybody who can't afford to go south, why it shortens the winter for them.

"And for the farmer they're really handier than, say, a boat is."

The Knight farm may soon have its own informal drop-in centre. This weekend local snowmobile operators were scheduled to join Mr. Knight in overhauling a disused maple sugar shanty on his farm.

When it is refurbished it will become one of a number of six impromptu hospitality spots springing up around the area as the outdoors echo to the snowmobile boom.

Snowmobile SALES AND ACCESSORIES

Autos, TVs Affected

Winter Sport Creates Boom at Expense of Other Luxuries

Snowmobiles cost money — and this year's phenomenal sales boom is at the expense of other commercial enterprises.

Although there's mixed feeling, a majority of Quinte car dealers seem to suspect it's in their line.

The outlay on first and second snowmobile purchases this winter totals a sizeable sum — whether in ready cash, bank notes or financing arrangements.

A wide range of family luxury possessions could thus be affected — things like color television, some appliance dealers agree.

Businessmen say the impact of the snowmobile phenomenon on other market corners is hard to assess. Retail business generally was up at Christmas.

And it's difficult to conjecture on the customers that might have been.

But if national claims reflect locally, it's the car business that may have been hardest hit.

Statistics show car sales in November - December down about 15 per cent, claims Tweed dealer Ron Way. People, he believes, are holding on to their old cars longer and this has affected the used car business.

"It's common all around," he says.

Mr. Way, who also holds a snowmobile franchise, believes his sales of the snow vehicle gained about 25 per cent this year.

Roy Stevenson, of Stevenson Ford in Belleville, is definite about the snowmobile impact.

Right now it's "the number one enemy of the car business," he says.

Until snowmobile purchasers retire finance payments on their vehicles "it's going to have its effect," he adds.

"I don't think it has dealt a crippling blow, but it is noticable."

By the same token, believes Mr. Stevenson, it also has increased service volume.

People opting for a snowmobile instead of a car are spending more money getting their automobiles in survival shape.

So, as Mr. Steven[illegible] whose business includes a large service operation—puts it: "What happens out front helps us in back."

A spokesman at Trudeau's, another major Belleville dealer, didn't think the snowmobile boom was having much effect.

Purchasers of new cars wouldn't be involved in any such trend, he believed, although it was difficult to estimate its effect on the used-car market.

The company also is one of those dealers with a snowmobile franchise and business in that line is "pretty good."

In fact, the problem, said the representative, has been in meeting demand.

A veteran of 40 years in the business, Harold Wells, of Wells Ford in Stirling, agreed the snowmobile boom must be siphoning money away from other market areas. However, it was difficult to say just where.

"We've had lots of other years that've been worse than this," he added.

At Alde Hans Bell - Ton, Volkswagen dealer, a representative said sales were consistent.

Al Waterson of American Motor Sales, however, said the snowmobile trend could have affected the market by delaying purchases of used and family cars.

"But all I can do is imagine its effect," he added.

Shannonville dealer Delmer Breadman didn't see "much difference" in business from other years.

But at Trenton, long-established dealer Van Lange of Lange and Fetter agreed snowmobile sales must have some bearing on car sales.

"You just can't put that much money into that sport without it being taken from somewhere else.

In the November-December period it "probably affected sales by as much as 10 per cent," said Mr. Lange.

The impact likely would be greater in used and second family cars, he added. But "eventually our sales will catch up again."

However, other businesses also must have been affected, said the dealer.

What other commercial interest may have been cut is not easily determined.

An obvious victim might be a competing winter sport that promises action but calls for some outlay — like skiing.

Yet, at Bell's Sport Shop in Trenton, the operator didn't believe snowmobiling has had that much effect on skiing.

The same belief was repeated at Stephen Licence in Belleville.

And Gordon McGaughey, of the Oak Hills Ski Club, says club membership is up more than in two previous winters. Membership has increased well within estimates.

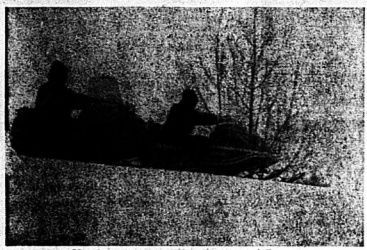
An operator at Quinte Marina in Deseronto doesn't think there'll be a significant difference in trade come summer. The boat business now is fairly consistent, he said, having settled down from similar boom times a decade ago.

(He also has a snowmobile agency — like many Quinte marina operators.)

A Belleville marina operator admits customers have told him they would purchase snowmobile in preference to a boat, but believes they are a minority.

Appliances could have been hit, but again no positive proof was uncovered. Belleville's retail sector expects Christmas trade to have shown about a five per cent increase, in keeping with the national trend.

"It's bound to have its effect. There's no doubt about that," said appliance and furniture dealer Bud Gill, "But I can't say our sales are down.



"It there hadn't been that many snowmobiles sold we may have moved more color televisions. But sales are good."

But color television sales may well have been slowed by the snowmobile splurge, agreed a spokesman at Ireland's Furniture and Appliances.

"Our business otherwise has been good," he added — a theme of the Quinte market place in the peak Christmas shopping period.

There seems general agreement that the snowmobile also is a fact of business life that's here to remain — and will have to be absorbed as such by all other sectors.

As one veteran Quinte businessman put it: "I think it's something that's pretty well here to stay. But I don't think it's going to make that much difference. After all, we thought hippies would only last six months. We're living with them, aren't we"

Off They Go On Hastings Safari

Heartland of Hastings

Has 350 Miles of Runs

The Quinte area offers almost unlimited recreation area for the snowmobiler.

Its wide-ranging bushland is a choice outdoors plot of enormous expanse.

It's also one of the best organized in this part of Ontario. Thanks to initiative and co-operation snowmobiling despite its free and easy style is not the haphazard affair it might appear in the heartland of Hastings County.

In that region, snowmobilers can range along 350 miles of trails well-marked for guidance.

The project was initiated by Highlands of Hastings Tourist Region.

It was designed for nine townships stretching north from Highway 7 — Marmora, Madoc, Elzevir, Lake, Tudor, Grimsthorpe, Wollaston, Limerick and Cashel.

The project has the blessing of township councils, says tourist region manager George Ellsworth.

But carrying it to reality was something else again.

Fortunately, local snowmobilers readily responded to the idea.

Snowmobile clubs in township communities — like Coe Hill, Gilmour, Marmora, Madoc — enthusiastically co-operated in the trail blazing.

"It's the only way the scheme could have been completed," said Mr. Ellsworth.

The system used is simple. Trail routes are denoted by trees with two different colors of paint.

If you're going north-south or vice-versa — you follow the red blaze. Yellow denotes east-west trails.

But blazing is only half the project.

The tourist association has published a folder containing a detailed map of all nine townships, complete with the trails printed in their respective colors.

Equipped with the map, following the blaze marks a snowmobile is assured keeping his direction in the lonely bushland predominating the region's geography.

"The response to this map has been terrific," says Mr. Ellsworth.

The area now is one of the "better-marked" snowmobile zones in the district, he says. He's hopeful other areas may follow suit.

Commercial Mushroom

Snowmobile Boom Took 8 Years

The snowmobile wasn't born yesterday.

Its evolution was a lengthy process, patterned locally after the success story of its Quebec inventor and first manufacturer, Bombardier of Quebec.

Bellevillian Tom Jury claims the honor of being the first local businessman to participate in the evolution.

Bombardier gave the snow vehicle its first popular identity. For years, until competitors entered the field, the snowmobile had only one familiar name—the Bombardier trade tag skidoo.

For Tom the current snowmobile boom reaches back to 1960 and a caller at his marina.

"It was about late October and a miserable kind of a day and this fellow drove up with this contraption on a trailer. He said it was a skidoo and we said: "What's a skidoo?" "

The traveller showed a movie of the machine in action. Nonetheless, says Tom, he stayed until 8 p.m. that night "trying to convince us that this was something."

That first snowmobile — he liened the first commercially-offered snowmobile is the Belleville area, was equipped with wooden skis, powered by a seven horsepower motor. It sold to a local businessman.

For the first two or three years other machines went to commercial fishermen and trappers.

Then in 1965-66 the snowmobile suddenly started looking like big business.

From then it's been a commercial mushroom with many makes of machines on the market.

"I think eventually it won't be that much of a boom," says Tom, "but it's high time something like this did come along. It's revolutionized winter sport.

"And it's opened up the north country. We've more people come in here telling us they're going north to spend Christmas at their cottage and stay over New Year's."

Among reasons for the boom, believes the dealer, is the fact some parents are being forced to snowmobile by their children.

Of course the causes, like other snowmobile dealers, he is "happy with the (present) demand."

"Now we find we're as busy in the winter as in the summer — so we have to enlarge our premises.

The marina-snowmobile outlet eventually will be moved further south on South Front Street.

Dealers likely will require additional space, he believes, in time to come.

"Eventually," he says, "I can see where the snowmobile dealer is going to have to set up a used vehicle lot."
